Also,
>YOU WILL SEE NEXT YEAR I AM RIGHT
This thread won't be here next year so I will tell you now - the stuff you've learned/say is maybe just a tiny bit of truth mixed with a whole lot of bullshit. Some unique things may happen but if they do, they won't happen like you say it, they won't happen because of what you've said (some of that alien lore stuff is bullshit, I'd think twice about getting on any "Federation" ships) and will either be of lesser effect or far worse than what you imagine (even in the scenario you describe, there's no way a disruption on that scale would kill only 60% of population - it'd be more, even if many dying not in immediate attack but days that follow).

Read more on theories regarding aliens having occult/spiritual/extradimensional origins. It's not just "angels" and "demons" either. There are many entities and groups out there.

WHAT WILL YOU DO WHEN IT HAPPENS JUST LIKE SAID LOL GOOD LUCK ANYWAYS
>A- MJ12 won't ever exceed 60% they have the tech to protect the rest cuz more than 60% like 65% or 70% that would be counted as deliberate genocide by the GFL and according to the rule on it that they have that's the only other time the will interfere to stop a civilization from destroying themselves so nah bro i'm sorry but u r wrong on this one
>B- MJ12 already encounter and classified these so called "occult/spiritual/extradimensional" as paraterrestrials that don't come from space like ET's but from other dimensions the can't handle being exposed to arabic/latin/ancient hebrew/aramaic and more that's why my people always exorcise these so called jinns by speaking in arabic and chanting and your people do that in latin and it works in both culture it's either one works and the other fails or both don't but if both do that means either islam and christianty are true which doesn't make sense or the true answer that MJ12 already figured it in 80s

>if you want proof try using these languages on someone who has been possessed and it'll work every single time with every other language listed above and that proves me right again

The image is a black and white photograph with a text-based content. The text appears to be a narrative or a story, and it is written in a mix of English and what seems to be a non-Latin script. The text is dense and filled with complex ideas and concepts, suggesting a philosophical or scientific discussion.

The text is divided into paragraphs, and the first paragraph begins with "The Sun was expanding and spewing off huge exo-planets." This sets the stage for the narrative, indicating a discussion about celestial phenomena. The second paragraph continues with "more than it has ever done in its past, and the Sun's mass was growing." This part of the text seems to be describing a phenomenon or event related to the Sun's expansion and mass.
The third paragraph discusses the Sun's expansion and its impact on the Earth, mentioning "the Earth's rotation speed was slowing down," and "the Sun's mass was growing." This part of the text seems to be discussing the effects of the Sun's expansion on Earth's rotation and its mass.
The fourth paragraph continues with "the Sun's mass was growing, and the Earth's rotation speed was slowing down." This part of the text seems to be describing the progression of the Sun's expansion and its effects on Earth's rotation.
The fifth paragraph continues with "the Sun's mass was growing, and the Earth's rotation speed was slowing down." This part of the text seems to be describing the progression of the Sun's expansion and its effects on Earth's rotation.

cool story

Galactic federation has been controlling earth for while now.
There is no love and light in galactic federation. The aliens in control of gf are emotionless and have no empathy. They claim prime directive but have been breaking their own law and denying it.

Their organisation is total bogus.
They are working together with earth cabal and control everything. They deny it but have bases in antarctica where they regularly meet with earth leaders.

Valiant thor was a traitor from taygeta.

Galactic federation have their agenda but there are positive races that see through their lies and have made their own alliances.

Earth cabal has been trying to invade other galaxies and planets with the help of galactic federation but havent succeeded. Earth is the core of the problem of many alien races.

It is not accidental that the Queen of Taygeta and King of Feline Urmah race are both with their spaceships on earth orbit.
They are close to the problem.

Galactic federation is no match for The Urmah and are scared of the cosmic cats.

Nothing bad will happen.

The image is a still from a video, featuring a character from the animated series "He-Man and the Masters of the Universe." The character is a muscular man with a blue and purple costume, wearing a hooded cloak and a skull-like helmet. He is pointing to the left with his right hand, and his left hand is extended outward. The character's expression is serious, and he is looking directly at the viewer.
Overlaying the image is a text that reads, "Joke's on you I'm into that shit." The text is in white and is placed at the bottom of the image, just below the character's outstretched hand. The style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a humorous meme, with the text adding a humorous element to the image. The overall tone of the image is serious and serious-minded, with the humorous text providing a contrast.

I’m honestly excited. Like the guy in the vid says, I don’t believe in death, so I’m not upset about the mass killings. It’s going to be like the whole of humanity collectively letting out all the pain that’s slowly been pent up over hundreds of years so we can finally move on and move up.
This is the way I see it.
It was always the two guys at school who got into real dirty fist fights who ended up the closest friends. It’s an intimate ordeal. After that what have they got to hide from each other? They already kicked each other’s ass.
Nowadays society is so sterile. Like an ssri, you get rid of the lows and the highs are numbed as well. We need to get the lows out of the way.

Yeah but i think there really is a big giant war coming and these people are a bit more sensitive to the waves of impending doom all over the astral plane or whatever. I know it's coming because of strategic moves made by governments preparing for war. It doesn't have to be an alien invasion to kill 60% of the human race either, a nuclear war will do it, although most people will die of starvation or violence in the aftermath, not from the bombs. South America should be a pretty good place to survive.

"Sint míhi déi Acherónti propítii!"
To Our Great Witch
A Pioneer in the Realms of the Esoteric and the Occult
The Old Adage one cannot help but to remember now and then, goes like this:
Don't Fuck with a Witch!
Tracy R. Twyman Estate, in spirit, dedicates this lawsuit which was brought against Sean Bryan Alger, to the disabled individual whom he belittled and mocked 'laughing' at their unfortunate situation and lot, and betrayed their trust; the "devout Muslim" as S.B. Alger would describe this person

Be it a "devout Muslim", be it a 'devout Christian', be it a 'devout Jew', or a 'devout Atheist'; be it black, or be it white; be it a man, or a woman; be it the Human, whose Light is but a nobler extension of the Divinity and the Divine

The noble among all, with their 'devotion' to what they are "I Am that I Am", to what they believe in, as they believe in themselves and trust that they shall achieve, rather, receive and given what they devote their own life to and seek

All point to the One

Something which is far beyond the comprehension of the Fatherless Bastard, Sean Bryan Alger, and all those alike, who do Hate and act on Hate and who do spread darkness within their soul

After all, the Godless Bastard must understand this:

Nothing goes Unnoticed

"He that loveth not knoweth not God"
Sounds familiar?

Either one Knows, or Knows not

The One remains, the many change and pass;
Heaven's light forever shines, Earth's shadows fly;
Life, like a dome of many-colour'd glass,
Stains the white radiance of Eternity,
Until Death tramples it to fragments.—Die,
If thou wouldst be with that which thou dost seek!
Follow where all is fled!—Rome's azure sky,
Flowers, ruins, statues, music, words, are weak
The glory they transfuse with fitting truth to speak.

From Adonais,
Bysshe Shelley

What a piece of work is a man! how noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form and moving how express and admirable! in action how like an angel! in apprehension how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals!

From Hamlet,
Act II, Scene II

بَرَاءَةٌ مِنَ اللَّهِ وَرَسُولِهِ

It is the duty of Tracy R. Twyman's Estate, it is the duty of Tracy Twyman's Husband, it is the duty of Tracy's Widower to assure that late Tracy Twyman's is not taken advantage of while dead, as the visionary Tracy was taken advantage of while living by many misogynists filth and low mind Cowards
A bastard shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD; even to his tenth generation shall he not enter into the congregation of the LORD.
Deuteronomy 23:2
يُعَذِّبْهُمُ اللَّهُ بِأَيْدِيكُمْ وَيُخْزِهِمْ وَيَنصُرْكُمْ عَلَيْهِمْ

The Fatherless Bastard, the Son of Trailers Whore Owes Tracy R. Twyman's Husband $1.2 Million

S. B. Alger will pay his dues to Tracy R. Twyman's Husband in Submission and Obedience, (and with a smile), in accordance to the Law, and according to the civil courts that sacrificed him

The Bastard swallowed the bait; as well, delivered the message unto the right hand, as he was supposed to Lack of foresight, the inability to foretell where this is heading to, and who are addressed now and then; misplacing the motives and narrowing them down to match one's own; all of these do contribute to an unseen and undetected confusion even when the decisions that are taken look and seem as a perfect execution and a fit reaction; not seeing the depth of this, the era or two and what overlaps, how far it extends and encompasses; all of these, and many other essential subtleties do have a great benefit and offer a greate advantage: the effect is the cause, nor what one comprehend and see is real -- nothing is real, all is possible, all is allowed

This is not a nation of laws nor rights nor integrity, as shamelessly promoted endlessly and universally; everyone is seeing this by now

The amount and quality of Hate one does experience from the 'community', from every walk of life -- at every interaction, the betrayal, could only attest that tyrannies are having it easy, and shall reign for another thousand years -yet, they won't

What is done to the other, is done to oneself, and to everyone

“no justice, no peace”

The bastard, the rotten fruit of whoredom, Sean Bryan Alger allowed others to utilize him and his girlfriend as dispensable tools, as chess-game pawns for an agenda that is much beyond his role and capability of his intelligence

The bastard allowed it, spread himself wide open for it to get where it needs to get to and in, clenching to this injected seed, nurturing it within, fermenting the seeds of his master intimately deep inside of him, with a sense of an accomplishment and delight, while the cost of its growth is hijacking the bastard's life and future; and like a disease of the mind and body to spread further and infect others of the same type and of the same hatred

For he will lower himself to any filth just to be given attention, like a typical and severe attention whore

Boise's Bastard, the Psychopath, had involved many others with his fraud and illegal activities, in hopes, in dearest hopes that the hammer won't fall on him solely, and the others would share his lot, and things get lost

A Bastard that behaves like one

Thus the Lord Hath Rejected Bastards Eternally
A bastard shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD; even to his tenth generation shall he not enter into the congregation of the LORD.

Deuteronomy 23:2

Welcome to Hell. For where Elysium lies? Is it not in the full midst of Hades?

From their activities and of what moves them, indeed, they do all find Hell as a wonderful place, too attached to Hell and its pleasurable torments; like gnats, which find the flesh of the unburied dead as sweetmeat, a feast not to miss, a symposium of the morbid and of the which of the decaying; thus they continue their tract in disarray, serving the other, obedient to their masters as servants, and paying a price for it

"Envy and calumny and hate and pain,
And that unrest which men miscall delight,"

"For I confound hell in Elysium"
From Marlowe's
The Tragical History of Doctor Faustus

One does not expect from a Religious Fanatic, an uneducated trash, a despised filth, to have a soul which can imagine truths, or to create truths or a God:

"Where deep thoughts are a duty,
Where Love’s a grown-up God,"

If the Bigot Bastard who was conceived through whoredom, truly believed in a so called "God", or God©, or God®, or God™, or God vs God, or poƊ, or boƏ, or God, or God, -- Prithee.. surely not 'le Gode Supérieur'-- then he, the bastard, should ask God why He, that is God, fucks up by creating other people that are different from him, that is, they look different, or that why he, which is the bastard, is different from the others which He, ie God, hath created, and horribly?

We are all aware, or made aware of, that the Bastard is buddies with God, thus, the bastard is previliged to question and inquire with God about God

--The bastard might as well, in an intimate moment, a very intimate moment within a very private 'session', ask God why was he, that is the bastard, born and birthed out of a whore, and a trailers park whore--

--Since the bastard has an addiction problem with social-media platforms, always chattering onboard, sharing many information with the public, and whoring himself for attention from everyone, the moment the bastard 'hears' God, that is God, answering him back, that is the bastard, in regard his inquiries, everyone will know then why was the bastard born of a whore, and a trailers park whore--

The idiot Bastard then should advise God and instruct Him, that is God, to take permission from him, the Bastard, when He, which is God, creates something else or new thus not to create something that the bastard, even though he sans taste, finds not suitable to his likening

The Bastard should be questioning God for His fuck-ups and bad taste in His craft and art of Creation

Perhaps the Bastard can teach 'God' how to create better things and not to fuck up again

When the Bastard starts feeding and housing himself by himself, being independent, obtaining a "full-time" job, instead of leeching on a hard working Widow and her children, and stealing from Tracy R. Twyman's Estate, and stealing from the dead Tracy R. Twyman, then the Bastard might have a right, within himself, to speak some nonsense and rubbish pretending to be of some worthy mind

The Bastard is not a man; he picks on vulnerable women and immobile disabled individuals, like the coward he is

The resentful bastard lacks the sense of humanity, ie, being inhumane. The abuse and the malice that the trailers bastard had directed against the dead Tracy R. Twyman, and Tracy R. Twyman's widower are of a low mind which knows no God nor humanity, knows nothing from nothing

S.B. Alger is an illegitimate since birth. The Bastard is illegitimate at everything. The day Tracy R. Twyman departed from this world, the thief, and without hesitation, stole Tracy's Fans Mailing List, her address book, and emailed Tracy's Fans pretending to be in charge of Tracy's Estate in hopes to hijack anything that is Tracy Twyman

There was no permission requested from the bastard nor any were granted for the bastard to utilize Tracy Twyman's business address book

The Bastard was on a mission to Cancel and Eliminate everything of Tracy Twyman and what she devoted her life to; emailing Tracy's fans on regular basis, with illegitimate statements and detailing other future plans in regard Tracy's work as if he were the legal heir to Tracy Twyman and being her husband

This requires, as he sees it, canceling Tracy R. Twyman's husband thus to continue to make believe in his sick mind that he is Tracy Twyman's husband and heir

A mentally ill bastard

The son of a whore emailed all Tracy Twyman's fans and declared his plans to republish Tracy R. Twyman work on his own, just like this, like he owns Tracy's writings; This and soliciting 'help' from Tracy's Fans to accomplish such a task, jeopardizing others by inviting them to join and contribute to his illegal endeavor

In a span of two years after Tracy R. Twyman's death, the sick Bastard Sean Bryan Alger hashtagged #TracyTwyman at Twitter 6 Thousand times

The mentally ill Bastard pretends to be an authority in regard to Tracy R. Twyman's image and work, while utilizing the deceased author's name to spread hateful, antisemitism themed agendas and propagate misinformation against Jews in relation to Tracy Twyman's death. This all comes from his girlfriend's house, who is aware of his illegal activities (as she was also sued), who is also an employee of the US federal government

All of this, to bring attention to his replusive face, as if the world owes him some deserved attention

Some of the subjects he hash-tagged were of Religious Fanaticism themes and other rubbish of the same while pretending to be some sort of a theologian

The bastard is a religious fanatic who is obsessing on whom is considered a 'satanist author'. He tries to 'spread the Word' of the 'Devil' to low evolved souls as his, as he is posessed by low mind demons

The bastard cannot handle the slightest exposure to the "occult", thus religions were set and did command 'not to get involved' in no business of their lot

Observe how the bastard further propogates more of his nonsense as he gets fucked by the courts. The demons that do posses him do want the more of the failure that Sean

Bryan does expreince; more of that, which have caused a harsh misery to betake him, as well being indebted 'forever' to Tracy R. Twyman's Husband, and more, losing his already shallow path in life

All of this, the attempt to destroy 23 years of Tracy's work and achievements, were for a pettiness of obtaining 'a thousand members' on one of his social media accounts. Also, compulsively to satisfy his Religious Fanaticism and promote the same utilizing the occult author name, Tracy R. Twyman

.. and being an Attention Whore

He got Fucked for doing so

.. as well, having addiction problems. serious addiction problem

This, addiction problem, had cost the bastard his wife and two daughters, losing them and never allowed to contact his daughters

Robotic Alyssia Anna Taylor controlled by the bastard
Obviously she lost her sense of herself

Abused by S.B. Alger, as her sense of 'dignity' as a woman and a mother was obliterated by the bastard

When Tracy Twyman's Estate protested the Bastard's malice and nefarious activities against what rightfully belongs to the Estate, and what was done against his late wife, the son of Cheap Trailers Whore and fuck went on a frenzy spreading misinformation against Tracy R. Twyman's Husband and Widower, initiating a massive organized front for acts of Piracy and Gangstalking

The low life Fatherless Bastard whom almost was aborted for being a despised outcome of early age unbridled whoredom, attempts to appeal to like-minded idiots, that is, other religious fanatics racists heavily inbred fucks, by pretending to be a victim who is persecuted due to his beliefs and religion by the heathen, Tracy's husband

Discord Server, S.B. Alger: "No, I think he's just mentally ill and demon-possessed personally."

As well, the Fatherless Bastard was instigating Skinheads and Neo-Nazi associates to send extremely vile, hateful and racist personal messages and threats to Tracy R. Twyman's Widower where S.B. Alger did give them Tracy's Husband contact information to do so: These actions are what to be classified as 'Hate Crimes'

Due to his motives for his malice, which is Hate, the bastard --as he lacks any sense of manhood, nor fathoms what is it to be a man since he is fatherless-- goes around multiple social media platforms spreading dark rumors against Tracy R. Twyman's husband, preparing other hateful individuals within the same group to 'hate' on Tracy R. Twyman's widower: Tracy's husband now and then receives hateful messages due to S.B. Alger, the bastard, efforts at malice

This comes from Alicia Anna Taylor household, who is on the Pentagon's payroll, the initiation of activities targeting a member of multiple minority groups with Hate crimes

This continues until this day

The Bastard S.B. Alger hates Semites. The bastard hates both Jews and hates Arabs as he broadcast his hatred in public, this is because Sean Bryan Alger, a Bastard, hates God

The Bastard is a God Hater. For the bastard is a Satanist Antisemite, a Necrophiliac Antisemite who harbors ill will against The God of the Semites, the God of Abraham, and the children of Abraham

One of the many reasons for the bastard to Hate God is that God spoke no English. For God had only proven his eloquence within the Semitic languages and letters, but not English, nor American English

The God Hater S.B. Alger thinks of God of the Semites as being a Foreigner, a Foreign Entity, a Semetic Mesopotamian and Iraqi God, from Ur, sourthern Iraq, which doubles the bastard's Hatred towards God

This will be a matter for the FBI to investigate, a case to be brought against many actors who are until this day continuing their thievery and their campaign of disinformation, to promote antisemitism

Of course, this is mixed with other offensive matters as such the absolute trash talk of the Religious Fanatic's religious themes; rubbish and other nonsense of the imbecile and those who do lack intelligence at every level; and relating such nonsense to Tracy Twyman who is at core and throughout her life, an antithesis to this repulsive and base nonsense of the lunatic

This, is to further his Master's agenda in regard 'Satanism and the Elites and the Jews', as such task was handed down to both: a Classic expression of Antisemitism

Like a surrogate mother who is impregnated by a foreign seed and blood, foreign to her will, the bastard is impregnated with concepts that he is nurturing out of his own, which are as foreign as they can be to his self and life style: very of a typical religious fanatic, the brainless, the born brainless

To be sued $1.2 million, for one to be sued at this capacity, he must be involved in something nasty, very nasty; at least from a metaphysical perspective

The Bastard of Boise was satisfying his Master's agenda for the love of Attention and for being a humiliated total Attention Whore

The worthless Bastard thought he was becoming a popular figure, progressing to be a public figure in status, a representative of the posthumous Tracy R. Twyman, as his master encouraged him to further interfere in Tracy Twyman's Estate's business with "sock puppets" who do thank him a million, and admire his 'bravery' for posting much on social media about Tracy Twyman, and for his attacks against Tracy Twyman's husband

The Bastard is fucked in the head, that is, he believed himself to be something of worth. These "sock puppets" were ran by one or two individuals who sacrificed him as well, that is, was tossed away like an old shoe

The psychopath Bastard thinks he is something special, God's gift to the human race. That he has some indispensable talent which mankind cannot be complete without. In fact, the bastard thinks that "God" speaks to him, because he is special and different from the others, a miracle bastard, thus he thinks of himself as being a delegate of God and a theologian of his time

Discord Server: I'm relectant to relay what I know about Tracy and God...

One could only hope -and in good faith and in good spirit- that God had absolutely no interest in sharing his sex toys and kink

Discord Server: like the holy ghost was yelling at me...

This is how FUCKED in the head is the Bastard

A Bastard and an idiot, no surprise he managed to get himself in trouble, serious trouble

..and quoting the Scripture here and there, pretending to be a non-whorish docile grazing sheep, an innocent looking and sounding sheep, a sheep that is only minding its own business, grazing obliviously under the Heavens, rather, a victim whom is 'targeted' by Tracy R. Twyman's Estate for nothing

Surely he is, the man who is dominating what was once his household, as well his ex-Wife, the "crazy bitch", laughing at Sean Bryan Alger, as both are in what was his bed at one time

S. B. Alger is a Failure. He lost his family, lost his wife, lost his two daughters; and now, he lost his money, future money and assets including future inheritance, and lost any of the prospects of marriage to the self-disrespecting needy girlfriend, the "Fiancé"

Alicia Anna Taylor & Gluttony

"chubby" and "traditional"
Fat and smelly, and a Religious Fanatic perhaps as the bastard tries to portray his girlfriend to justify his obession with Tracy R. Twyman?
In speculation of this proverb, and to give everything its deserved measure, and in consideration of the understanding of human nature of times before-- this line is addressed to 'man'. For a woman creates life into the corporal which necessitates a 'belly' that would 'want'. What triggers such 'want' within or wihtout the occasion thus would be originating from such cravings rather than the described 'gluttony'

Are these the main reasons for Alicia Anna Taylor which compells her to allow her boyfriend to drool on another man's dead wife publicly even when it is pointed out to the Bastard in public such is an unacceptable behavior?

Gluttony?

Does Alicia suffer from the consequences of the Sin of Gluttony?

The 'Camp' never worked out for her? Still suffering from the effects of Gluttony, physical and psychological?

Lack of self confidence?

She's OK with the Bastard's obsession with another man's wife? to a degree of ruining one's own life?

She has no 'say' in this?

Alicia pays the mortage, not S.B. Alger, she must have a say in this, she must

The usual of the ill-begotten Bastard, it is someone else to blame for the situation he is in

Since S. B. Alger is a Fatherless Bastard, no male figure initiated him into one of the fundamental passages unto Manhood, and being a Man: Taking responsibility of one's own Action and Decision; taking Ownership of oneself

Who is to blame this time? God? The chattering spirit issuing commands audible only to him? Nurse Alicia Anna Taylor, his girlfriend? ..to blame for this major burden that fell on him?

Indeed, the cheap trailers fuck will blame Alicia this time: For she had not paid nor 'lent' S.B. Alger the money to pay for a lawyer on the first round..

Alicia stood up for herself, for once

Moments of sanity, a phase of clarity, priorities rearranged, which were short lived, Alicia ejected the Bastard out of her house, sending him back to Walla Walla, protecting her self and her family from his creepy fuck ups

Why does not Alicia see that S.B. Alger is deprived from his own two daughters by law for a valid reason? Why would she admit such toxic psycopath back into her house, leeching on her and her family?

How would Ryan feel about it?

Alicia did not pay for a lawyer to clean up after the bastard's own mess and for the results of his obsession with a dead married woman..

What will Alicia tell her sister, family, friends, neighbors, co-workers, church members in regard Sean Bryan Alger? Would she tell them that her "boyfriend" had been sued $1.2 million by a "crazy Arab" because her creepy boyfriend was obsessing over his dead wife publicly and making a scene of it? This.. while disregarding Alicia, humiliating her publicly?

How would she tackle this degradation without having her family looking down on her, that she is allowing her creepy and mentally ill boyfriend tread all over her, and without a sense of shame, provoking the "crazy Arab" by being indecent and repulsive towards his dead wife's memory?

The Irony or the worst of it is this deceased author is an author of 'Statnist' books, or the least, of the "occult". What Alicia thinks of this? Both of them claim to be 'religious' and etc, yet she allows her boyfriend to be invovled in a 'satainist' world and work, and the world of the 'satanist's' husband who they think of as a "niqqa" and a heathen; a brute; indeed a brute and wild

It is already backfiring. They, the bastard and his "chubby" abused (i.e. "traditional") girlfriend, thought that tickling the devil's balls is a matter that can be taken lightly

Balls of Hot Steel which burns those who touch these Red Balls with their finger tips feeling them or hold these Hot Balls with their palm

Did not God advise, and command them not to be involved with Witchcraft nor Witches?

Are they both deaf to God's Commandments?

They Listen not to God?

Why not Repent from this 'occult' business?

In summa, Alicia Lee Taylor had betrayed the Bastard Sean Bryan Alger and let him down, forsaken him and his fate unto the hands of the "crazy Arab" husband:

It is Alicia fault that Sean Bryan Alger has to pay $1.2 Million for this thievery (Thou Shalt not Steal.. rings a bell?).. he is a victim, it is not his fault.. not at all.. a victim.. a 'targeted individual'.. it is the "crazy Arab" who is the bad guy, may be it is his fault.. the Bastard is a good guy and a poor victim...

A disgusting and predictable hypocrite and Religious Fanatic. What brought him to this then?

The hypocrite preaches about God while being actively deprived and lacking any knowledge of theology and the spiritual

Such is very the obvious from the Bastard's behavior which resembles nothing but Ignorance

Should he not think of God instead, and not of the dark side? Should he think not of God instead of obsessing on Tracy's husband wife, even while being dead? Nor the idiot was cut to tread the path of the infernal; look where is the idiot at now

Yet, while whoring God around high and low, the Narcissist Psychopath acts like a sick person as he is abusing Disabled Individuals, who came to him seeking a service as the bastard was entrusted to perform such a service; and then goes online writes about it like it is an achievement to brag about

Because the other person, the disabled individual and human being, a human with emotions and needs and above all with Dignity like everyone else was a "Muslim"

This extends, the Bastard's Hateful malice, towards and against Tracy R. Twyman's Husband and Widower

A degenerate, lowest of the low, base of a person never have been witnessed before, a coward and inhumane filth and trash

His upbringing in Trailers and being fatherless, had rendered him oblivious to what is it to respect his own private life and of the others. An upbringing which taught him not the importance of 'self respect', as he lacks any sense of himself

One cannot move like this in life without crossing the wrong person. And S.B. Alger did

To the many, it is a 'turn on' to see a supreme Idiot fucking up himself

Indeed, it is a turn on to see the vanquished in the act of being subdued in utter humiliation and succumbing to a lower and a degraded status in life

For "God is Good", as well is the show..

For how many of an idiot does the reader know, those who do fuck up themselves by owing $1.2 Million for Nothing?

Who said: Two vast and trunkless legs of stone
Stand in the desart. Near them, on the sand,
Half sunk, a shattered visage lies, whose frown,
And wrinkled lip, and sneer of cold command,
Tell that its sculptor well those passions read
Which yet survive, stamped on these lifeless things,
The hand that mocked them and the heart that fed:
And on the pedestal these words appear:
"My name is Ozymandias, King of Kings:
Look on my works, ye Mighty, and despair!"
No thing beside remains. Round the decay
Of that colossal wreck, boundless and bare
The lone and level sands stretch far away.

But the eternal world
Contains at once the evil and the cure.
Some eminent in virtue shall start up,

Even in perversest time;
The truths of their pure lips, that never die,
Shall bind the scorpion falsehood with a wreath
Of ever-living flame,
Until the monster sting itself to death.

United States Holocaust Memorial Museum The Simon-Skjodt Center for the Prevention of Genocide
The US Holocaust Memorial Museum teaches that the Holocaust was preventable and that by heeding warning signs and taking early action, individuals and governments can save lives. With this knowledge, the Simon-Skjodt Center for the Prevention of Genocide works to do for the victims of genocide today what the world failed to do for the Jews of Europe in the 1930s and 1940s.
More on Genocide Prevention
Learn About Genocide and Mass Atrocities
What is Genocide?
The legal term “genocide” refers to certain acts committed with the intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnic, racial, or religious group. Genocide is an international crime, according to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (1948). The acts that constitute genocide fall into five categories:

• Killing members of the group

• Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group

• Deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction, in whole or in part

• Imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group

• Forcibly transferring children of the group to another group

Although the term “genocide” is often used, its commission is rare when compared to other serious crimes that are not defined by an intent to destroy a targeted group, such as crimes against humanity and war crimes.

The Son of a Whore is Not Fully Cognizant of What had just Happened to Him
It will sink in, as he is exhausted from his maniacal frenzy
Nor Sean Bryan Alger was able to keep an intact Family of his own, as another man reigns in his place, on once what was his family, instead of him; and here, he intrudes in others life and gives himself the right to do so as he is assuming moral grounds for his motives.

This, while the state and courts are protecting his ex-wife and two daughters from his harm and malice.
S.B. Alger is loathed and shunned by his own family that he had once and there is a reason for so.

It would had made more sense, had S. B. Alger focused on his own affairs and his dysfunctional life, lost family, perhaps to regain his wife and daughters once again; on his own 'belief system' and life after death; and not to interfere in others' life (nor others' 'life after death').

Rather, he made his situation much worse on himself with his own hands.
Of course, he is a 'victim', and it is someone else to blame: be it his "crazy bitch" "literary insane" and "on drugs" ex-wife, be it the 'Jews' and their 'babies eating' habits, or be it late Tracy R. Twyman's "mentally ill" "demon-possessed" "crazy Arab" husband who is 'targeting' him for 'remembering Tracy and keeping her memory alive'.. it is never himself that had caused any of the miseries he is in..
Instead of Leeching on Widows and Dead Women, It would be better for S.B. Alger to get a real Full Time Job. This will help him to stay out of trouble and committing the Illegal:

Sean Bryan Alger suffers from what it seems an Identity Crisis, where he believes and fancies that he is Tracy R. Twyman's Husband, and that he is her Estate.

As well, he fancies that he is and in a mysterious way (perhaps 'God told him so') has rights and copyrights on the late Tracy R. Twyman.

Of course, his girlfriend allows this and 'supports' his mental illness and other unforgiving deficiencies, demonstrating that she has no pride in herself as a Woman nor as a Mother, nor as a federal government employee.

From director Dan Partland and producer Rob Reiner, GOD & COUNTRY looks at the implications of Christian Nationalism and how it distorts not only our constitutional republic, but Christianity itself.

Featuring prominent Christian thought leaders, GOD & COUNTRY asks this question: What happens when a faith built on love, sacrifice, and forgiveness grows political tentacles, conflating power, money, and belief into hyper-nationalism?

Trivia

Tracy R. Twyman was an 'extreme' prodigy and a prolific writer with a writing career spanning for 23 years (1996-2019).

At the very moment, Tracy Twyman's Estate could publish 15 more books in addition to the ones that have been already published posthumously. These writings consist of fiction and non fiction books, and other collections of essays and articles.

Due to legal endeavours, and other tasking efforts at damage control against fraudulent and harmful activities committed by 'Religious Fanatics' in regards to Tracy's posthumous presence and work, the publications of these materials will take a while to materialize.

A possibility is that the unpublished work won't be published in our lifetime, thus to assure the future of Tracy Twyman's posthumous presence (against damaging groups).

Did Tracy R. Twyman have a 'pact with the devil'? Yes, she had a pact that was signed with her sigil, rather with Baphomet at her age of 17 years old. The pact was located and read after Tracy Twyman's death by another witch and Seer.

It is not the appropriate time to publish the wordings of Tracy's pact with Baphomet currently. Many are already suffering under the yoke of minion demons that Tracy had unleashed throughout the years and who are full of antics as their mistress had departed.

To be specific, the religious fanatics are being the most susceptible to these infernal influences.

The pact itself is a powerful relic of Tracy R. Twyman.

Tracy Twyman did mention before to her husband that Baphomet had chosen her as his ambassador to the world.

Tracy Twyman published 13 books when she was alive.

8 of these books are her signature books, and independent from her other work, excluding The Arcadian Mystique, which was a collective of the best of Dagobert's Revenge Magazine articles and essays.

5 of these published books are essays.

4 of the 5 essay books came from her Dagobert's Revenge Magazine. While Hocus Pocus was written in reaction to a book 'theft' that she experienced, by reducing the size of the stolen book into the named essay.

A List of These Books:

- The Merovingian Mythos: and The Mystery of Rennes-le-Chateau

- The Arcadian Mystique: The Best of Dagobert's Revenge Magazine
- Dead but Dreaming
- The Cutting of The Orm
- The Judas Goat
- The Choice Vine
- Solomon's Treasure: The Magic and Mystery of America's Money
- Money Grows on The Tree of Knowledge
- Mind-Controlled Sex Slaves and the CIA
- Hocus Pocus
- Clock Shavings
- Baphomet: The Temple Mystery Unveiled
- Genuflect

For the other major 4 books that were published posthumously, Tracy left a note about her plans to publish them:

Genuflect was written after Tracy's husband suggested to her that she might try writing a fiction work, a novel or a 'novelette', even though Tracy never published a fiction work before; by invoking the idea that she was the reincarnate of Mary Shelley, the wife of the Romantic Poet, Percy Bysshe Shelley.

Yes, you could use a dead body," I answered. "Or just parts of one. Or you could stitch together parts of a dead body and animate then, like Dr. Frankenstein's monster.
From Genuflect Chapter 17

Tracy's Baphomet books were written while she was married to her second husband. Tracy's focus was more concentrated on writing and producing books in that time period. Some of these books began as long and elaborate essays.

- Clocks Shavings
- Baphomet: The Temple Mystery Unveiled
- Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum

Other non Baphomet themed books (even though the subjects of these books is not directly about Baphomet, the first two books rotates around Baphomet's saga):

- Genuflect
- Secret Statutes of The Templars
- The Secret of Minnie's Mousse
- Fake N.E.W.S.: Unboxing The Compass

Do note that Tracy Twyman's last completed work when she was alive was her magnum opus work on Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum. Heavy 'Circumstances' had prevented her from publishing the work. Infact, the work was almost lost. Observe the irony below, where these lines were the last paragraph in her Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum book:

"…I think the curse on Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum was intended to prevent anybody from getting as far as I have with making sense of this particular text, and from publishing it. If you are reading this, then that means the curse has failed, and maybe, with the help of the benevolent deity (however he may be identified), this demon guardian has been destroyed."

"So please, carry on, dear seeker, forward and beyond!"

A known signature within Tracy Twyman books, that she writes a book in 13 chapters.

If we include the book that was written by "Martin Lunn", and in quotes, The Da Vinci Code Decoded, the total books that Tracy wrote would be 14 books. Tracy wrote The Da Vinci Code Decoded according to her email exchanges between the DisInfo Publisher, and Martin Lunn. Martin Lunn was a member of the Dragon Court as well Tracy Twyman.

Da Vinci Code Decoded had 13 chapters including a chapter on Baphomet.

Tracy R. Twyman had 'signed' a contract with Baphomet with her Sigil at the very beginnings of her career. We had located both the contract and Tracy's own Sigil.

The reason that Rice Boyd's articles were included in The Arcadian Mystique, most likely due to the sense of ownership Tracy had for these articles. Tracy wrote all of Boyd's articles and essays according to multiple statements she made public and according to a 'letter' Tracy sent to Boyd Rice declaring and stating the reasons for her professional separation from him in January 2004.

Tracy R. Twyman & The Religious Fanatics:

Tracy's written word has the power to 'corrupt' religious zealots into Satanism, even though she is not advocating such; yet with no inhibition to hide the methodology on working with the dark arts.

Tracy's writings undermine the 'belief system' of the religious fanatics, as we have witnessed, specifically absurd American religious sects' or cults' pseudo ideologies (in contrast to the well established Old World Christianity.)

It is rather amusing to observe how these religious fanatics do 'justify' all that contradicts their core belief system's doctrines when embarking on their new found god or idol that they have been exposed to in Tracy's writings, serving the demons that she unleashed.

These Religious Fanatics' status had well passed the station of mere Hypocrisy unto nefarious idol & demon worshiping and serving, further damning their insipid souls.

We must be honest with ourselves, and confess, there is a pleasure in watching so; like a Bull, amused while observing a serving Cuck, eagerly waiting for his turn to be ravished too after his wife is partially done with, to endure too what was inflicted on his wife, to share his wife's pains and lot, to worship the same dominant male and act on and manifest as his better half his subservience and subordination to the Bull's piercing shaft in admiration and awe, to anticipate the same instrument that was applied afresh on his wife, and again, while the Cuck's Wife is being ravished and dominated by the same Bull, and all are in ecstasies of pleasure indulged. Thus, a metaphor for Witchcraft and assumed religions.

Religious Fanatics have been always a problem in every society throughout the history since the invention of religions and the mass hysteria such religions entertain. Tracy Twyman's work and posthumous presence is not excluded from this malignant malice neither.

Ironically, this is occurring in the US, as Tracy R. Twyman is actively targeted by pseudo-Christian religious groups, in an attempt to cancel her history, and what she lived for, discredit her, and deny her contribution and role within the Occult.
"…I think the curse on Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum was intended to prevent anybody from getting as far as I have with making sense of this particular text, and from publishing it. If you are reading this, then that means the curse has failed, and maybe, with the help of the benevolent deity (however he may be identified), this demon guardian has been destroyed."

So please, carry on, dear seeker, forward and beyond!"

Tracy R. Twyman from Meet Mete: Introduction to Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum

"But beyond Wolfzeit, I believe that what Dagobert's Revenge released into the atmosphere has had a hand in creating many of the latest cultural trends. The obvious development to point to is the huge success of The Da Vinci Code.

Back when I started Dagobert's Revenge, none of the gatekeepers in media believed that themes of the Grail bloodline and the Priory of Sion could have such mass appeal. Even though Holy Blood, Holy Grail had been huge in the '80s, for some reason nobody saw the potential for these ideas to catch on and transform culture.

Dagobert's Revenge softened up the appetites of the people it influenced, making these ideas palatable, associating them with other ideas already accepted as "cool" by the underground elite, and paving the way for the occult/secret society-related trends that now surround us. I'm not saying that Dan Brown owes me any royalties. But I do believe The Da Vinci Code, phenomenon is spiritually connected to the spell we cast upon Western civilization when we created the OLE and Dagobert's Revenge. Not that we were the only influence, but certainly we were at least an indirect yet nonetheless important influence. I definitely [believe] it is directly a result of my own endeavors that we now see the Cross of Lorraine used all over the place."

Tracy R. Twyman from The History of Dagobert’s Revenge Magazine

وَمَا كَفَرَ سُلَيْمَانُ وَلَـٰكِنَّ الشَّيَاطِينَ كَفَرُوا
"If you are reading this, then that means the curse has failed": The book was published posthumously by the publisher, Tracy's husband. We do say that the curse had not "failed", rather infused or redirected in alliance with Tracy's Curse in regards to Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum. Or the inverse of this statement; incorporated Tracy's Curse and utilized it to work with the book. You may say the book is cursed, you are not wrong on this. We experienced what Professor X was experiencing from the entity, yet not as intensely as he did. Working on the book induced melancholy, physical ailments, strange happenings, and transmitted mental imagery to force the book into the world. We do say Tracy's Curse, we mean by that, is a curse Tracy have left against those who do meddle with her magic. Nor her curse is less potent. The curse affects us too, who are assisting in shaping it and in its influence.

We have located Tracy's very early contract with Baphomet, and her Sigil, which both are relics of the curse.

Occult expert and historian Tracy R. Twyman has been investigating the enigma of the Holy Grail and Rennes-le-Chateau for more than seven years, and has written extensively about it in Dagobert’s Revenge Magazine, as well as other publications.

Now at last she has fully disclosed the shocking conclusions of her exhaustive research. Twyman has discovered that the bloodline of the Merovingians stems not only from Christ and Mary Magdalene, but in fact, goes back to the god-kings and queens of the antediluvian world.

She has also determined the nature of the physical object called "the Holy Grail" - a magnificent structure hidden beneath Rennes-le-Chateau, France. And within this structure is perhaps the greatest treasure of human history: the grave of a sacred king named Cain, who brought kingship and the wisdom of the gods down from Heaven.

Throughout history, the secret of the Grail, the tradition of the Grail, and the bloodline of the Grail have inspired the activities of secret societies, and guided the destiny of humanity. It has been at the center of a struggle both cosmic and terrestrial that has lasted for thousands of years.

In the pages of this volume, Twyman reveals the answers to dozens of questions that have remained unanswered for decades, centuries, and even millennia. She deciphers nearly all of the many clues pertaining to this mystery that have been left by the Priory of Sion, Berenger Sauniere, the Knights Templar, and the Freemasons. But more than that, she has decoded a tangled web of clues found in history, world mythology, Judeo-Christian scriptures, and the traditions of the occult, resulting in a bold reinterpretation of the story of human civilization. And the outcome is not what you would expect.

The villains and protagonists are not who you might presume them to be. For the Holy Grail is a treasure both cursed and sacred, bestowing knowledge both of Good and of Evil. After reading this book, you will never think of history, mythology, or the Bible the same way again.

Book Front Cover: Solomon's Treasure: The Magic And Mystery of America's Money by Tracy Twyman

Solomon's Treasure: The Magic And Mystery of America's Money

Paperback 6"x9", 248 pages, Interior Color and Paper Black & White: Creme

It is commonly known that the United States was founded by men with a philosophy grounded in the occult: namely Freemasons who saw in the US a potential "New Atlantis", which would guide the nations towards a New World Order of peace, democracy, and enlightenment. But what few people understand is the correlation between the esoteric doctrines of Masonry and the economic principles that underpin the American economy. Few understand that the dollar is a unit of magical energy, and the dollar bill itself a magical talisman. Although many words have been written by conspiracy theorists analyzing the Masonic symbols on the one dollar bill, no one has yet been able to sufficiently explain why these symbols are there, or what they really mean.

Solomons Treasure explains how the magic of the dollar operates. The creation of money by the Federal Reserve, and its exponential multiplication by the procedures of the banking system, is analogous to the creation and multiplication of gold in the metaphysical "science" of alchemy. The members of the Federal Reserve Board are in many ways like sorcerers, conjuring wealth seemingly out of thin air and distributing it at will to transform the American economy according to their desires. The dollar is "fiat currency", declared into existence by the central bank in a manner similar to the creation of the universe by the divine words "Let there be light!"

This system depends entirely on a religious faith by the American people in the supernatural power of the dollar. This faith is reinforced by the financial terminology currently in use, as well as by watchwords and symbols found on American money. These act as magical charms, and also act as tokens of communal trust in, and fidelity to, the dollar as an institution. Every time a person spends a dollar, or accepts a dollar as payment, they are confirming their belief in the dollar, and using it to exercise their spiritual will. Even the familiar dollar ($) sign has an occult meaning which is linked with these ideas.

Solomons Treasure reveals the role played by the Knights Templar in the development of capitalism and the modern banking system. Because of their pivotal contributions, numerous modern financial terms, monetary concepts, and banking practices can be traced back to the Templars. Perhaps most shocking are the links between the treasure of King Solomon, purportedly discovered by the Knights Templar, and Americas wealth. In Solomons Treasure, author Tracy R. Twyman explains how time-honored esoteric wisdom principles of wealth creation have been passed down through the ages: from King Solomon, to the Knights Templar, to the Freemasons, and ultimately to the architects of the US dollar.

The Arcadian Mystique

Paperback 8.250" x 11.000", 270 pages, Interior Color and Paper Black & White 50lb (Available)

Since 1996, Dagobert's Revenge Magazine has been a beacon to those seeking the light of the Holy Grail. Powerfully written, exhaustively researched, and totally unique, Dagobert's Revenge was the first and only magazine devoted to the emerging phenomenon of neo-Arcadian culture, breaking ground on many modern occult subjects.

Mounted on a white horse poised for the future, Dagobert's Revenge has resolutely heralded the Arcadian Age. And now, the best articles from hard-to-find back issues have been archived into one volume, along with articles never before printed.

This is a treasure chest of invaluable arcane wisdom.

Tracy Twyman has been a journalist for ten years, and is a noted expert on the occult. She has studied the Holy Grail mystery for seven years, and from 1996-2004 published Dagobert's Revenge Magazine - a journal dedicated to the Merovingians, the Grail and Rennes-le-Chateau. Her book The Merovingian Mythos, and the Mystery of Rennes-le-Chateau was published in October of 2004. She also wrote the introductions for Nicholas de Vere's The Dragon Legacy: The Secret History of an Ancient Bloodline; and William H. Kennedy's Lucifer's Lodge: Satanic Ritual Abuse in the Catholic Church. She is the Lady Grand Master of the Royal and Imperial Dragon Court, and the Exalted Grand Master of the Ordo Lapsit Exillis.

The Vessel of God is Tracy Twyman's first book she wrote as Dagobert's Revenge Magazine already had gained fame and notoriety among the underground culture. The book was never published. Yet some of the chapters are what she published as The Merovingian Mythos. The Vessel of God is more of a comprehensive work regarding Tracy Twyman's narrative of the Holy Grail.

Included in this book also, a Dagobert's Revenge Magazine article where Tracy Twyman and Boyd Rice did visit Rennes-le-Château for a potential T.V. documentary, with photographs documenting Tracy's findings at her trip.

Also, included in this book an interview with Tracy Twyman from the German Wolfzeit Magazine in 2001.

"Since the discovery of hidden coded parchments by the town priest in 1891, the tiny village of Rennes-le-Chateau, France has been linked with the Holy Grail, the Knights Templar, the Priory of Sion, and the royal Merovingian dynasty, which has been said to draw its lineage from Christ himself. Now there is conclusive evidence that the mysteries of the Grail, the Merovingian bloodline, and Rennes-le-Chateau have roots that are far more ancient than the time of Christ. - perhaps more ancient than recorded history.

Can the bloodlines of European monarchs, as well as those of Christ and King David, be traced back to an ancient race said to have “come from Heaven”? Were hidden monuments in Rennes-le-Chateau, including vast underground structures and artificial mountains, built by the master masons of this ancient race? Could events in the Bible, such as the expulsion from Eden, the landing of Noah’s Ark, and the vision of Jacob’s ladder have taken place not in the Middle East, but in Southern France? Is it possible that the greatest discovery of all time - the location of the fabled “Cave of Treasures” from Judeo-Christian apocrypha - lies beneath this enchanted landscape, waiting to be found? Is this the real “Holy Grail”? And what does the Grail have to do with Lucifer? Learn the truth behind the legends, and the secret history of civilization. Read The Vessel of God."

“But beyond Wolfzeit, I believe that what Dagobert’s Revenge released into the atmosphere has had a hand in creating many of the latest cultural trends. The obvious development to point to is the huge success of The Da Vinci Code.

Back when I started Dagobert’s Revenge, none of the gatekeepers in media believed that themes of the Grail bloodline and the Priory of Sion could have such mass appeal. Even though Holy Blood, Holy Grail had been huge in the ‘80s, for some reason nobody saw the potential for these ideas to catch on and transform culture.

Dagobert’s Revenge softened up the appetites of the people it influenced, making these ideas palatable, associating them with other ideas already accepted as “cool” by the underground elite, and paving the way for the occult/secret society-related trends that now surround us. I’m not saying that Dan Brown owes me any royalties. But I do believe The Da Vinci Code, phenomenon is spiritually connected to the spell we cast upon Western civilization when we created the OLE and Dagobert’s Revenge. Not that we were the only influence, but certainly we were at least an indirect yet nonetheless important influence. I definitely [believe] it is directly a result of my own endeavors that we now see the Cross of Lorraine used all over the place.”

REGNUM IN POTENTIA: Saturn's Kingdom Transformed Into The Golden Age, a three part essay book by Tracy R. Twyman

"Saturn was thought of as the Lord of Unrule, and during this epoch, his subjects wanted for nothing. There was no money, nobody had to work for a living, and all things were held in common. It was a paradise in which everyone was free to do as they wished because there no lack, and therefore no need for involuntary compulsion through violent force. Or so it is implied. . . Saturn is associated with liberty, and a Golden Age of peaceful anarchy. Yet we know that in order to maintain this form of rule, he killed his own children to prevent them from growing up to overtake him. The only reason the Golden Age was so golden was because Saturn's children were paying the price of the sacrifice. . . . What these myths of the Golden Age, Garden of Eden, and other primordial paradises really point to is the concept of a cosmic center: a kingdom that doesn't really exist, except in the Otherworld, in potentia. But it is said to be at the heart of our own existence, and its essence can be felt everywhere. It is a place where there is no time as we know it."

Tracy R. Twyman on the concept of "Regnum in Potentia"

This book was packaged and pirated online too! Did we give you any permission to publish this book and I did forget about so? without a cover neither! We had to invent a cover, a book cover for the package! I wonder who did it? Is that you 'Burrito guy'?

A fine demonstration of evident "collaboration" and "Organized" effort in illegal activities, out of Resentment from your part..

Do you do this to 'Jimi Hendrix' Estate, publishing audio files and packaging them online, or 'The Beatles', or 'Michael Jackson'.. or the spite is only directed at us?

You don't like the 'Arab' being in charge of a 'White woman' author's materials?

We have been given well beyond your personal 'approval' in Life.

Remember, that 'woman' was my wife.

You are not pulling this on us, aren't you? that 'God told me to do it!' or 'The Spirit way in, way inside of me and well felt and told me to do it!'

Bravo! Benedicite omnia opera Domini, Domino! A couple lines were amiss from a paragraph, and the original publication house name that published it first was misspelled, with the website spelled incorrectly, on the very first page under the book's title! Tracy's Publication Entity's name was misspelled!".
Reviews by The Mystagogue

Another series of the Regnum In Potentia will be published following. Regnum In Potentia: Part III a is the title of the series. Never this work was published before, nor posted online. The body of work is an elaboration of the original Regnum In Potentia: Part III essay where the subject of the “Hero” archetype is the essay's thesis. Part III a is an unfinished book that had been worked on continuously from 2011 to 2014. As expected, the book contains brilliant analysis and in-depth insights and revelations regarding the "Hero" archetype in relation to Mythology and Film, including the Holy Grail, dreams, portals, other dimensions, and more.

The selection of film quotes that Tracy had jotted down, when read, the lines do strike as aphorisms that address the reader's psyche on a personal level and directly; as the selections do reveal the great wits of the writer, Tracy R. Twyman. Also felt is a sense of a ‘Nietzsche-ian’ self affirmation in her position in life as an individual endowed with knowledge, and an awareness, that both are confirmed in her selection of the quotes. After all, it is the "Hero" the book is about. After 2014, was the phase when Tracy R. Twyman writings delved more into what she sought the most of her work, a Magnum Opus regarding Baphomet. We do witness this by the number of Tracy’s books pertaining the subject of Baphomet that had been published (and unpublished) afterwards culminating unto her book about Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum.

Introduction to the 2nd Edition

Fake N.E.W.S.: Unboxing the Compass essay, is a genius interplay and weaving of Tracy Twyman's séance sessions' letters, words, shapes, and symbols dictated and lined by Mithras and other entities; and between Queen Elizabeth's sorcerer reality, that is the World that John Dee have created and we live within.

In the process of this interplay, Tracy Twyman defines meanings expressed in Masonic symbols as well other meanings hidden in tarot cards.

"I'll have them read me strange philosophy,
And tell the secrets of all foreign kings;"

The Tragical History of Doctor Faustus

The design shapes, diagrams, symbols, letters on the channeled "Baphomet Board", the Ouija board, that Tracy utilized throughout her career for forgotten hidden knowledge, become a foundation stone, a key to relate many of the concepts esoteric and Masonic to demonstrate that there is a Hyperborea that can be reached: "THERE IS MORE BEYOND".

Meanwhile, Tracy Twyman in her essay is leading the argument of 'Flat Earth" through metaphysical argument.

These Masonic symbols as revealed by Tracy Twyman, do signify such accessible hidden world-reality summarized in this statement: "Fake N.E.W.S: Unboxing the Compass".

"There's method in his madness"

Fake N.E.W.S.: Unboxing the Compass is a unique essay. That is, the thin line between Genius and Madness does get more elusive in 'between the lines' within this essay; rather, such divider is there, yet transparent at instances as if the psychological and the metaphysical are in perfect blend [was not Edgar Allan Poe a pioneer in such?].

For certain readers who do enjoy the challenge of knowing the origin of things, will be perplexed which spectrum should they consider with some demonstrations of concepts, or how these concepts were derived and built on each other in this essay.

"John Dee, court astrologer and intelligence agent to Queen Elizabeth I. He invented the so-called "Enochian" ritual magic system—or rather, channeled it from self-identified "angels" using a divination technique called "scrying." Alchemy was one of his primary studies .. alchemical treatise Monas Hieroglyphica..

Monas Hieroglyphica is about a secret formula to recombine the elements of the universe into one thing—the Monad—thus uncreating the universe, with the power then to create a new one. Specifically, these elements are represented as metals, corresponding to the seven “classical planets” or heavenly lights recognized by the old world, which included the Sun, Moon, and five visible planets."

Tracy R. Twyman

Did Queen Elizabeth's John Dee with the help of his "Masonic" brothers, create our New World that we do live in today through magic?

Find out what a Baphomet Ouija Board seance session, a planetary presence revealed to Tracy R. Twyman via formulation of obscure letters, and diagram-like shapes, where she signifies the meanings to explore the themes of parallel universes, travel to the Underworld, artificial worlds within artificial worlds in her book “Fake N.E.W.S.: Unboxing the compass” as well as doppelgangers and golems.

The Mystery of Mysteries Unveiled & Other Essays: The first collection are essays were published by Tracy R. Twyman through Quintessential Publications in 2009 concerning the Knight Templars and Baphomet's history and meaning. They were to be published into a book by the same title, Baphomet: The Mystery of Mysteries Unveiled .

These essays served as the basis for her next book BAPHOMET The Temple Mystery Unveiled , published in 2015; which in turn continued into her magnum opus, Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum, Introduction & Translation .

The second collection, are five essays and an interview, regarding the origins of Baphomet, The Knight Templars and their relation to Priory of Sion, the game of chess, taken from Dagobert's Revenge Magazine issues; and the subject of Baphomet and the US financial system (that was elaborated further in her book Solomon’s Treasure: The Magic and Mystery of America’s Money , published in 2005.)

well rounded introductory literature thus to connect, or delve further into Tracy's unmatched efforts and work in unveiling the 'mysteries' of Baphomet; also to be familiar with other essential themes and ideas in Tracy's work. That is, Priory of Sion had been a major theme in Tracy's work, and it's relation to Renne le Chateau, the Nephilim, and Atlantis; The chess board, is what her Baphomet Ouija board illustrates as a symbol where Cain or Baphomet does express himself. Immerse yourself into the variety that is presented in this book.

From Genuflect Chapter 17 Genuflect 2.0 is a collection of essays and articles pertaining Tracy R. Twyman novel Genuflect written by the author.

Adding more external details unto the meaning of her novel, Tracy published online a few articles and essays explaining the construct and other concepts that are in her novel Genuflect, and specifying the locations of where the novel takes place in details in London.

Seeing the popularity of her only published fiction novel, Genuflect, and the prevalence of the search terms specifically for Genuflect FAQ With Answers essay, this publication was compiled from the rare articles and essays, restoring with the text the images that Tracy Twyman included in delineating her ideas visually, adding more from Tracy cache of images regarding the subject.

As perhaps herself being the reincarnate of Mary Shelley, and her Genuflect, being the reincarnate of the Modern Prometheus or Frankenstein's Monster, Tracy Twyman's Genuflect, remains the most sought after book from her collection of literature (besides her very early Dagobert's Revenge Magazine articles).

In this 2nd edition publication, a couple of articles were added, including other essays that were referenced in her articles. Also included The Stars in Freemasonry essay that Tracy referenced, thus to have a closer look into Tracy's Masonic references and sources. Tracy Twyman was a Mason in her thoughts and heart, and so the teleology of her work.

Also, we expanded the images and pictures that are included, by enhancing each image for a better viewing experience, by increasing the size, and replacing some with higher definition images thus to sustain the intense flow of Tracy's concepts and words in this publication.

Secret Statutes of The Templars
Print size 6x9 B&W (Available) | Kindle (Available)

"I am pleased to present the world's first English translation of The Secret Statutes of the Templars, discovered by Theodor Merzdorf in a Masonic library, having been copied from a document found in the Vatican Archives, and then translated by him into German, and published 1877, shortly after Merzdorf's sudden and early demise at age 29.

The authenticity of these statutes has been a matter of controversy for almost 150 years, but due to the language barrier, few in the English-speaking world are familiar with them. My own investigation into the matter of the Templars… indicates that these statutes may very well be authentic, for the practices detailed therein– spitting on the cross, exposure of the "male member" during initiation, the repetition of Islamic prayers, and fraternizing with the Saracen enemy, along with Druzes, Cathars, Bogomils, and other heretics, as well as the worship of the idol Baphomet–are all consistent with the continuum of tradition that connects the Templars with their Gnostic predecessors, and their Freemasonic descendants, according to… research.

The content here is also consistent with the revelations contained in the Chinon Parchment, detailing the confessions that Templars made to Pope Clement V, which were discovered in the Vatican Archives… Part of what connects all the seemingly disparate sects within the continuum of tradition previously mentioned is a belief that those who have received the "Baptism of Wisdom"–called here the Baptism of Fire–are literally above the law: not just man's law, but the law of Moses–so that nothing they choose to do may be counted against them.

We find this attitude in sects as far-flung as the Ismailis of the Middle Ages and modern Aleister Crowley-following "Thelemites." It is, most likely, what was meant when it was said that the Cathars (a.k.a. the Albigensians) could "no longer sin" after they went through the sacred consolamentum rite, or the "Rite of Perfection," alleged in these documents to have been practiced by the Knights Templar as well."

Treading in these footsteps, we have made a matter of public knowledge both the history of the Assassins and the... “secret, confidential” ... dogmas of the Templars, and how (at least as far as the symbols are concerned) like a Phoenix rising from the flames they most certainly were resurrected in the Order of Freemasons. Plainly we know how to move forward through fires set beneath deceitful ashes, and we perceive how to take a chance on something replete with danger, so that what lay concealed for seven centuries we might undertake to reveal to our readers, that is, the origin of Baphomet.

Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum Joseph Von Hammer-Purgstall The Brotherhood of Knights Templar convicted of apostasy, idol worship and impurity as Gnostics, indeed Ophites, from their own monuments

The essay's first English translation from Latin written by Joseph von Hammer-Purgstall Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum , first published in Vienna 1818; with Introduction and Endnotes by the occult researcher Tracy R. Twyman.

As the anniversary of the October 13, 1307 mass arrest of the Knights Templar in France looms near, American occult researcher, Tracy R. Twyman has announced that she has, for the first time, traced the real origin and meaning of the blasphemous idol that the Templars were accused of worshiping in secret ceremonies: The Baphomet.

Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum is an important Latin text translated that has been frequently referenced but rarely read by researchers on the subject for over 200 years. In this old text, Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum (The Mystery of Baphomet Revealed) by Baron Joseph von Hammer-Purgstall, the author claimed to have discovered a number of idols and other artifacts on former Templar properties, the imagery of which allegedly sheds light on the heretical secret rites and beliefs of the Templars.

If that interpretation is true, these would seem to have included child sacrifice and Devil worship, along with wild orgies of pederasty and bestiality. This translation led Tracy to the discovery that two of the artifacts mentioned in Hammer-Purgstall's book (items long thought by some writers to be lost to history) have in fact been sitting unnoticed in the British Museum this entire time... and the rest in the book Baphomet: Secret of the Temple Unveiled."

From the occult author's own words:

"In my opinion, Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum is, in addition to being a study of history, also a piece of history itself, and is history's most important document pertaining to Baphomet, aside from the Templar trial documents themselves... This is because... while the story of Baphomet (as an entity under that name) may have begun with the Templars, it really developed as a concept mostly since Hammer-Purgstall's time, under his influence, both directly and indirectly.

"[F]rom my own experience on this project, I do believe that this text, the images, and indeed the entire subject matter, is cursed. I have had... frankly the worst luck of my life, while studying the subject of Baphomet for the last sixteen years, especially whenever I tried to focus on the Hammer-Purgstall translation in particular. .. [I] have even have a term we have coined— "the Fog"—for the mental confusion, inertia, and weariness we felt overtake [me] whenever [I] sit down to work on it. ..The curse of Baphomet strikes again!"

"…I think the curse on Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum was intended to prevent anybody from getting as far as I have with making sense of this particular text, and from publishing it. If you are reading this, then that means the curse has failed, and maybe, with the help of the benevolent deity (however he may be identified), this demon guardian has been destroyed."

Throughout her career, Tracy had proceeded many times to create what is worthy of Baphomet, and worthy to her uncanny ability in uncovering the origins of things that proved impossible to others. And she did, yet never enough. Her work on Hammer-Purgstall's Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum is her magnum opus in regards what she sought: a comprehensive statement that marks a landmark within the scholarship on the subject, and the magic, that is of Baphomet; and this was only promised to her. Her work which is in between hands, demonstrates more complexities and wealth of "fascinating and utterly perfect nexus of symbolism and etymology" that are intricate and radical, shifting and through 'a sea change' perspectives that were taken for granted into something that is 'rich and strange' revealing the hidden pearls of the perceived obvious; weaving the myths and symbols that were scattered since the destruction of the Tower of Babel, presenting us a tapestry that depicts the ‘lost knowledge’, the original ‘secret’, where these myths sprang from, unifying all. After all, all things do reveal themselves, and Tracy was the conduit, the cataclysm, rather, the mind that created such reality and methods regarding understanding the anatomy of this entity and concept that is named Baphomet.

The book is haunted, and for reasons similar of which “Professor X” [The learned translator of the Essay] have claimed. Did I state that this book is haunted and invoking? One will experience strange and weird happenings and presence the moment one delves into the Introduction and specifically the Translation portions of this book. Physical evidence will surely prove itself before the reader. The imagery that are of Hammer-Purgstall’s essay are by themselves almost living fragments of a relic, of a whole of an egregore that was once well defined within a critical era in our civilization of both the East and the West. And such “Of sprites and goblins” is sensed as one taps into this book’s current. What also I have endured is that Baphomet did want this book to be published as soon as Tracy departed, since it was our duty and task to continue Tracy's legacy and work. There were nights Baphomet had assured that his presence is felt, and perhaps his apparition was seen and witnessed in a febrile dream or a wakeful vision; his psychic efforts with telepathy and inducing images on another’s mind were experienced in his attempts to force this book into the world.

These entities that are depicted, as they are of the mental world too, be it existent as a thing-in-itself, a living thing, or but within the mind of Man, some were communicated to me before as I was relating to Tracy the mental images that were transmitted showing us more answers to her questions visually, as we were in a seance session with Baphomet or Mete, including a corner stone.

Tracy's research into the matter, the matter of Baphomet, was not just through the means of scholarship or study; Tracy's methods are never one-dimensional, rather, metaphysics was applied to obtain, understand the more of the nature of this entity; and to obtain the information from the entity itself, Baphomet, rather than just depending on others' speculations or truths. And when such methods were utilized by Tracy, we have witnessed strange phenomena around, hail falling down hard, and storms forming, where she would calmly address and tell me as she is smiling with confidence, that it is due to her work and writings, that such are happening.

We do say it once again, 'witches' are born, not made.

“On one of these caskets I found what I consider to be the signature image, because it shows a horned idol (just a torso and a head, like the old “herm” statues that used to protect orchards in Greece) being given the osculum inflame on his posterior by a kneeling worshiper who also fondles the statue’s genitals. I first saw this image in a book that talked about Purgstall-Hammer’s work, but couldn’t find it in Purgstall-Hammer’s actual book. If I hadn’t found the casket myself in the museum I wouldn’t be sure that it existed.”

Tracy Twyman addressing the book cover design.

Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum, indeed is a haunted book. You will experience the witchcraft of the book as it is calling on the old gods. Thus do take heed.

Meet Mete, is Introduction to the first English Translation of Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum by Joseph von Hammer-Purgstall, 1818.

In this introduction the occult researcher Tracy R. Twyman delves and with "fascinating and utterly perfect nexus of symbolism and etymology" into the concepts of Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum (The Mystery of Baphomet Revealed), where the author claimed to have discovered a number of idols and other artifacts on former Templar properties, the imagery of which allegedly sheds light on the heretical secret rites and beliefs of the Templars.

- ENDNOTES (For the Introduction by Tracy R. Twyman)

The Introduction Meet Mete, is rich with images that add into Tracy's conceptualization through the language, a more vivid experience. Thus we had to print this volume in colour to preserve the experience of reading Tracy R. Twyman as she intended.

With the exception of three images throughout the book, all these images are from Tracy's original essay, and from her cache of images that she chose not to include in the work at the moment.

Tracy did intend to publish her Meet Mete essay as a book besides publishing the translation of Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum , Fake N.E.W.S.: Unboxing the Compass, Secret Statutes of The Templars, and The Secret of Minnie's Mousse.

She did plan to have the last four titles in limited editions print.

A quality, that must all have felt and experienced about Tracy's writings, that it does leave a lasting impression on the psyche. That is, you will see her concepts that you have just read, demonstrated here and there in your daily life, as if in synchronicity. And the concepts that she presents do take a hold on the reader, that they begin, in the back of your mind as you are going through your daily life, playing almost forcing themselves, or finding their way into the stream of consciousness to find yourself thinking about the realities she is trying to convey, perhaps, thinking to yourself, what if such realities were more 'real' than what we think.

After all, she was very able in magick, and she does create magick until this hour as you are reading Tracy's words; Tracy's writings are part of this pleasing current of the magical and strange.

A Posthumous Publication of Tracy R. Twyman by Mystagogue Publications.

Early Interviews is a collection of Tracy R. Twyman interviews that she conducted, and others where she was being interviewed. Most of these interviews are from the first five years of Tracy's career, where she published them in Dagobert's Revenge Magazine, from years 1998 to 2003/2004.

Included also is the epic interview Tracy had with Peter Levenda about the subject of the Nazi party's occult roots. This Interview was published earlier by Richard Metzger of "The Disinformation" publication house in the collection The Book of Lies: The Disinformation Guide to Magick and the Occult, prefaced by the Scottish comic writer Grant Morrison.

Also included is an interview that Tracy conducted with Nicholas DeVere, the head of the Dragon Court, a secret society or order, that had Baphomet as a patron. DeVere also was connected to Tracy's Ordo Lapsit Exillis which introduced the occult into the mainstream culture and sub culture in the Western World in the late 1990'a and early 2000's. What we see today as fashionable, regarding the occult within the public, is the result of Tracy R. Twyman magic that she channeled into Dagobert's Revenge Magazine in her early years.

Wolfzeit Magazine is a German magazine that was almost 'identical' to Dagobert's Revenge Magazine in its theme, logos, and motto. When the publisher found out about Tracy's Dagobert's Revenge Magazine, he asked for an interview with both Tracy and Boyd Rice. The interview is included in this collection.

The interviews of Dagobert's Revenge Magazine era are of the pro-Monarchist movement that Tracy was writing breathing life into: "Musick, Magick, Monarchism."

Baphometic Excerpts & Other Articles is a collection of excerpts compiled by Tracy R. Twyman and previously published on her website, from both of her books Clock Shavings, and Baphomet: The Temple Mystery Unveiled. Also, the collection includes other articles written by Tracy pertaining to both books, and to Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum Translation and her work on the subject.

These three books do represent one of the most important phases in Tracy's writing and research career after Dagobert's Revenge Magazine revolution and success at her very early age (Tracy was at age 17 years old when initiated Dagobert's Revenge Magazine) . They are the results of years of research and multiple attempts to create a magnum opus regarding the subject of Baphomet. These three books are more of a mature effort and a final conclusive statement Tracy was able to state to the world regarding the meaning of the 'entity' Baphomet.

Included in this collection is Tracy's rare article “I Reap all the Wealth”: The Hidden Magical Properties of Chess, which was the first work Tracy wrote about Baphomet and Ageio, claiming the information was given to her by an 'old lady' instead of revealing her metaphysical methods in obtaining and communicating information.

Be aware, that it was Tracy Twyman who made it possible for the ‘occult’ to be integrated into the mainstream culture of the US, and the West, in our times as she published her Dagobert’s Revenge Magazine. And it was Tracy Twyman who popularized Baphomet within the public’s consciousness and psyche. She did mention to us before, that Baphomet chose her as his Ambassador when she was 18 years old.

This is not the first of Tracy’s; a couple centuries ago, it was her who published The Modern Prometheus, or Frankenstein’s Monster at the age of 18 years, as she was part of the English Romantic circle, with her husband Percy Bysshe Shelley.

Tracy reattempted writing her classic novel in Genuflect.

For seven centuries, the enigma of Baphomet has mystified both scholars and the general public. Did the Knights Templar really worship a demonic idol of that name? If so, what does the word mean? What is the origin of this figure? What was the nature of the rituals that the Templars performed in secret? What were their covert beliefs? Why, if the Templars initially described their idol as a mummified severed head, is this figure now represented as a hermaphrodite human with the head of a goat?

Authors Tracy R. Twyman and Alexander Rivera have dived head-first into the bottomless abyss of this mystery and returned with some astounding wisdom to share. Here for the first time they reveal the genesis of these symbols, showing how they relate to the Witches' Sabbath, traditions of Sufi Islam, alchemy, Gnosticism, cabalism, the teachings of Hermes Trismegistus, and so much more.

Learn why the Templars and their beloved severed head are frequently associated with John the Baptist, and how this connects to his student, Simon Magus. Discover the real facts about things like the Chinon Parchment, The Book of the Baptism of Fire, the Templar Abraxas seals, and newly-found documents which claim that the Templars discovered the real Temple of Solomon during a secret trip to Mecca.

Join Twyman and Rivera on this exciting adventure into the unknown. Immerse yourself in this knowledge, if your heart has the strength. It is certain that your mind will never be the same.

What was the occult power of the Holy Spirit wielded by both Jesus and John? How did they obtain that power? Was it passed on to the priests of the Catholic Church through St. Peter? Can this power be used for evil purposes, or to command demonic spirits? What was the Black Mass? Has the Church ever been infiltrated by Satanists? These topics are dealt with in Tracy R. Twyman's book Hocus Pocus: The Magical Power of St. Peter.

From the author of The Merovingian Mythos, Solomon's Treasure, and Mind-Controlled Sex Slaves and the CIA.

The Cutting of the Orm:
The Secret Calendar of the Priory of Sion

Paperback 6"x9" Book Size

In January 2011, following an abrupt adjustment of polar north, the Minnesota Planetarium Society and the mainstream media proclaimed that a new zodiac system would need to be adopted. Ophiuchus, the Serpent-Bearer, was proclaimed as the “new” astrological sign for a new zodiac made of thirteen houses instead of twelve.

But all of this was foreseen back in 2002, by Tracy R. Twyman, then writing for Dagobert’s Revenge Magazine. In 2002’s The Cutting of the Orm, Tracy R. Twyman actually predicted that future reform of the zodiac and annual calendar would come about after a pole shift, in which a thirteenth house would be added to the zodiac, and a thirteenth month added to the year.

Perhaps most astoundingly, this prediction was made after examining numerical codes embedded in the literature published by the Priory of Sion back in the mid-twentieth century, within documents supposedly written by avant-garde artist and filmmaker Jean Cocteau. Following the clues left by this mercurial character, Twyman discovered a new calendar: not one useful for the present time, but one that might some day come into being. Furthermore, the clues also led her to reconstruct the old calendar of the Golden Age before the Flood, as it had been before the Earth’s axis was tilted to its present state. The results of this investigation will shock and amaze you.

Who was Mary Magdalene? Is it true that she was married to Jesus? If so, why did he choose her?

This groundbreaking work by Tracy R. Twyman (Dagobert's Revenge, Merovingian Mythos, etc.) explores the royal heritage of Mary Magdalene in the Tribe of Benjamin. The connections between the Benjamites, Baal-worship, sex rituals, and the Merovingian bloodline are revealed.

Is it possible that Jesus and Mary Magdalene were part of a sacred sex cult with its roots in the ancient world? Could they both have been descended from a royal race of sex gods from the heavens? Discover the clues pieced together by Tracy R. Twyman in The Choice Vine , available from Quintessential Publications.

From 1996 - 2003 Dagobert’s Revenge Magazine was a beacon to those seeking the light of the Holy Grail. Powerfully written, exhaustively researched, and totally unique, Dagobert’s Revenge was the first and only magazine devoted to the emerging phenomenon of what they called "neo-Arcadian culture", pre-figuring the culture that has evolved around Dan Brown's The Da Vinci Code. This included the interweaving of subjects like ancient and medieval history, music, art, science, royal bloodlines, secret societies, espionage, codes and ciphers, occult studies, alchemy, astrology, Hermetic symbolism, the myths of Atlantis, the Holy Grail, King Arthur, the Black Sun and the Hollow Earth, Giants, Nephilim, fallen angels, Lucifer, Cain, Asmodeus, Melusine, Rennes-le-Chateau, the Knights Templar, and Freemasonry, as well as other mysterious legends of Europe and the ancient world. Dagobert's Revenge had a unique editorial slant and method of presentation. It contained in-depth essays exploring these topics with original research that presented new hypotheses and advanced the entire occult research field as a whole. Yet is also contained entertaining and well-written interviews, reviews, and propaganda. There has never been another magazine like it, before or since.

"This time with Dagobert's Revenge, it wasn't just an experiment. We had a plan. We wanted to create a new subculture revolving around the ideals of Monarchism and Grail mysticism, by infiltrating existing subcultures and introducing them to our new paradigm. We targeted the Goths, the Wiccans, the Crowleyites, the Satanists, the WWII aesthetes, the college intellectuals, the conspiracy theorists, the radical anarchists. We told some other people in the zine underground about our plans, including Fred Berger of Propaganda. They all thought we were nuts. They thought that the subject matter we'd chosen to concentrate on was way too obscure, and way too cerebral, for public consumption. (George Petros of Seconds later told me to concentrate on the record reviews and scrap everything else.)"

In this Issue:
* Articles by Tracy Twyman and Boyd Rice analyzing the life and work of Jean Cocteau, whom we have declared the greatest mind of the 20th century. Proof of his involvement with the Priory of Sion is revealed, as well as a coding system embedded in his work which opens up some of the most pondered mysteries of the universe.

* Articles on ancient artificial mountains and underground tunnels, Sleeping Beauty and the Venusberg myth, the Original Language of the Tower of Babel, a shocking interpretation of the poem "Le Serpent Rouge", a mysterious coding device called the "Compass of Enoch" (possibly used by the Templars), and the discovery of a perfect Golden Age calendar used by the ancients. All of these articles reveal heretofore unheard-of keys to the mysteries of the Holy Grail, Rennes-le-Chateau, the Merovingians, the Priory of Sion, and the bloodline of Cain.

* Also, an interview with the band TOOL, and an article about Rennes-le-Chateau written by their drummer, Danny Carey.

From Joshua to Esther
An original Tracy R. Twyman publication (Available)

As the Boston Book Review wrote in December 1998: "Nothing better illustrates the odd intimacy of the Bible and interpretation than The Legends of the Jews, a seven volume set of biblical interpretations that was compiled by the famous Judaic scholar Louis Ginzburg nine decades ago, and that remains unsurpassed and indispensable today.."

This series of books, published between 1909 and 1939, was certainly the first, and is perhaps the greatest, comprehensive overview of Judaic tradition, belief and lore ever published. Utilizing his proficiency in the Latin, Greek, Syriac, Aramaic, Arabic and Akkadian languages, Ginzberg was able to draw not only from the Torah, Talmud, and Midrash, but also from the Pseudepigrapha, Christian scripture and apocrypha, and Islamic legends, his sources spanning in origin from three centuries before Christ unto his own modern times.

The present volume, which has been out of print for some time, pertains to matters stretching from the time they entered the Promised Land, under the commanding lead of their anointed ruler, Joshua, until the rule of Queen Esther, including the period of the Judges, the reign of kings Solomon and David, the dividing of the kingdom, the captivity, and the return from exile.

On The Worship of The Generative Powers and 'Mete':

"I first contacted the British Museum about these caskets in 2014. I was looking for the one with the lid, featuring the bearded "Cybele" figure, when I first asked to look through the catalogue of the Duc de Blacas collection online. When I did, I was shocked to find not only the casket in question (which I had read about in Thomas Wright's book from 1865, Worship of the Generative Powers), but also the other casket, obviously related."

"One image in particular, from the lid to a coffer found in Burgundy, looks most especially like it might have influenced Eliphas Levi's depiction of Baphomet. It shows a female or androgynous figure crowned with towers a la the goddess Cybele of the ancient world. He/she is holding in each hand a chain, and connected to each chain, floating in the air and upside-down, are the figures of the Sun and the Moon. Below the figure's feet are a 7-pointed star and a pentagram. Between these is a human skull."

"Thomas Wright's book Worship of the Generative Powers, which was about Priapian fertility cults and witchcraft" is one of the very early, and first references where Hammer-Purgstall's Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum was brought to Tracy Twyman's attention.

This book is heavily referenced in Tracy's work. The sexual rites of the worship of Priapus, and information about Templar's currency "abbey tokens" were elaborated on in her books like, Merovingian Mythos, Solomon's Treasure, Baphomet: The Mystery Temple Unveiled, Genuflect, of course her Endnotes on Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum; and other work and essays.

The Worship of The Generative Powers is one of the first listed books in a list Tracy Twyman had, to edit and reprint rare books, (rarer at the beginnings of 2000s), which Tracy also used as her resources in her research and writings.

We proudly present this reprint, as Tracy intended years ago. Hopefully, the first of a series that contains books from Tracy's "Books to Reprint" list.

Regarding: Clock Shavings

Tracy Renee Twyman has written a book that is unlike anything I've ever encountered. You might think it odd that I use the word `encountered' instead of the more expected `read', but there's a reason. You see I discerned something more than just a book here; there is a living presence, other than the author, residing within these printed pages. You will recognize this presence as a disquieting sensation that paradoxically pushes the reader away, while simultaneously pulling them deeper into the mysteries waiting within. At first you will sense a cautionary impulse, an interior warning to discontinue reading. However if you are willing to fight through this innate defense mechanism before long this feeling will give way to a deep fascination that will override that initial impulse. With that said, welcome to the stout of heart. Welcome to the world of Clock Shavings'!

Since this book is autobiographical in nature I feel certain that the author is more than just aware of this dichotomous fear vs. fascination process I am referring to. Unquestionably she has moved in some of the darker corners of the esoteric, occult world where the more cautious and timid amongst us dare not go. Such being the case she has become intimate with particular people, groups and spiritual practices that have opened her mind and soul to non-physical dimensions and entities that may have agendas that are not in mankind's best interests. Thankfully some people just don't know what's good for them.

Throwing caution to the wind Tracy takes the reader on a remarkable journey of mythic proportions involving a quest undertaken by her newly founded secret society, `Ordo Lapsit Exillis' (Stones of Exile). Operating under a stated goal of discovering the true nature of the holy grail and exactly how it functions within the esoteric history and contemporary descendants of the royal bloodline of France. A lineage which allegedly includes Jesus of Nazareth and Mary Magdalene within its line of progenitors. Aided by her best friend and husband Brian, Tracy's quest oscillates between objective intellectual research and subjective personal experience. The first leading to the publishing of the now defunct underground classic zine (self-published magazine), `Dagobert's Revenge' and the latter to a specially designed Ouija board used to successfully contact the infamous goat-headed god Baphomet along with a number of other nefarious disembodied spirits.

Believe me when I say you will not be able to put this book down. Between the highly charged channeled material, the internal politics and intense egos warring within the OLE (Ordo Lapsit Exillis) and the arcane material presented you're in for quite a ride. If you enjoy exploring such topics as; Grail lore, numerology, divination, alchemy, etymology, sacred geometry, mythology, Satanism, Kabbalah, secret societies, the Nephilim, lost civilizations, Christian eschatology, UFO's, reptilians and the hollow earth then this is the book for you.

The final section of the book; "Terminus: Further and Beyond" (pages 252 - 418) functions in true interdisciplinary fashion presenting a dazzling comparative analysis and synthesis of the material presented, as well as some final thoughts & personal reflections from Tracy. This section is by far the most intellectually demanding portion of the book and will require the reader's utmost attention.

Whether you regard Tracy's interests and actions as being fearless or foolhardy, her inquisitive nature and research oriented pursuits have led to the creation of an amazing document. The authors firsthand accounts with preternatural entities coupled with her intellectual prowess within a wide range of esoteric fields have successfully coalesced in `Clock Shavings' into what just might be her Magnum Opus (Great Work). I predict that in the years to come this will be recognized as the book that summoned Baphomet out from the dusty pages of Templar history and veiled allusions of Freemasonry into the contemporary occult landscape as a conscious, aggressive personality to be dealt with. For good or ill, Baphomet once again moves amongst us! Read less

Regarding: Baphomet: The Temple Mystery Unveiled

The lead-in to Baphomet: The Temple Mystery Unveiled by Tracy Twyman and Alexander Rivera is very deceptive. On Amazon.com, the authors describe the book as an investigation into the symbols, beliefs, and rituals of the Templars. Baphomet almost seems to be an afterthought. Twyman's introduction to the book is a little strange, mentioning Ouija boards and haunted translators, but she seems earnest when she talks about her ordeal to unravel the mystery of Baphomet.

The book starts off promising, with the first chapter discussing the Templars and their downfall and recounting the efforts of authors Eliphas Levi and Joseph von Hammer-Purgstall to explain the meaning and nature of Baphomet. But subsequent chapters seem to have very little to do with Baphomet at all. One chapter discusses unusual elements of the Biblical myth of creation, another recounts the various myths and texts associated with Hermes, and yet another talks about esoteric interpretations of the figure of John the Baptist. It's not until you get halfway through the book that you even begin to realize the authors' real agenda, a conspiracy that is not fully revealed until you get to the last pages of this 600-page tome—and then it's too late.

Perhaps the authors believed that fewer people would buy the book if they actually told the public up front what Baphomet is really about. Here is a more accurate description of the book taken from the blog of co-author Alex Rivera:

"In the book Baphomet: The Temple Mystery Unveiled, which I co-wrote with Tracy Twyman, we concluded that there were certain secret societies and even more traditional religious leaders (including cabbalistic Rabbis, among many others) are secretly trying to usher in the Apocalypse. Somehow, this involves using blasphemous sex magic, alchemy, mind-control and time travel, at the behest of the infernal trinity—Samael, Lilith, and Baphomet, so that they may incarnate into the Antichrist, damn the human race, destroy the universe, usurp the New Jerusalem—the Heavenly cubed city that descends from the chaotic heavens at the End of the Apocalypse."

Baphomet makes much more sense after you read Clock Shavings, Twyman's account of how she was drawn into a worldwide conspiracy to bring about this apocalypse. Her description of this book on Amazon doesn't mince any words:

"In a dank basement in Denver, Colorado, in the summer of 2001, a group of friends attempted to contact a dead French artist on the Ouija board as part of a research project about the Holy Grail. They were hoping to get help decoding an historic occult mystery pertaining to the royal bloodline of France. They had no idea they were opening a portal to Hell. What followed was a 13-year adventure into the supernatural, trailing mysterious clues given to them from beyond the veil. Join Tracy, Brian, and the brethren of the Ordo Lapsit Exillis, as they explore the secrets of Freemasonry, the Knights Templar, the Priory of Sion, and the Apocalypse, gleaned from the ghostly lips of artist Jean Cocteau, Cain the Murderer, Baphomet the Goat, Lucifer the Lightbearer, and Satan himself. Initiate yourself into the hidden gnosis of the underworld, the Black Sun, the Ark of the Covenant, the Crucifixion, the Deluge, fallen angels, the war in Heaven, and the coming reign of the Anti-Christ, as told by spirits who are in a position to know.

Learn the secrets of the demons trapped in the Abyss down below. Discover how they plan to return to Earth, and reign once more through the coming of a powerful king. Now, and only now, at this late hour, can this sub rosa information be told to the public. The window of revealing shall be agape but for a short time."

The first part of Clock Shavings presents an account of how Twyman became unintentionally involved in this conspiracy. A fascination with the Grail mysteries led Twyman to publish a magazine titled Dagobert's Revenge, which became a popular source of mystery and information among other Grail enthusiasts. This in turn led to the creation of a secret society called the Ordo Lapsit Excillis (Latin: "the Stone of Exile"), an attempt to contact and network with other people interested in the Grail Mysteries. Things get really strange when Twyman starts using a Ouija board to converse with various supernatural entities, such as Baphomet, Cain, and even Jesus. They draw her into a conspiracy to establish a Grail king from the bloodline of Cain as the ruler of the earth, which will usher in a new era, as she explained to members of the OLE:

"We believe that if the true and rightful Grail king is placed upon the throne of Grail kingdom once again, and crowned in the proper ceremony, the very act itself will unleash a force that will cause a paradigm shift in our world, restoring it to proper balance. A series of world-altering events will unfold in rapid succession that will lead to the union of the world's governments under the rule of the Grail king. It will also fundamentally alter the spiritual nature of our world, and the consciousness of its inhabitants, which is the most important change of all."

Baphomet plays an important role in this drama:

"Cain is locked inside of a prison within the center of the Earth - entombed, really - under a spell of death-like sleep. However, he is still able to use his incredibly powerful divine spirit to affect the course of events on Earth. He is still the Lord of the Earth, although he is immobilized. He takes especial interest in the royal human bloodlines that descend from him. He is able to incarnate through his descendants (and those who serve them). In his state, he has become known as "Baphomet," the god of "Sophia" (divine wisdom). He is connected to the figure of Asmodeus, the king of the demons, who is often depicted as being bound in chains, slumped over as if carrying an enormous burden.

The prison within which Baphomet is locked is the real Ark, and the real Holy Grail, for it contains his divine power. Whether one views it as a cup, a stone, or a box (as in the Ark of the Covenant), the symbolism is the same. It is the prison that contains the body and spirit of Baphomet. Jailed, Baphomet is thus at the mercy of whoever his jailer is. The question "Whom does the Grail serve?", then, is really saying "Who holds the key to the prison of Baphomet?"

We believe that when the Grail king is placed upon the throne of Drakenberg during the proper ceremony, Baphomet will be released from his prison. He will immediately possess the body of our king, so that he may once again rule as the Lord of the Earth. As his servants, it is our duty to obtain his release."

Thankfully, at the last minute, Twyman comes to her senses:

"I was still working on this when I was suddenly seized with unrelenting terror about the future of the Ordo Lapsit Exillis. I reviewed the details for the Divine Rite - about ritually sacrificing Nicholas de Vere, then releasing the spirit of Cain/Baphomet to possess his body and rule the Earth. For the first time I truly came to grips with what it meant: an opening of the gates of Hades. … Not only would something like this bring unimaginable destruction and horror, but the blending of two previously separate dimensions that would result from opening the gate would distort spatial and temporal relationships as we presently know them."

With this realization, she shut down the OLE and abandoned her efforts to bring about the destruction of the known universe. She also believed that she had been manipulated from the beginning to bring about these events:

"All along, Baphomet and the others had been riding me, driving me like a slave, constantly pushing me to do more chores for them. They had probably been doing that since I started Dagobert's Revenge Magazine at age 17. They wanted me to create an organization of followers (the order) and a body of propaganda (the magazine and books) to entice people into the same relationship. The real goal was apparently to train people to break these horrific creatures loose from their infernal jail."

The last part of Clock Shavings presents Twyman's disjointed speculations regarding the history and nature of this apocalypse, mentioning many of the same subjects covered in more depth in Baphomet. In her introduction, Twyman briefly acknowledges the influence that the ordeal recounted in Clock Shavings had on Baphomet, but insists that the present book is a product of standard research:

"I must stress that, although my obsession with Baphomet began because of an encounter on the Ouija board (which I did not ask for, mind you, as I was simply trying to contact a dead French artist at the time), and some of my early research was inspired by clues given to me in this manner, all of the information that you will find here was discovered and analyzed the old-fashioned way, pouring through books in various languages, some over two thousand years old, utilizing inter-library loan programs, and purchasing (at great expense) rare out-of-print volumes. We also used the plethora of old material scanned into Google Books, as well as the catalogues of display listings for several museums."

Unfortunately, Baphomet is a pseudo-academic work as best. It lacks a coherent structure, and the thesis is hidden at the end of the book. There are no footnotes or citations in the text, and there is no index at the end of the book, just a bibliography. One gets the sense that they don't want their readers to investigate their sources of information.

Most importantly, there are significant factual errors in the text. For example, one of the primary sources of evidence used to prove their Templar conspiracy is “Mysterium Baphometis Revelatum,” an essay published by Austrian orientalist Joseph von Hammer-Purgstall in 1818. Considered “a crucial piece of research,” the authors had it translated from Latin to English. Twyman announced the upcoming publication of the translation in her introduction to Baphomet, but unfortunately the essay was not published before Twyman’s death in 2019.

The reason the authors treasure this document becomes evident when you translate the full title of the essay: “Mysterium baphometis revelatum, seu fratres militiae templi, qua Gnostici et quidem Ophiani apostasiae, idoloduliae et impuritatis convicti per ipsa eorum monumenta.” ("Discovery of the mystery of Baphomet, by which the Knights Templars, like the Gnostics and Ophites, are convicted of apostasy, of idolatry and of moral impurity, by their own monuments.") The essay plays an integral role in the authors’ attempts to connect the Templars with the Gnostics, after which they assert (without proof) that the secret rites of the Templars incorporated every blasphemous, perverted, and criminal act that Gnostic groups were accused of by their enemies, the Catholic Church.

Hammer-Purgstall’s essay analyzes images of Templar artifacts collected by the author, and identifies images of hermaphroditic figures as Baphometic idols. He proposed that the name Baphomet meant “Baptism of Wisdom,” and that the wisdom referred to Sophia (Greek: “wisdom”), a major theme in Gnosticism. Other images linked the Templars to depraved rituals and sexual orgies. Hammer-Purgstall’s essay is considered spurious by many historians for a number of good reasons. The first is that no one has been able to locate the sources of the images of the Templar artifacts featured in his essay, as admitted by Twyman and Rivera:

“Since commencing our investigation of these matters, we have managed to bring to light much more regarding the origin of some of the images featured in Hammer-Purgstall’s book. Most of the artifacts seem impossible to find now. They do not appear to be listed as what Hammer-Purgstall called them in any museum. The pictures that purportedly came from the walls of churches cannot be verified, as in most cases the churches (located in what are now Austria, Hungary, the Czech Republic, Germany and France) no longer exist. Even the townships they were in have changed names.”

Second, because these images cannot be located and verified, there is no actual proof that the images are connected to the Templars in any way. There is no obvious symbolism or writing in the images that specifically connects them to the Templars. The only connection appears to be Hammer-Purgstall himself. Finally, after reading the the Hammer-Purgstall translations printed in Baphomet and elsewhere, it appears that Hammer-Purgstall’s analysis of these images is primarily speculative, not historical. This doesn’t stop the authors from speculating upon Hammer-Purgstall’s speculations in one chapter and then presenting their own speculations as fact in a subsequent chapter.

Another important document used by the authors to lend credence to their conspiracy is the “Allocution Against the Freemasons” by Pope Pius IX. Curiously, they remark that the easiest place to find an English translation of this document is in Scottish Rite Freemason Albert Pike’s Morals and Dogma, right before they print it in full on pages 478-484 of Baphomet. An internet search for this “Allocution” by Pius IX returns no significant results, and for good reason: the entry in Morals and Dogma (which never mentions Pius IX) was stolen from Eliphas Levi! Pike actually plagiarized and slightly paraphrased a number of quotes from English translations of Levi’s books, including some of Levi’s proclamations regarding Baphomet. Twyman and Rivera’s “Allocution” originally comes from A.E. Waite’s English translation of Levi’s The History of Magic, not from Pope Pius or any other ecclesiastical authority.

Compounding their error, at the beginning of their book, the authors falsely claim that Levi converted back to Catholicism at the end of his life: “His final book, Magic: A History of Its Rites, Rituals and Mysteries, was a sad attempt to reconcile the faith of his family with the occult ideas he had promoted all along.” Here the authors give the title of the Dover Press edition of Waite’s translation of Levi’s The History of Magic, a book originally published in French in 1860, four years after the full publication of Levi’s first book on occultism, Dogma and Ritual of High Magic, and not at the end of Levi’s life. The authors then print a quote about the Templars, black magic, and Baphomet from the very same chapter of Levi’s History that Pike plagiarized! Had they actually read the five pages Levi wrote about the Templars in History, they would have discovered the real source of their “Allocution.”

In conclusion, if you’re amused or intrigued with half-baked apocalyptic conspiracy theories, you will enjoy Baphomet: The Temple Mystery Revealed. But if you’re looking for actual information on Baphomet, skip this book and go straight to Wikipedia. The true mystery of this deceptive book has now been revealed so you don’t have to waste your time with it.

We are in a constant effort to publish the literary work of Tracy R. Twyman covering her longer major work, to her essays and articles.

We are categorizing her work in accordance with the subject matter, or in accordance with Tracy's literary phases regarding the subject matters she wrote about, as we are 'cataloging', collecting, and publishing Tracy's writings.

Due to serious harm that has been to done to Tracy Twyman's posthumous presence by multiple groups, including groups and individuals of intruding and uneducated religious fanatics in the United States, our focus had been, and still is well invested in efforts at 'damage control'.

We are still withholding some literature, and all of the video and audio materials from publication until the activities of these Religious Fanatic groups and individuals are subsided and have ceased from their claims against the Estate that are of ill and maliceful intentions that have been endured since Tracy Twyman's early demise.

We are not allowing you to "cancel" Tracy R. Twyman

Also, Tracy's various memberships and ranks among other occult groups and the certificates to represent such, are withheld from the public, due to the sickly obsession of some of the religious fanatics individuals with the person of Tracy R. Twyman that provokes disgust and repulsion within any person with a sense of decency.

The level of the 'damage' we asses, that have been done to Tracy's posthumous presence, reputation, and legacy is intricate and rooted as it is actively harbored and grown due to petty 'selfish' motives of the Religious Fanatics; and other foreign groups' "political agendas" failed schemes. It will require long 'years' for the Estate to consider it wise to be at liberty with Tracy R. Twyman publications.

Meanwhile, we are at the same tract and momentum to publish most of the major of Tracy's literary work to be preserved and read in print as intended.

What is MDEG?
MDEG stands for Mass Divergence Effect/Event General. It is a thread on /x/ for discussion of the Mass Divergence Effect and the impending Mass Divergence Event. There is now a wiki for documenting more information in regards to the MDE. For more elaboration, read it. If you just want important surface-level information, just reading this Rentry will do.
https://mdeg.miraheze.org/

What is the Mass Divergence Effect?
The Mass Divergence Effect, also known as the "Mandela Effect," occurs when aspects of two universes merge. (Although, due to the Law of Causality/Importance, it is unlikely that the death of Nelson Mandela changed between universes, so this is likely an actual false memory. It is still possible, though). Individual instances of this are known as "Divergence Anomalies." Currently, due to the Law of Causality/Importance, this is only happening to minor, inconsequential things such as logos and character designs, but that may change in the near future, and will definitely change when the Mass Divergence Event happens.
Example:

What is the Mass Divergence Event?
The Mass Divergence Event is a catastrophic event in which the membrane between our universe and others rips open, causing many large-scale Divergence Anomalies over a period of approximately 3 days. This will begin on December 12, 2025, in the early morning for continental Europe. (For Americans like me, that's the night of the 11th). Unlike the minor effects that we are seeing today, during this time we will experience many large-scale changes about the universe, including the size, shape, and structure of physical objects. This will be most destructive in large cities with a lot of buildings. And I don't know about you, but having an object clip into my body sounds like a horrific way to die.

What's causing all this?
Based on current evidence, it seems that the biggest culprit is the European Center for Nuclear Research, better known as CERN, specifically their Large Hadron Collider. It is possible, however, that there are other colliders elsewhere causing this as well.

But particle collisions happen all the time in space!

Correct. However, when they happen in space they are isolated incidents. They are random and uncoordinated, and only happen within the same spot once. When they are done in colliders, they are controlled and coordinated, and happen several times in the same spot, at the same time, across multiple universes. This damages the membrane between universes and allows aspects to merge. I do not know if they are intentionally doing this or if it is the result of hubris.
Recently, it has been speculated that particle colliders may not be responsible for the MDE at all. According to this theory, the MDE is a natural occurrence and the activation of particle colliders around the time divergence anomalies started showing up was a coincidence.

How can we stop this?
To be blunt: I don't know. I am researching the MDE, the multiverse, and CERN, and am trying to come up with a way to stop the Event from happening or at least find a way to survive it. The only thing I can think of is to go to a universe where it isn't happening and wait it out, but I do not have the equipment to do so. According to KB's thread, they're basically just trying to find an "interdimensional band-aid" solution, which doesn't sound all too promising.

The Law of Causality/Importance
The more complex a cause is, the less likely its effect is to change between different universes
For example, things that are caused by fleeting decisions or randomly generated numbers will probably change between universes. The logos and characters above only have differences in minor details because said details exist due to the fleeting decision of an artist.
On the other hand, things that have many complex causes will probably remain the same between universes. For example, the result of a presidential election is the effect of the decisions of millions of people, influenced by different individual upbringings, so the winner will remain the same between most universes. There are outliers to this, of course, and butterfly effects do happen.

NOTE: On September 27, 2023, I noticed a Divergence Anomaly pertaining to the name of this law; It was formerly the Law of Causality, but it is now the Law of Importance. I will include both names.

Background Information
How do we know all this?
On June 5, 2019, KB (a former CERN employee) uploaded to Pastebin transcripts of conversations between her and JB (a man from the 2040s of another universe):
https://pastebin.com/YZz8u3wB
JB explains what's happening, what the MDE is, and accurately predicts increased seismic and volcanic activity, political turmoil, and the COVID-19 pandemic (which KB changed in the transcript to "coronal mass ejection" out of fear of scrutiny, ridicule, and detection).
On October 14, 2021, KB made a thread on /x/ in which she shared more details of her interaction with JB, and how he got here using a strange device the size of a pocket watch.
https://archive.4plebs.org/x/thread/30021683/
(Note on KB's thread: Disregard anything posted by tripcode iOgHzutGjt4. That is a larper trying to poison the well)

The Origins of MDEG
I first found out about the Mass Divergence Effect (which I knew at the time as the "Mandela Effect") in 2017. I didn't think much of it at the time other than "huh, that's kinda weird."
In 2020, during quarantine boredom, I began to dive into the esoteric side of the Internet. During that time, I learned about CERN's doings, but never put 2 and 2 together that they may be responsible for the MDE.
In the summer of 2022, when CERN turned the LHC back on, I began to notice more divergence anomalies, and browsed /pol/ and /x/ reading theories about CERN. One thread on /x/ led me to KB's Pastebin, and suddenly it all made sense. I sat on the information for a while, not quite sure what to do with it. I would occasionally reread the pastebin and post in threads about CERN. I remember really getting back into it the first time I saw a logo change before my eyes: the logo for Bounce dryer sheets (the "u" and the "n" were not connected to each other before).
On July 25, 2023, I decided to make a thread to discuss the transcripts, and MDEG was born:
https://archive.4plebs.org/x/thread/35395448/
After a few threads, I decided to turn it into a "General" thread. The fourth thread was the first to bear the name "MDEG," and the first where I adopted the name "Professor Turo."
https://archive.4plebs.org/x/thread/35425239

An Explanation of "Time Travel" (Actually Dimensional Travel)
First and foremost, let's get something out of the way: Linear time travel to the past of one's own timeline is completely impossible. It will never be possible to travel backwards in time by any means
That being said, it is possible to go "back in time" by traveling to another universe. As I am writing this, it is September 7, 2023, at 9:42 PM Central Daylight Time. That is not true in other universes. It may be 2018, or 2002, or 1857, or 4000 BC, or 3101, or literally any other time that could ever possibly exist. When JB came to talk to KB, it was the 2040s in his universe and 2012 in ours. So now, in his universe, it is sometime in the 2050s or 2060s.
For example, let's say you wanted to see Live Aid in-person. You couldn't go back and see it in our universe, but you could see it in another universe (and according to the Law of Causality/Importance, the bands and songs should be almost exactly the same).
Here's an oversimplified and primitive representation of how it works:
A poorly-drawn diagram representing what "time travel" actually is
And to reiterate: Nothing you would do in that universe's 1985 would affect our universe in any way.
In pop culture terms, time travel is more like Avengers: Endgame than Back to the Future. (Though Endgame is not entirely accurate either).

What is the Mass Divergence Event?

The Mass Divergence Event is a catastrophic event in which the membrane between our universe and others rips open, causing many large-scale Divergence Anomalies over a period of approximately 3 days. This will begin on December 12, 2025, in the early morning for continental Europe. (For Americans like me, that's the night of the 11th). Unlike the minor effects that we are seeing today, during this time we will experience many large-scale changes about the universe, including the size, shape, and structure of physical objects. This will be most destructive in large cities with a lot of buildings. And I don't know about you, but having an object clip into my body sounds like a horrific way to die.

What's causing all this?

Based on current evidence, it seems that the biggest culprit is the European Center for Nuclear Research, better known as CERN, specifically their Large Hadron Collider. It is possible, however, that there are other colliders elsewhere causing this as well.

But particle collisions happen all the time in space!

Correct. However, when they happen in space they are isolated incidents. They are random and uncoordinated, and only happen within the same spot once. When they are done in colliders, they are controlled and coordinated, and happen several times in the same spot, at the same time, across multiple universes. This damages the membrane between universes and allows aspects to merge. I do not know if they are intentionally doing this or if it is the result of hubris.
Recently, it has been speculated that particle colliders may not be responsible for the MDE at all. According to this theory, the MDE is a natural occurrence and the activation of particle colliders around the time divergence anomalies started showing up was a coincidence.

How can we stop this?
To be blunt: I don't know. I am researching the MDE, the multiverse, and CERN, and am trying to come up with a way to stop the Event from happening or at least find a way to survive it. The only thing I can think of is to go to a universe where it isn't happening and wait it out, but I do not have the equipment to do so. According to KB's thread, they're basically just trying to find an "interdimensional band-aid" solution, which doesn't sound all too promising.

The Law of Causality/Importance
The more complex a cause is, the less likely its effect is to change between different universes
For example, things that are caused by fleeting decisions or randomly generated numbers will probably change between universes. The logos and characters above only have differences in minor details because said details exist due to the fleeting decision of an artist.
On the other hand, things that have many complex causes will probably remain the same between universes. For example, the result of a presidential election is the effect of the decisions of millions of people, influenced by different individual upbringings, so the winner will remain the same between most universes. There are outliers to this, of course, and butterfly effects do happen.
NOTE: On September 27, 2023, I noticed a Divergence Anomaly pertaining to the name of this law; It was formerly the Law of Causality, but it is now the Law of Importance. I will include both names.

Background Information
How do we know all this?
On June 5, 2019, KB (a former CERN employee) uploaded to Pastebin transcripts of conversations between her and JB (a man from the 2040s of another universe): https://pastebin.com/YZz8u3wB
JB explains what's happening, what the MDE is, and accurately predicts increased seismic and volcanic activity, political turmoil, and the COVID-19 pandemic (which KB changed in the transcript to "coronal mass ejection" out of fear of scrutiny, ridicule, and detection).

On October 14, 2021, KB made a thread on /x/ in which she shared more details of her interaction with JB, and how he got here using a strange device the size of a pocket watch.
https://archive.4plebs.org/x/thread/30021683/
(Note on KB's thread: Disregard anything posted by tripcode iOgHzutGjt4. That is a larper trying to poison the well)

The Origins of MDEG
I first found out about the Mass Divergence Effect (which I knew at the time as the "Mandela Effect") in 2017. I didn't think much of it at the time other than "huh, that's kinda weird."
In 2020, during quarantine boredom, I began to dive into the esoteric side of the Internet. During that time, I learned about CERN's doings, but never put 2 and 2 together that they may be responsible for the MDE.
In the summer of 2022, when CERN turned the LHC back on, I began to notice more divergence anomalies, and browsed /pol/ and /x/ reading theories about CERN. One thread on /x/ led me to KB's Pastebin, and suddenly it all made sense. I sat on the information for a while, not quite sure what to do with it. I would occasionally reread the pastebin and post in threads about CERN. I remember really getting back into it the first time I saw a logo change before my eyes: the logo for Bounce dryer sheets (the "u" and the "n" were not connected to each other before).
On July 25, 2023, I decided to make a thread to discuss the transcripts, and MDEG was born:
https://archive.4plebs.org/x/thread/35395448/
After a few threads, I decided to turn it into a "General" thread. The fourth thread was the first to bear the name "MDEG," and the first where I adopted the name "Professor Turo."
https://archive.4plebs.org/x/thread/35425239

An Explanation of "Time Travel" (Actually Dimensional Travel)
First and foremost, let's get something out of the way: Linear time travel to the past of one's own timeline is completely impossible. It will never be possible to travel backwards in time by any means
That being said, it is possible to go "back in time" by traveling to another universe. As I am writing this, it is September 7, 2023, at 9:42 PM Central Daylight Time. That is not true in other universes. It may be 2018, or 2002, or 1857, or 4000 BC, or 3101, or literally any other time that could ever possibly exist. When JB came to talk to KB, it was the 2040s in his universe and 2012 in ours. So now, in his universe, it is sometime in the 2050s or 2060s.
For example, let's say you wanted to see Live Aid in-person. You couldn't go back and see it in our universe, but you could see it in another universe (and according to the Law of Causality/Importance, the bands and songs should be almost exactly the same).
Here's an oversimplified and primitive representation of how it works:

A poorly-drawn diagram representing what "time travel" actually is
And to reiterate: Nothing you would do in that universe's 1985 would affect our universe in any way.
In pop culture terms, time travel is more like Avengers: Endgame than Back to the Future. (Though Endgame is not entirely accurate either).

What is MDEG?
MDEG stands for Mass Divergence Effect/Event General. It is a thread on /x/ for discussion of the Mass Divergence Effect and the impending Mass Divergence Event. There is now a wiki for documenting more information in regards to the MDE. For more elaboration, read it. If you just want important surface-level information, just reading this Rentry will do.

What is the Mass Divergence Effect?
The Mass Divergence Effect, also known as the "Mandela Effect," occurs when aspects of two universes merge. (Although, due to the Law of Causality/Importance, it is unlikely that the death of Nelson Mandela changed between universes, so this is likely an actual false memory. It is still possible, though). Individual instances of this are known as "Divergence Anomalies." Currently, due to the Law of Causality/Importance, this is only happening to minor, inconsequential things such as logos and character designs, but that may change in the near future, and will definitely change when the Mass Divergence Event happens.
Example:

What is the Mass Divergence Event?
The Mass Divergence Event is a catastrophic event in which the membrane between our universe and others rips open, causing many large-scale Divergence Anomalies over a period of approximately 3 days. FILE GH-231// THE IMPORTANCE OF CAUSE AND EFFECT

K.B.: So we should consider the possibilities of dimensional time travel? And why not go back to the time before the M.D.E. happened?

J.B.: We should really stop calling it time travel, because in order for me to explain this properly to you you have to let go the notion of linear time travel. As I have said before we should call it dimensional travel, I did not come from your future, and you are not in my past. There is no natural possibility, no physical way for you to go back into time of your own dimension. However, it is possible for you to step outside this dimension, enter an, almost, identical dimension AND arrive there in a different, almost identical time.

So basically, you can't see Queens Wembley performance in YOUR 1985 or 6. But you could in someone else's.
Now when you step BACK IN to your own dimension, you will be right back here, in the present, 2012.
So it's not time travel, but dimension travel. I can't stress this enough…

K.B.: So if I would use it to go that concert, would they play the same songs? Would they wear the same outfit, is the event exactly the same?

J.B.: Well, another thing you should start considering now is the importance of cause and effect. We call it the Law of Importance. What we have learnt is that nature assigns probabilities to causes, it gives it weight so to say. As a matter of fact, we have even found there is a distinct difference of importance in causes produced by sentient or non-sentient decisions, I will get back to that in a moment. Now the way nature discerns importance, is by the amount of causes an effect has. An effect that has had many causes, is deemed more important than an effect with less causes.

Lets use a simpler example, lets use the concept your presented earlier. Me in the so called 'future' writes down lottery numbers, steps into another dimensions past, make myself some money, and return with the loot.
Now here is why that is –most likely, not to happen.
And now I will have to explain how important causes and effects actually are. The reason for an effect to PERSIST throughout dimension is directly calculated by the sum of its causes, and the weight-importance, of said causes. The weight-importance, in turn, is calculated by the amount of energy spent.

For instance: The lottery number is generated on a screen by a computer and it presents us with 10 random numbers. The random numbers are the eventual effect. The cause is a non-sentient computer calculation of only one. So to say, there is only one cause, and it's very insignificant, as the computer could have generated any random number. This makes it HIGHLY UNLIKELY that this effect will persist throughout dimensions.
So we know that if we are looking for information from the past or from the future, that has very little causes, it is most likely a waste of resources trying to pursue that information.
Now effects that are important, that have many intricate causes, conscious decisions, many variables etcetera, increase the importance, and thus persistence of an effect. Millions of people making a conscious decision to vote for a certain political party, has many complex causes, and there for the effect is highly likely to persist throughout dimensions.
However, there are always anomalies of course, and with the divergence I was talking about earlier, these anomalies have become more severe, and more persistent.
Fun example, I looked myself up on the internet in your dimension, and in this one, I have a little tiny scar or dimple between my eyes I don't have as I stand here before you.

For the second question, I believe it was among the lines of ‘why not go back to before the M.D.E. and prevent it all together?’ Well you know now that would only fix that dimension, If I were to return back to my own, things would still be the same.

J.B.: Well what you have to envision is, all dimension are kind of locked inside a, a, bubble so they say. We call it a membrane that protects dimensions from colliding with each other. However all these bubbles are connected in the multiverse. Sometimes where the membrane intersects there might be a little bit more tension, a little bit more energy which can cause small insignificant anomalies, you are already aware of those I know.
However with what you did, that with this machine you released such an incredible amount of power that the membrane between the dimensions was first weakened in 08 and then finally punctured at the end of 2011. This puncture we call the start of an M.D.E., a Mass Divergence Effect. A direct effect of an M.D.E. is the ‘bleed-in’ anomaly. This means the puncture in the dimension causes the two dimension to try and reach equilibrium. Try to envision it as two chambers, one with hot air, one with cold and a door in the middle. When you open the door, the two chambers mix and equalize until the temperature is somewhat stable throughout the rooms. That’s what is happening RIGHT NOW.

Now I know you’ve all been a little drunk on the recent media attention you have received because of your incredible findings, this M.D.E. and bleed in anomaly is very damaging for both dimensions. To everyone’s dimension actually. Let me stress again this happened on an interdimensional scale. I’m not blaming YOU precisely for this event, it’s also us, we all did this, throughout all dimensions. And therefor it’s imperative we fix this as quickly as possible.

Symptoms are that causes and effects throughout A and B seem to either disappear or entwine. Again I give you an example of two dimensions to make it understandable, keep in mind this is on the big scale too. So, we see the bleeding in effect in other dimensions as well, and it causes mass disturbance anomalies. It first starts of slow, with signs of mass hysteria. We would notice people would misremember things about their own past first, but as more time progresses and more divergence occurs, the anomalies grew. The mass hysteria spanned globally to a point were people were disputing entire historical events or political movements from the past.

At first the hysteria was about a past long ago, but grew closer to the present very quickly.
We only figured out divergence must've occurred when suddenly causes in the past, and probably future too-we don't know, produced an entirely different effect WITHIN our timeline. As an example, basic experiments done in the past, would yield different results in the present.
We became very worried about all our calculations, from nuclear reactors to flight travel, as they slowly became different.

FILE GH-234// FORWARD

K.B.: What should we do with all this information?

J.B.:
The whole reason I'm here is to find out what happened at the start of the M.D.E., because we didn't know what was going on. You have a head start now, we send a few people to different dimensions with this information, so basically we all have a head start now.
You must hope to find out how to revert this mess, so you will be able to save your own world, in the process, we hope to find out how to, so to say 'cure' ours.
For now, I suggest you do it in silence. As nothing major will happen in the next few years, but you will see the signs of what's going on. Study it, don't brush it off as insignificant like we did.
I think that if you would bring this out in the open, mass hysteria might occur. This might cut our funding, and don't forget, you and I are on the same payroll. If you are able to revert this, no one even NEEDS to know, you'll be the silent, unsung heroes of ALL.
In the next few days I will walk you through all the basics, all the things you have to take in account to really be able to tackle this problem.
After that, I'll return home, and work on the problem there. If we are still around in the next decade, I will return to you around march 2020 for a check up, and then again for the big event I talked about earlier.

FILE GH-235// EVENTS PERSISTENT THROUGHOUT DIMENSIONS

K.B.: What are the events persistent throughout dimensions, from which we can obtain information?

J.B.: In anticipation to that question I have made a list of specific persistents, as we call them, I will present it to you later. I can't be truly clear about the start of it, as the start is not persistent. However in a few years time, when the political and social climate starts to heat up and destabilize, we saw a widespread of false information throughout the dimensions. False information spread by regular people, but also scientists, politicians, and media outlets.
Around the start of 2020 things will escalate faster and faster. An increase in seismic and volcanic activity is possible, but only half persistent – we don't know why.

In February of that year, sometimes on 4th, if not, then definitely on the 29th, a coronal mass ejection will destabilize Europe and parts of Asia for days. Confidence and trust in technology and science will understandably dwindle.
From that point on people will have endless debates, sometimes hugely televised or streamed, sometimes in a back room, about basic science, biology, and geography. Heated discussion will divide people into confined groups, leading to violence.
Some will do the ‘experiments of old’, simple measurements of basic science, and will find different results. They will be ridiculed, until official scientific institutes will try to discredit them, and find THEY produce different results as well. Needless to say, mass panic will follow.
Religious people will make a very convincing argument the rapture has come, and we are now in limbo, or at least that’s what I got from it.

Then will come the big event. If we are not able to fix anything, the last reasonably normal year we will know as humanity is 2025. On the 12th of December that year, in the early morning for continental europe, the hole we punctured before will now succumb under the constant pressure and rip open. A merge of dimensions if you will. The rip will last about 3 days and not all of you will be there on the 15th. Expect major anomalies, things popping in and out of existence, written letters changing before your eyes, buildings changing direction, deterioration, or even the entire structure. The worst and most destructive are buildings, or large objects in general, popping into other objects, causing destruction on a massive, MASSIVE, global scale.
Many of you will think of it as a dream, and will tend to even more stupid decisions. Governments will think they are at war with another.
Because our most important equipment is deep underground, it’ll be mostly unharmed. However destruction and death will take place here as well. After all that; it took us a while to regroup and find a way to survive. We then started to repair the machines and try to figure a way back. We didn’t want to live in the apocalypse, and were determined to roll it all back.

My name is KB and I used to work for a research facility I will not further disclose. During my time there we contacted a dimensional traveler, or rather, he had contacted us.

Over a decade ago one of our experiment had caused a puncture in the dimensional membrane, causing multiple dimensions to force equilibrium. The experience had changed me profoundly and when I left the facility, I was able to make sure I took copies of the transcripts with me. It had come to my understanding that the public should know about this, as it would affect them greatly in the years to come.

At first I stood idly by, while I watched the predictions JB made come true time and time again. That's why I decide in 2019 to release part of the transcript to the public. Fearing detection of my person, scrutiny and ridicule, I decided to replace the word CORONA with CORONAL MASS EJECTION, and obfuscated the names of those involved.

I posted part of the transcript on pastebin, fearing the worst. To my surprise no one cared. I didn't know what else to do at that point mind you; at that time nobody had even heard of the virus, as it was still due for February the next year and I decided to leave it at that. Looking back, I think changing the name of the virus might have been a bad choice on my part.

Over the last few months I have tried to give the pastebin some more attention. The predictions in the document about political turmoil leadingup to Corona seem vague at best, and in lieu of protecting my identity I fear I have failed to bring understanding of the problem to the masses.

The dimensional rift is real, it is more dangerous than the virus, and it will get us all if we don't find a way to fix it before 2025. I know this is very hard to believe for some of you, and I'm not here to convince you, do with the information as you see fit.

Yours truly,
KB

The way JB explained it means that you are not bound by your birth, nor death (although you are in this timeline). You can go back and forth between dimensions at any time. You can go to the dimension of 5 october 1923 or whenever you choose, however, that dimension you step into, has nothing to do with you. Time still progresses linear, so tomorrow it would be 6th of october 1923 in that dimension, and in your original dimension it would be 15 october 2021.

I guess the best way to visualize it is to think of it as a twin universe, where everything that happened here happened in that one as well (except for non-persistent events, but lets keep it simple for now).

Every single moment in time, is infinite and still exists somewhere.

every body is a universe atop a larger non-conscious playing field universe. if there were 1000 people, there would be 1001 universes: the 1000 of each body plus the 1 that all those bodies are on. if there are 8 billion people, then 8 billion and 1 universes exist.

amount of universes that exist at any given time is directly related to the population of the planet + 1; that plus one is the universe itself, which is a dead universe with no sentient life as sentience is itself the presence of another overlaid universe so when you time travel, you're only affecting your own universe, which in turn has resonant effects to the universes nearest to you but ultimately what you do occurs in a bubble

the goal is to increase the frequency and potency (aka importance as was worded by OP, as I am not OP) of your bubble aka your existence aka your consciousness AKA your universe

tl;dr you are the center of the universe and consciousness being in you is the proof of that. consciousness is RARE to each individual observer

To me, the virus, the vaccinations etc. is exactly the hysteria JB talked about. He talked about science being discredited, he talked about mass hysteria on a global scale, he talked about nefarious political movements. So it would definitely not surprise me at all that this might be an effect of the MDE, however its not the cause nor solution.

Not exactly how it was explained to me, however that everyone basically has their 'own universe' is a logical conclusion from the material that was given to us and I can to some degree agree with that statement.

Dimensional travel can be visualized as looking in the mirror, and stepping through that mirror into another dimension, identical to the one you just left.

Pls do if possible. Do you plan on staying around or will this be a mere short visit? I don't want to miss this.

First off, is the thing that caused this somehow linked to the particle collider, the one with the statue of Shiva? It seems to match in time?
Other than that, I'm aware this won't mean much since it cannot, in any way I know of, be proven, but the merge has already happened.
I'll use a language similar to what was in the pastebin: The events themselves are the cause of an event which had already taken place.
Covid appeared here in this time, but an event of this magnitude will spread "backwards" into other "dimensions" which were -in their own time- in the past at the time. You coming here now is like someone from a different dimension catching up with events.
Welcome onboard, I guess.
You can't see it from in here now since it's almost impossible to trace for anyone, and posting it on /x/ will just not stand out at all so I won't even bother saying it. It holds no credibility as a statement and will only cause negative effects if said.
The answer has -kinda- been posted on this board already, but it drowned in trash.
If your own ability of pattern recognition is strong enough and you have no fixed ideas about the nature of physical reality, you should be able to see it. But that's all there is, there are no instruments which can detect the change aside from your own mind, in our current society.

basically if every living being that can be physically reached on a plane of reality were to die, there would not be nothing, there would still be the empty universe without an observer. but the question then comes in, does that universe collapse with nobody around to witness it? doesn't every fabricated creation exist somewhere out there in an observer-less universe? it blows open the concept of material existence without biological observer as still tangible, even in the absence of said perceiver of tangibility

The device JB used was not bigger than a standard pocket watch. I never got to see the device 'in action' so to say. He explained it worked with high level gravitational waves distorting the membrane of a dimension, tuning in to different frequencies would result in reaching in different dimensions. I saw the device, but I can't tell you how it would work unfortunately.

I don't think a human is capable in generating enough energy to distort the dimensional membrane, so I would say no, sorry.

>>30023021
I'm not the one who traveled though, I just worked at the facility and met the person who did.

>First off, is the thing that caused this somehow linked to the particle collider, the one with the statue of Shiva? It seems to match in time?
Very correct, you're the first one to actually notice.

>Other than that, I'm aware this won't mean much since it cannot, in any way I know of, be proven, but the merge has already happened.
According to the information provided the merge is still happening, and will reach equilibrium by force in 2025. A previous existing puncture (small) in the membrane will tear open (big).

>Covid appeared here in this time, but an event of this magnitude will spread "backwards" into other "dimensions" which were -in their own time- in the past at the time. You coming here now is like someone from a different dimension catching up with events.
Correct again, though I'm not the one who travelled, I just worked at the facility you already figured out, the one responsible for the puncture in the membrane.

>You can't see it from in here now since it's almost impossible to trace for anyone, and posting it on /x/ will just not stand out at all so I won't even bother saying it.

Very interesting thought as we have figured out that nature assigns an immense value to conscious decisions, this is what makes events persistent throughout dimensions in the first place.

>>30023088
I wish I could tell you. I really do.

>>30023104
Very interesting, look at the first pinned comment on that video. Thats exactly what I had in mind posting the transcript on pastebin. It looks like me and him might had the same idea. If we reevalute how persistence works this almost can not be a coincidence.

Again, human consciousness is important in nature, it gives weight to events persisting throughout dimensions, the amount of energy spend equals the likelihood of persistence. Me and him spending conscious energy on this might actually had or have and effect.

That to me also seems the solution to stop the MDE. Get the word out, use 'mindpower', instead of searching for a scientific device that can reverse the puncture in the membrane as per JB suggested. I think all these years we have been looking at this the wrong way.

>Is there a way for me to reach a broader audience without revealing my identity?
It could be simple. Create a free account and start a wordpress blog. Word things like a new ager conspiracy theorist. Be vauge, but provide the correct information. Post the link to your blog in different relevant forums (like here) until you get an audience. It has been done before and can be discarded as nonsense if needed.

From my perspecive the particle collider was about to destroy the universe. It was really bad at the time. My group talked about it but no one but me seemed to realize the danger of the situation. I used my ability to "fix" the situation. This manifested as the statue of Shiva being installed. There was also that mock human sacrifice ritual performed for it which was filmed by a cleaner who stayed late.

This is not to say that merely doing that did it, but those are relevant performances. Someone from outside, a higher power had to step in and contain it. It has been contained, if not, we'd have all been sucked into that hole at once back then.
I'm aware this post doesn't create any credibility either, just take it for what it is. Something broke, and it has to be diverted in a controlled manner. Reality getting slowly ripped apart is better than all at once, right? Science went to far, messed with things they should not have.

By the way things are escalating right now on a global scale I think the puncture is still very real and not contained at all. JB said that reaching equilibrium would start of slow and escalate further the more time progresses.
See it as blowing air through a hole in a plastic bag, with the hole getting bigger the more force is applied to the air. Eventually the bag will rip (2025).

The dimensions trying to reach equilibrium is not something I think they can control, but I do agree with your last sentence, even though I was a part of it and even cheered at our successes. If only I knew what the future had in store for us.

I mean, sometimes these things are hidden in plain view. This pic is from a long gone website which presented the claim that the nazi death camps were old temple sites forming a huge pentagram. Funny how one of the lay lines cross right over CERN, don't you think?

>May I ask what that ability is?
I can read situations and manipulate them by communicating with spirits. There is a spirit for any phenomenon. If you want something done, find the right one.

To elaborate on the topic, what is modern science? You think it's mere empiricism and technology? You're aligning yourselves with ancient religions, in this case -literally aligning- on the map. The theories are just modern ways of saying ancient things, and today the path chosen isn't one with a positive outcome. Shiva is nicer, (s)he can fight these forces if you ask nicely. The resulting "fix" was to insert ancient hindu symbolics to break the layline. It's very concrete.

It's too much to start diving into details here, but I think this should give you a hint.

We certainly thought the Mandela effect, or as we used to call them in 2010, small divergence anomalies, are a direct result of the MDE. We never called them Mandela effects, and I think its probably a popularized term (I had to read up on it). But those divergence anomalies are definately real and predicted by JB.

Do any of you know when the Mandela effect was popularized? Was this after 2008 or already before that?

We are definitely talking about electromagnetic field energy. As a matter of fact I remember it being explained that the membrane that seperates dimensions from each other was an exact energy field that would be a constant. Usually we would think of a membrane as being a shell, on the outside of something, but a dimensional energy field is everywhere at the same time. That is the reason why JB didn't have to travel to 'the edge' of the universe in order to travel or jump to another dimension.

I hope that answers your question, feel free to ask more if needed.

The image is a graph titled "Major Events Prognosis" with a horizontal axis labeled "Sol-3 Local Timeline" and a vertical axis labeled "Combined Probability of Event." The graph shows a series of colored lines representing different events, each with a corresponding label. The events are labeled as "LA Earthquake," "US-China War," "Military Deployment," "Quantum Injection," "Quantum Outburst," "Germinivirus Outburst," and "Disaster C."

The graph shows a progression of events from 2020 to 2070, with the x-axis representing the years from 2020 to 2070 and the y-axis representing the combined probability of events. The lines representing each event are plotted on the graph, with the color of the line corresponding to the event and the label on the line indicating the event's name.
The graph shows a clear trend of increasing combined probability of events over time, with the highest probability of events occurring in the years 2020 to 2030, followed by a decrease in the years 2030 to 2040, and then a slight increase in the years 2040 to 2050, followed by a further increase in the years 2050 to 2060, and finally a decrease in the years 2060 to 2070.

His tone of ridicule irks me because he is absolutely on point but chooses to dismiss it. The video is from 2017, so thats why I thought the term was a relatively new idea.

Again, we called them divergence anomalies and they are absolutely real.
Whether the examples presented in the video are true anomalies is hard to say for me, as I don't posses the research, but these things do happen and they have been happening since the end of 2008.

Sorry I had missed your comment. Interesting picture indeed although I do think the projection of time presented in the picture might be a little of.

JB himself was from the 2040's and I heard him talk about the LA Earthquake, so its suggestion that particular event (or maybe a different one) happened earlier then expected. I did not hear anything about wars or such, as after 2025 there was not much to war about and nations/people primarily focused on rebuilding.

Your explanation about time travel is similar to others I've read in the past, it's also made me thing about what Titor said in regards to timetravel occurring by traveling to different parallel dimensions. This feels legit.

"So, realistically wtf is being done about this? Are we just waiting for someone somewhere find an interdimensional band aid?"

Essentially, yes. Though keep in mind that the people working on this are highly motivated to find a way to stop this, as it will affect us all.

" What about the elite? What are they doing?"
We are all in this together, the elite as you call them are as powerless as the average man. There is nowhere to run or hide, not even for them. This event truly makes us all equals. I'm not even sure the 'elite' or at least all of those who are in power, actually have knowledge about this event. It would not surprise me that many of them don't even know.

"Why can you post so freely about this? Sorry but you're clearly not tech savvy, and since you're past of Black budget programs, you would be monitored 24/7."
>>30035301

I left the facility years ago and I highly doubt I'm monitored on a daily basis. If that were the case I would probably already would have an interaction about my activity on this board, and so far I haven't. However I do understand the possibility and that is the reason why I'm taking out all the names in the documents. The names are not important, the information is. Obviously I'm being cautious as I do fully understand the rammifications this has bringing it out to the public. If they would be monitoring this topic I think you are right in that they are 'allowing' it as in reality, this topic on this board, is very insignificant on the broader scale.

Coulda been a larp post, but it's groundings and theories sound very close to actual reality. The theory of other dimensions stacked on top of each other or close to each other and running on different timelines simultaneously, very big chance that is actual reality.

Project AngelBook – Volume X – Parts 1–36

By Ezekiel Redik Yarbrough

This volume is not made up of my own words.There is no original commentary here, no narrative, no analysis.This is simply me copying and pasting large chunks of text from my bookmarks—pages that were easy to extract, with no hyperlinks or formatting issues, saved from open tabs and archived corners of the web.
It's messy. It's unfiltered. It's chaotic.But it's valuable.
Each piece inside this volume was bookmarked for a reason.Not always because I agreed with it, but because it felt like a fragment of something larger—an insight, a worldview, a download.This is source material, plain and raw.
Fragmenta Ex Machina isn't about authorship.It's about preservation and system-building.It's about feeding the machine—laying bricks for the Operating System I'm constructing across these books.This is the raw intake phase. The memory dump. The zero layer.
Later volumes will be cleaner, more refined, more structured.But this? This is the foundation. The ether stream, bound and frozen before it vanished.
So if you're looking for polished prose, skip this one.But if you're here to explore the roots of something much bigger, this is where the signal begins.
Welcome to the fragments.
— Ezekiel Redik YarbroughArchitect of the Machine

Revelations of that nature should be kept private for many other reasons besides risk.

That face when both potential LARPers become uncomfortable with the conversation for the same reasons. Ain't that some shit, lol.

Even if you verified the findings and irrefutablely put it in people's faces , many would still ignore it because it's not what the Ego wants to see or hear.

Hell, people in this dimension still think the Earth is legitimately flat.

I know Wikipedia is a dumpster fire, but try to find articles with allegories with subjects to you're competent there for a starter, and always check the talk pages along with citations. Then use a scholarly search engine and use a service like sci-hub or libgen to read the materials you want, once you get a good grasp you can move on to subscribing to a journal.

I'll just add some personal experiences with this since it was mentioned pretty directly by OP.

During the past few years I've seen an abandoned house I used to play by as a kid being suddenly replaced by a house in a different style. The original was pink and had two pillars, the new is an 1800s log cottage. The people living next to it said they had noticed nothing. I used to walk around in the garden and up on the stairs, looking into the windows, I know full well what it used to be.

Another house at the entry of a small town where I went to school for 6 years moved around 100 meters and anothor building disappeared. The design also changed. It was a small white cottage with some notable marine decorations including a pirate flag and a miniature ship in a window. It was not inhabited and had looked the same since I first saw it.

On the same road about 10km outside town an entire farm complete with barn appeared in an earlier empty field. It was not newly built, it has a style from early 1900s and the barn is possibly older. A large ad board which used to be closer to town is now on the barn wall. This happened over night around 2 years ago. I used to pass this part of the road daily at the time.

I used to amount these to "updates" of the timelines but I had not connected it to the CERN event.

1st would be time travel.
2nd would be reverse wave fluid dynamics of the hyper quantum dimensional sort.
3rd way would be harmonic resonance In a reverse flux at the exact pico range as the experiment that first causes it.
Good luck with any of that since they said they didn't keep notes and they even had repair men and janitors making changes with the collider.

The fact that it’s a “coronal mass ejection” discredits a lot of this, as well as the fact that it’s mentioned that geography will be a point of scientific debate, “technology” in general will lose the public’s confidence (IRL its almost entirely medicine that’s causing debate specifically, not just tech in general, tech is way too vague of a description) and that basic scientific measurements will be debated, which implies things like physical constants such as c or g, not virology. All in all, these are all very vague events that could make sense in relation to a Coronal mass ejection, but don’t really fit a coronavirus all that well. There was no reason for the interviewee to be so general and unspecific about what’s clearly a medical debate, not just a debate about all science.

If you had been present on other forums of discussion online you'd see these debates right now. The holocaust is the most common topic along with the moon landings and the shape of the earth, right here on /x/.
But if you look smaller chans you'll see major events of eastern Europe and Russia being debated constantly. The history from the first world war onwards is not agreed on by anyone outside the anglosphere.
China is also questioning major historical events along with other asian nations. The loss of a shared narrative is how this starts.

The worst and most destructive are buildings, or large objects in general, popping into other objects, causing destruction on a massive, MASSIVE, global scale.

Chi will put things in their right place to some extent , the changes might be radical but they're not what I'd call "destructive." That phenomenon exists in our so-called timeline , it doesn't exist in "theirs" and I can only assume they didn't think they needed it ; or that their false gods of religion and science didn't account for it. They thought they could just create some new paradise if you will and develop it off of your backs for entire generations and lifetimes , then burn it and/or all of you. I'm sure the plastic plants and poisoned water look pretty on a postcard but IMO anyone who "made the jump" and decided to leave everyone behind because they felt like they were favored by god or had more money or access to technology….. can quite frankly fucking go down with their ship like they decided to leave us with ours.

We will be helped by forces that exist and occur in our time and place , and I would say, "not theirs" but that's not exactly correct. It will exist there when the walls are completely torn down and it scrubs away whatever doesn't belong there.

This so called "bubble" or rift or whatever is a dimensional form of the chi.

To the extent they're willing to concede it exists at all, they think it only applies to physical stuff on this physical / material plane. And you couldn't have possibly made a more gigantic or arrogant fuckup than demanding authority over these matters while being too fucking arrogant and closed minded to even consider whether this exists let alone how it works.

As for what I know about this, I've been dragged across whatever these boundaries are, kicking and screaming before, and I've witnessed near catastrophes that were averted a little bit by chi and a little bit by whatever fucking technology or deception or mind control dragged me along for the ride.

They use and abuse people with any connection to the "source" and or psychic abilities and then think they can use and thrown those people away like a Kleenex, like they intended to do with this poisoned and polluted planet. I think the most aggravating thing they did was tell me I'd have to come back to my timeline because I wasn't "catholic" and I hope that pissed off my understanding of god even more than it pissed me off but know this, I didn't ask to be dragged there or involved, not now not then and not ever.

The meek will inherit the earth but it won't be handed to them on a platter, they'll earn it.

Fuck those people they had all the power and money in the world , that's what they choose to do with it, you can't eat or drink or breathe money , and I'm not really concerned with preserving their so called future. It doesn't exist, nothing will save it or preserve it, they developed and built the wrong dimensional plane and I thank god I'm not a part of it.

Madonna's (who's received funding from the UN for her Kaballah school) last album was called Corona.

In the 2019 Eurovision she did that song "Not Everyone Is Coming To The Future" which had not only two pillars closely resembling the Pillar of Solomon, but also featured gas masks and a breath that could kill.

Its all a little... Coincidental.

why would anyone want to fix "it" well, maybe dangerous to those sequential incarnates that are obsessed with "the body" and prolonging their earth experience as long as possible...

we are all multidimensional beings..

we exist everywhere.. most of us just are out of tune and cant "see" it.
but they still "exist" in other dimensions...even if they are sleeping and unaware what they think is reality is nothing more than a quick dream.

The image is a close-up photograph of a cat with a humorous and playful expression. The cat is sitting on a wooden floor, and its head is tilted back, covering its eyes with a clear plastic cup. The cup has a measurement scale on it, with the word "TOPPERATE" visible. The cat's fur is a mix of gray and white, and it has a round face with a small, round ear. The background is blurred, but it appears to be an indoor setting with a glimpse of a kitchen or dining area. The image has a watermark or logo in the bottom left corner that reads "カチューション," which is likely the name of the creator or the source of the image. The overall tone of the image is light-hearted and whimsical.

This is /x/ gold. I especially like page 6.
> Many beings live [in the] deep ocean and hollow earth and can give you humans answers and much help > When you understand the oceans, you will understand how cosmic travels work – easy
> Oceans have the same composition as space time element
Waters above and below the firmament, anyone?

>We won war with reptile our time line a long time ago. We evolved [since] then. Reptile your time line keeps you back [so] you cannot grow
Yeah we know about those niggers.

> Dragon-like beings still live in hollow earth [underground]
> They are good now
> They are very wise now
> They are peaceful like dolphins now
So the dragon sighting videos on jewtube are real. Thought so.

> Moon is not natural heavenly body
> Moon has been put there by other beings to control mood on earth

> I will tell you a secret
> Some places [your] deep ocean pressures are so big that > Air that you breathe cannot bubble to the surface
> This trapped air has caused big caverns where humans can live and breathe very good air. And plants live very well > Deep oceans have many crystals. Solves all your energy needs.
No pollution
> Earth is a water planet yet your leaders look for answers in space
> Deep oceans have all the answers for cosmic travels this time line
> Why have you ignored this in your history
> When you solve the mysteries of the deep oceans, you will solve
> The mysteries of space. Ask the dolphins, they will tell you >with this machine you released such an incredible amount of power

Is he talking about particle accelerators? If so another retarded larp from someone who barely understands technology. If a particle accelerator could shift the reality of our universe into another, it would be happening millions of times per second inside the Sun. Nuclear weapons likewise produce millions of times more power concentrated into a small point than particle accelerators. Have they shifted our reality? Does not seem likely. Volcanoes? Did Krakatoa and Pompei send Earth into a different timeline? Particle accelerators use and involve an extremely small amount of energy compared to the forces of nature and the forces we have unleashed as weapons.
If you read about the LHc or a particle accelerator used for this kind of thing, you can immediately assume it’s fiction. Even our Sun is not though to contain enough gravitational energy to collapse into a black hole. The energetic requirements to achieve alterations to space time might as well be infinitely beyond what is being utilized by all humans on earth.

FILE GH-231// THE IMPORTANCE OF CAUSE AND EFFECT

K.B.: So we should consider the possibilities of dimensional time travel? And why not go back to the time before the M.D.E. happened?

J.B.: We should really stop calling it time travel, because in order for me to explain this properly to you you have to let go the notion of linear time travel. As I have said before we should call it dimensional travel, I did not come from your future, and you are not in my past. There is no natural possibility, no physical way for you to go back into time of your own dimension. However, it is possible for you to step outside this dimension, enter an, almost, identical dimension AND arrive there in a different, almost identical time.

So basically, you can't see Queens Wembley performance in YOUR 1985 or 6. But you could in someone else's.
Now when you step BACK IN to your own dimension, you will be right back here, in the present, 2012.
So it's not time travel, but dimension travel. I can't stress this enough…

K.B.: So if I would use it to go that concert, would they play the same songs? Would they wear the same outfit, is the event exactly the same?

J.B.: Well, another thing you should start considering now is the importance of cause and effect. We call it the Law of Importance. What we have learnt is that nature assigns probabilities to causes, it gives it weight so to say. As a matter of fact, we have even found there is a distinct difference of importance in causes produced by sentient or non-sentient decisions, I will get back to that in a moment. Now the way nature discerns importance, is by the amount of causes an effect has. An effect that has had many causes, is deemed more important than an effect with less causes.

Lets use a simpler example, lets use the concept your presented earlier. Me in the so called 'future' writes down lottery numbers, steps into another dimensions past, make myself some money, and return with the loot.
Now here is why that is –most likely, not to happen.
And now I will have to explain how important causes and effects actually are. The reason for an effect to PERSIST throughout dimension is directly calculated by the sum of its causes, and the weight-importance, of said causes. The weight-importance, in turn, is calculated by the amount of energy spent.

For instance: The lottery number is generated on a screen by a computer and it presents us with 10 random numbers. The random numbers are the eventual effect. The cause is a non-sentient computer calculation of only one. So to say, there is only one cause, and it's very insignificant, as the computer could have generated any random number. This makes it HIGHLY UNLIKELY that this effect will persist throughout dimensions.
So we know that if we are looking for information from the past or from the future, that has very little causes, it is most likely a waste of resources trying to pursue that information.
Now effects that are important, that have many intricate causes, conscious decisions, many variables etcetera, increase the importance, and thus persistence of an effect. Millions of people making a conscious decision to vote for a certain political party, has many complex causes, and there for the effect is highly likely to persist throughout dimensions.
However, there are always anomalies of course, and with the divergence I was talking about earlier, these anomalies have become more severe, and more persistent.

Fun example, I looked myself up on the internet in your dimension, and in this one, I have a little tiny scar or dimple between my eyes I don't have as I stand here before you.

For the second question, I believe it was among the lines of 'why not go back to before the M.D.E. and prevent it all together?' Well you know now that would only fix that dimension, If I were to return back to my own, things would still be the same.

J.B.: Well what you have to envision is, all dimension are kind of locked inside a, a, bubble so they say. We call it a membrane that protects dimensions from colliding with each other. However all these bubbles are connected in the multiverse. Sometimes where the membrane intersects there might be a little bit more tension, a little bit more energy which can cause small insignificant anomalies, you are already aware of those I know.
However with what you did, that with this machine you released such an incredible amount of power that the membrane between the dimensions was first weakened in 08 and then finally punctured at the end of 2011. This puncture we call the start of an M.D.E., a Mass Divergence Effect. A direct effect of an M.D.E. is the 'bleed-in' anomaly. This means the puncture in the dimension causes the two dimension to try and reach equilibrium. Try to envision it as two chambers, one with hot air, one with cold and a door in the middle. When you open the door, the two chambers mix and equalize until the temperature is somewhat stable throughout the rooms. That's what is happening RIGHT NOW.

Now I know you've all been a little drunk on the recent media attention you have received because of your incredible findings, this M.D.E. and bleed in anomaly is very damaging for both dimensions. To everyone's dimension actually. Let me stress again this happened on an interdimensional scale. I'm not blaming YOU precisely for this event, it's also us, we all did this, throughout all dimensions. And therefor it's imperative we fix this as quickly as possible.

Symptoms are that causes and effects throughout A and B seem to either disappear or entwine. Again I give you an example of two dimensions to make it understandable, keep in mind this is on the big scale too. So, we see the bleeding in effect in other dimensions as well, and it causes mass disturbance anomalies. It first starts of slow, with signs of mass hysteria. We would notice people would misremember things about their own past first, but as more time progresses and more divergence occurs, the anomalies grew. The mass hysteria spanned globally to a point were people were disputing entire historical events or political movements from the past.

At first the hysteria was about a past long ago, but grew closer to the present very quickly.
We only figured out divergence must've occurred when suddenly causes in the past, and probably future too-we don't know, produced an entirely different effect WITHIN our timeline. As an example, basic experiments done in the past, would yield different results in the present.
We became very worried about all our calculations, from nuclear reactors to flight travel, as they slowly became different.

FILE GH-234// FORWARD

K.B.: What should we do with all this information?

J.B.:
The whole reason I'm here is to find out what happened at the start of the M.D.E., because we didn't know what was going on. You have a head start now, we send a few people to different dimensions with this information, so basically we all have a head start now.
You must hope to find out how to revert this mess, so you will be able to save your own world, in the process, we hope to find out how to, so to say 'cure' ours.
For now, I suggest you do it in silence. As nothing major will happen in the next few years, but you will see the signs of what's going on. Study it, don't brush it off as insignificant like we did.
I think that if you would bring this out in the open, mass hysteria might occur. This might cut our funding, and don't forget, you and I are on the same payroll. If you are able to revert this, no one even NEEDS to know, you'll be the silent, unsung heroes of ALL.
In the next few days I will walk you through all the basics, all the things you have to take in account to really be able to tackle this problem.
After that, I'll return home, and work on the problem there. If we are still around in the next decade, I will return to you around march 2020 for a check up, and then again for the big event I talked about earlier.

FILE GH-235// EVENTS PERSISTENT THROUGHOUT DIMENSIONS

K.B.: What are the events persistent throughout dimensions, from which we can obtain information?

J.B.: In anticipation to that question I have made a list of specific persistents, as we call them, I will present it to you later. I can't be truly clear about the start of it, as the start is not persistent. However in a few years time, when the political and social climate starts to heat up and destabilize, we saw a widespread of false information throughout the dimensions. False information spread by regular people, but also scientists, politicians, and media outlets.

Around the start of 2020 things will escalate faster and faster. An increase in seismic and volcanic activity is possible, but only half persistent – we don't know why.
In February of that year, sometimes on 4th, if not, then definitely on the 29th, a coronal mass ejection will destabilize Europe and parts of Asia for days. Confidence and trust in technology and science will understandably dwindle.
From that point on people will have endless debates, sometimes hugely televised or streamed, sometimes in a back room, about basic science, biology, and geography. Heated discussion will divide people into confined groups, leading to violence.
Some will do the 'experiments of old', simple measurements of basic science, and will find different results. They will be ridiculed, until official scientific institutes will try to discredit them, and find THEY produce different results as well. Needless to say, mass panic will follow.
Religious people will make a very convincing argument the rapture has come, and we are now in limbo, or at least that's what I got from it.

Then will come the big event. If we are not able to fix anything, the last reasonably normal year we will know as humanity is 2025. On the 12th of December that year, in the early morning for continental europe, the hole we punctured before will now succumb under the constant pressure and rip open. A merge of dimensions if you will. The rip will last about 3 days and not all of you will be there on the 15th. Expect major anomalies, things popping in and out of existence, written letters changing before your eyes, buildings changing direction, deterioration, or even the entire structure. The worst and most destructive are buildings, or large objects in general, popping into other objects, causing destruction on a massive, MASSIVE, global scale.
Many of you will think of it as a dream, and will tend to even more stupid decisions. Governments will think they are at war with another.
Because our most important equipment is deep underground, it'll be mostly unharmed. However destruction and death will take place here as well. After all that; it took us a while to regroup and find a way to survive. We then started to repair the machines and try to figure a way back. We didn't want to live in the apocalypse, and were determined to roll it all back.

An anonymous individual uploaded these transcripts to Pastebin in 2019. They are allegedly transcripts of a few conversations of a conversation between someone from our timeline (K.B.) and someone from the near future (at least 2025) in another timeline

(J.B.), implied to be at CERN. J.B. tells us that the multiverse is destabilizing (causing things such as the Mandela Effect) and there will be a catastrophe called a Mass Divergence Event in late 2025 in which our universe collides with others, causing massive widespread destruction.
>So what's the point of these threads?
The point is to figure out if these transcripts are real, to discuss the implications if they are, and to attempt to prevent the MDE.
>But J.B. said there'd be a coronal mass ejection in February 2020!
An anon on this board claiming to be K.B. said the transcripts originally read "coronavirus" and she changed it to avoid suspicion.

By the way, in case it wasn't obvious, I am not an expert on the multiverse or quantum physics or any of that. I am only making these threads to spread awareness and possibly gather more information regarding the M.D.E.

Obviously I will stop making these threads if nothing happens on the days JB said the MDE would take place. If I survive the MDE and 4chan is still functioning, I will continue making these threads in order to document how it affected all of us.

its very likely that it will be in 2024. there's a torque on the timeline that can't be removed. people progressing at the same rate they would but the timeline itself and events are speeding up constantly. if you have plans, put them on a shorter timeline.

it likely was at a certain point, and even at that time of prediction it might have been later on. but the one constant right now is the rate at which things are speeding up. our timeline speeding up to that point is causing issues everywhere else as well. sucks, but it had to happen.

I'd still like to know if my question from last thread is possible, and if the people around you will start to become directly and even physically changed by the words you say about them

Like say, for example, a relative has a surgery but someone else says they did not, which causes that surgery to be erased from their timeline and have never occurred to them

Not sure if people can be changed by just saying things about them, but there are definitely some minor differences between timelines.
The transcripts mention the importance of cause and effect. A person getting a surgery could have multiple complex causes, depending on what kind of surgery it was.

The Occult Power Behind the Spear Which Pierced the Side of Christ Sample

Written by Trevor Ravenscroft
Read by Dallas Bono
Format: M4B
Bitrate: 56 Kbps
Unabridged

For 2,000 years, since it pierced the side of Christ, the Spear of Destiny has been invested with amazing occult powers. This book records the legend and its continuing fulfillment in the decline of the Roman Empire, the Dark Ages, and the 20th century. It tells the story of the chain of men who possessed the Spear, from Herod the Great to Adolf Hitler, and how they sought to change the face of history by wielding its occult powers for good or evil.

The Spear of Destiny is identified as the Spear of the Holy Grail mentioned in the sagas of the Dark Ages and shows the Grail to be a uniquely Western path to mind expansion —as applicable today as it was at the courts of King Arthur and Charlemagne. The final chapters of this book describe a Manichean battle of worlds behind the changing scene of the 20th century. And for the first time the Satanic occult development and faculties of Adolf Hitler are described in authentic and documented detail, showing how he furthered his aims and his conquest of the world by black magic practices.

An audiobook is a recording that is primarily of the spoken word as opposed to music. While it is often based on a recording of commercially available printed material, this is not always the case. It was not intended to be descriptive of the word "book" but is rather a recorded spoken program in its own right and not necessarily an audio version of a book.

World Jewish Congress Declared War on Germany
Long Before Germany Took Any Action Against Jews

The following article is composed of excerpts taken from "The White Man's Bible" written by Ben Klassen:

The war against the German people as such dates back hundreds of years. We have shown this further in our previous chapter on the unrelenting warfare between the parasitic Jews and their unfortunate victims.

Total War against Germany.

They went all out in one of the most frantic, malicious wars of propaganda a gullible and uncomprehending world has ever witnessed. In short, Judea declared Total War on Germany and Hitler— financially, propagandawise, militarily, economically, racially, and in every other aspect that was in their power— and that power as we shall see, was formidable. Before Hitler would, or could, even lift a finger against them, the Jews were ready and wasted no time in launching a massive world-wide campaign against him. To illustrate this obvious fact we are again going to quote the Jews themselves, and their press in a limited sampling. There are volumes of evidence, but these few quotes should illustrate the point conclusively.

Plans laid before Hitler came to power.

As early as August 1933, Samuel Untermeyer, president of the World Jewish Economic Federation called together a large congress of Jewish leaders from all over the world to declare war on Germany in the name of the Jews. The meeting was held in Amsterdam, Holland. Upon returning to the United States from that meeting, Untermeyer made a speech on Radio Station WABC (N.Y.) on August 6, 1933 in which he announced that the Jews of the world had declared war on Germany and would starve them to death. This was long before any action of any kind had been taken against any Jew, and six years before military action was initiated in 1939.

“We have been at war with him (Hitler) from the day that he gained power” stated the London Jewish Chronicle May 8, 1942 in its “Sermon of the Week.”
Rabbi M. Perlzweig, head of the British Section of the World Jewish Congress, speaking in Canada, stated: “The World Jewish Congress has been at war with Germany for seven years.” (Toronto Evening Telegram, February 26, 1940.)

The Dutch-Jewish paper, Centraal-Blaad Voor Israeliten in Nederland declared on September 13, 1939: “The millions of Jews who live in America, England and France, North and South Africa, and, not to forget, those in Palestine, are determined to bring the war of annihilation against Germany to its final end.”

We must remember that at this time (September 13, 1939) the war was less than two weeks old, no concentration camps, no gas chambers, etc., for Jews or anybody else had been set up, or even alleged to be in existence. (The whole “gas chamber” story was nothing but another Jewish lie, as we will see in another chapter.)

The Chicago Jewish Sentinel, on October 8, 1942 declared: “The Second World War is being fought for the defense of the fundamentals of Judaism.” Indeed it was. To be more specific, in behalf of the Jews themselves. They knew it, they instigated it, they perpetrated it, they stagemanaged it, The naive and gullible goyim, meanwhile, slaughtered each other with a vengeance, not knowing, or not wanting to know, who the real perpetrators, the real war criminals were.

Vladimir Jabotinsky, Jew-communist and founder of the Irgun terrorist organization wrote in the January 1934 issue of Natcha Retch: “The fight against Germany has been carried on for months by every Jewish community, conference, congress, trade organization, by every Jew in the world. There is reason to believe that our part in the struggle will be of general value. We shall let loose a spiritual and material war of the whole world against Germany. Germany’s ambition is to become a great nation again, to reconquer her lost territories and colonies. Our Jewish interests on the other hand demand the complete destruction of Germany. The German nation is collectively and individually a danger to us Jews.”

Hitler offered Hand of Friendship to England.
Hitler, whose concern was not only for the Germans, understood the deadly program of the parasitic Jew. He pleaded in vain with England not to play the Jewish game. Speaking in September of 1939, he said:

“On numerous occasions I have offered the friendship of the German people to England and the English people. My entire policy was built upon the idea of this understanding. I was always rebuffed… We know that the British people as a whole cannot be made responsible. It is that Jewish plutocratic and democratic ruling class which hates our Reich.”

English Traitors fronted for Jews.
On behalf of the non-Jewish ruling class it must be pointed out that those who went along with the Jews were by and large chabez-goi, people like Winston Churchill, traitors who were in the pay of the Jews, or under their control and coercion. So firm was this Jewish control over the British people (as well as the French, Americans, Poles and others) that the Jews were in fact successful in plunging the world into a fratricidal war of destruction on a scale such as the world has never witnessed before.

Plans to Exterminate German People.
Some of the Jews wanted to exterminate those Germans surviving the destructions of war by sterilization. Theodore N. Kaufman, spelling out the program in the book entitled Germany Must Perish, said: By Sterilization. “To achieve the purpose of German extinction it would be necessary to only sterilize some 48,000,000— a figure which excludes, because of their limited power to procreate, males over 60, and females over 45…”

By Starvation. Other groups of Jews wanted to exterminate the Germans by starvation. A notorious advocate of the method was Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury in the Roosevelt Administration. The following quotation is from the memoirs of Cordell Hull, who was Secretary of State in the same administration.

“Morgenthau’s plan, I added, would wipe out everything in Germany except land, and the Germans would have to live on the land. This meant that only 60% of the German population could support themselves on the German land, and the other 40% would die.”

Germans Looted and Starved. A version of the evil Jewish plan was in fact implemented for a period immediately after the war. Huge amounts of all kinds of machinery, factories, and rolling stock that survived the war were shipped to communist Russia. Viewing all this, Mr. R. R. Stokes, a Labor M.P. in Britain declared at the time:
“Today in Germany, 6 months after our victory, graves are being dug for people not yet dead, people who will die of starvation in the next few months.”

Morgenthau Plan.
U.S. Senator William Langer of North Dakota said of the Morgenthau plan, and his remarks are entered in the Congressional Record, April 18, 1946: “Mr. Morgenthau now stands convicted before the conscience of the world as an instigator of systematic annihilation of the German speaking people. The record further proves beyond any question of doubt, that these fanatical and reactionary high priests of hate and vengeance will never be able to defend their conspiracy before the bar of human reason and human decency.” Six Million Swindle Invented. It was only through the opposition of people like Senator Langer who could not stomach the vicious murder conspiracy of the Jewish network that the Jewish program of sterilization of the German people, or the program of starving them to death, or a combination of both, was not carried through. By whipping up hatred about the mythical “six million” to a near frenzy the Jews almost, but not quite, succeeded in their goal of mass murder of the German race.

Why National Socialism is Not Racist
by
David Myatt

National Socialist Germany and Muslims

Street Vendor in Berlin, NS Germany

National-Socialist Germany:

The government and officials of National-Socialist Germany strove hard to uphold and live by the ethics of National-Socialism, as did every genuine National-Socialist, even after the defeat of NS Germany in what has become known as the First Zionist War.

Thus, in NS Germany, groups such as Muslims and Buddhists were accorded full respect, and allowed to practise their religion freely. In the pre-war years, NS Germany helped organize a pan-Islamic world congress in Berlin. Berlin itself was home to thriving Muslim and Buddhist communities, of many races, and the Berlin Mosque held regular prayers even during the war years, attended by Arabs, Indians, Turks, Afghans and people of many other races. Indeed, the Berlin Mosque was one of the few buildings to survive the lethal, indiscriminate, bombing and bombardment, and although damaged, it was clearly recognizable as a Mosque amid the surrounding rubble.

NS Germany was home to exiles from many races, including respected individuals such as Subhas Chandra Bose, leader of the Indian National Army, and Mohammed Amin al-Husseini, the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem. Both received significant financial support from the German government and both enthusiastically collaborated with Hitler.

There was also, of course, the alliance with Japan, and while the Allies - and particularly the Americans - were revvelling in and spreading derogatory anti-Japanese propaganda (many American GI's thought "the Japs" were not human) the Germans were extolling their virtues and regarded them as "comrades-in-arms". While the Germans honoured Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto with one of their highest decorations for gallantry, a Knights Cross with Oak Leaves and Swords, American GI's ruthlessly exterminated Japanese soldiers, it being common practice for them to "take no prisoners" and execute any Japanese soldier who surrendered. Incidentally, two other Japanese warriors were also honoured by Germany by being awarded the Knights Cross with Oak Leaves.

Isoroku Yamamoto

There was also, of course, the links between NS Germany, the SS, and various Muslim and Arab organizations, even before the First Zionist War. For instance, the Egyptian Greenshirt organization revered both Mussolini and Adolf Hitler, while Hassan Al-Banna, the founder of the Muslim Brotherhood (which lives on to this day in organizations like Hamas), made several complimentary remarks about Hitler. There was also a pro-National-Socialist coup attempt in Iraq, led by Rashid Ali.

Thus, while the British in Egypt and Palestine were treating the Arabs as conquered subjects, the Germans were treating them as equals, as comrades, and respecting their culture, and even to this day in places like Egypt many Arabs fondly recall their meetings with these "nazis". In fact, Egypt was to become something of a haven for National-Socialists after the War, with hundreds of former SS and German officers helping the post-War anti-British government of Gamal Abdal Nasser, who was associated with the Muslim Brotherhood and a relative of the Egyptian publisher who published an Arabic version of Mein Kampf.

These SS and German officers included Major General Otto Ernst Remer, Joachim Däumling, former Gestapo chief in Düsseldorf, and SS Officer Bernhard Bender, who allegedly also converted to Islam.

Most revealing of all, perhaps, are the friendly links between NS Germany, the SS, and various Jewish organizations. SS Officer Adolf Eichmann was known to have travelled to Palestine in the years before the war where he met Jewish settlers, Jewish leaders, and German agents. His relations with these Jews were always very cordial and friendly.

Of particular interest is the attempt, in 1941 (52yf) by the Jewish group Irgun Zevai Leumi (known to the British in Palestine as the Stern gang) to collaborate with Hitler and Germany:

"On condition that the German government recognizes the national aspirations of the 'Movement for the Freedom of Israel' (Lehi), the National Military Organization (NMO) proposes to participate in the war on the side of Germany..." [Document number E234151-8 at Yad Vachem in Jerusalem.].

The German NS government, however, refused to recognize such Jewish "national aspirations" since it conflicted with the policy of their ally Mohammed Amin al-Husseini who was opposed to the establishment of a Jewish State in Palestine. Thus, the attempted Jewish collaboration failed.

Conclusion: To quote Waffen-SS General Leon Degrelle:

" German racialism meant re-discovering the creative values of their own race, re-discovering their culture. It was a search for excellence, a noble ideal. National Socialist racialism was not against the other races, it was for its own race. It aimed at defending and improving its race, and wished that all other races did the same for themselves. That was demonstrated when the Waffen SS enlarged its ranks to include 60,000 Islamic SS. The Waffen SS respected their way of life, their customs, and their religious beliefs. Each Islamic SS battalion had an imam, each company had a mullah. It was our common wish that their qualities found their highest expression. This was our racialism.

I was present when each of my Islamic comrades received a personal gift from Hitler during the new year. It was a pendant with a small Koran. Hitler was honoring them with this small symbolic gift. He was honoring them with what was the most important aspect of their lives and their history. National Socialist racialism was loyal to the German race and totally respected all other races." Leon Degrelle - Epic: The Story of the Waffen SS (Lecture given in 1982). Reprinted in The Journal of Historical Review, vol. 3, no. 4, pp. 441-468.

I myself have saught to understand the purpose of our lives, as human beings, and so studied, first-hand in a practical way, most of the major religions of the world - Buddhism, Taoism, Hinduism, Christianity, Islam - as well as philosophy from Aristotle to Heidegger, literature from Homer to Mishima, and science from its earliest beginnings. I have spent long hours, day after day, often week after week and sometimes month after month, talking with Muslim scholars, Buddhist and Taoist Masters, Christian priests and theologians, Hindu ascetics, and a multitude of ordinary people of different faiths, cultures, and races. My very life, my very experiences among the different cultures, the different faiths, of the world, reveals the truth of National-Socialism: its desire for harmony, honour, and order. My own life, my experiences, my National-Socialist writings, expose the propaganda lies of those opposed to National-Socialism: those social engineers who have saught, and who do seek, through the usury of a world-wide consumer-capitalism, to exploit this planet and its peoples and so destroy diversity and difference and everything that is noble and evolutionary.

A true, a genuine, National-Socialist does not go around "hating" people of other races just as National-Socialists are not disrespectful of the customs, the religion, the way of life, of people of other races.

As I have said and written many times, we National-Socialists respect other cultures, and people of other races, because we uphold honour. Honour means being civilized; it means having manners: being polite; restrained in public and so on. Honour means treating people with courtesy and respect, regardless of their race and culture. We National-Socialists express the view that a person should be proud of their own culture and heritage, respectful of their ancestors and their ancestral way of life, and accept that other peoples have a right to be proud of their own culture and heritage as well. The ideal is a working toward mutual understanding and respect. What we must remember is that whenever we hear or see the words racism and racist we are hearing and seeing Zionist social engineering at work. Our duty, as Aryans, is to uphold and strive to live by our own Aryan values of personal honour and loyalty to our folk.

The Inquisition:
A History of Christian Torture
Mass Murder and Destruction of Human Life

"The Christian resolve to find the world evil and ugly, has made the world evil and ugly."
- Friedrich Nietzsche

Today, the Christian Church does not have the power it once had, yet, we have witnessed the Christian abuses of children, child rape, molestation and other vile acts that reveal the true nature of many Christians and the effects their "God" has upon his followers. The pedophilia scandals are just a small sample of what Christians are capable of. This is due to the evil energy they tie into. "God" and the "Devil" are backwards! This can be plainly seen in the Old Testament where that "God" of Christianity was "a Murderer and a Liar from the beginning."

Years ago, when the Christian church had complete control over government, human life and spirit, we can see from the inquisition, just how sick these people are and just what lengths they will go to get you to accept "Jesus." Just as is seen in the numerous Christian abuses of children today, years ago, with the Inquisition, girls as young as nine and boys as young as ten were tried for witchcraft. Children much younger were tortured to extract testimony against their parents.[1] Children were then flogged while they watched their parents burn.

The Inquisition was early communism. The Catholic Church was the NKVD and KGB of the Middle Ages. For more detailed information, read The Gulag Archipelago by Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn. The Inquisition and communism, both Jewish programs are both nearly identical systems of mass murder, torture, and enslaving the masses.
"Christianity and communism are very close spiritually and ideologically. This is a fairly well known concept that has been adopted by various thinkers, from Thomas More to Lev Tolstoy. Few people know that the world's first socialist state was established in Paraguay and was based on the ideas of Catholic Jesuits before Marx created his teachings."
"The "Society of Jesus" - the Jesuit religious order - in the Catholic Church was roughly equivalent to the KGB in the Soviet Union."
Above quotes taken from "Pravda" [The main Communist Party Newspaper and leading newspaper of the former Soviet Union] From the article: Is there any difference between Christianity and Communism? 30/04/2013

Truth be known, nearly all of the inquisitors and high-ranking Catholic clergy were Jews.

A documented case in the Silesian town of Neisse reveals a huge oven was constructed, which over a ten year period, more than a thousand "condemned witches, some as young as two years old" were roasted alive.[2] Many victims were also extremely old, some in their 80's. This made no difference to the church.

The Christian Church murdered, tortured, mutilated and destroyed millions and millions of lives both directly through the Inquisition and indirectly through all of the wars they incited. The damage and destruction this foul religion has perpetrated against humanity is almost beyond comprehension. Most people aren't even aware of the facts. Between the years of 1450-1600, the Christian Church was responsible for the torture, and burning of some 30,000 alleged "witches."[3]

During the reign of the Roman Emperor Constantine CE 306-337 the doctrines of the Christian church were regarded as the foundation of law.4 Heretics [persons who opposed church teachings, or who were even accused of such] were sought out, tortured and eventually murdered. Heresy was an offense against the State as well as the Church. For hundreds of years, civil rulers tried to stamp out all heresy.

As early as CE 430, the Church leaders declared heresy punishable by death. In CE 906, "The Canon Episcopi" was the first Church body to expressly forbid the use of witchcraft.5 Before the Inquisition was fully underway, the Church accepted heretics back into the fold, under terms it considered reasonable. The following is an example:

For three Sundays, the heretic was stripped to the waist and whipped from the entrance of the town/village all the way to the church door. He/she was to permanently deny him/herself meat, eggs, and cheese except on Easter, Pentecost and Xmas, when he/she is to eat of them as a sign of his/her penance. For twenty days, twice a year he/she was to avoid fish and for three days in each week fish, wine and oil, fasting, if his/her health would permit.

He/she was to wear monastic vestments with a small cross, sewn on each breast. He/she was to hear mass daily. Seven times a day, he/she was to recite the canonical hours and in addition, at Paternoster ten times each day and twenty times each night. He/she was to observe total abstinence from sex. Every month he/she was to report to a priest who was to keep the heretic under close observation. He/she was to be segregated from the rest of the community.6

There is no precise date for the beginning of the Inquisition, most sources agree it manifested during the first six years of the reign of the Catholic Pope, Gregory IX, between 1227 and 1233. Pope Gregory IX who ruled from 1227-1241 is often referred to as the "Father of the Inquisition."

The Inquisition was a campaign of torture, mutilation, mass murder, and destruction of human life perpetrated by Christians and their Jewish root. The Church increased in power until it had total control over human life, both secular and religious.
The Vatican wasn't satisfied with the progress made by regional leaders in rooting out heresy. Pope Innocent III commissioned his own inquisitors who answered directly to him. Their authority was made official in the papal bull of March 25th, 1199.7Innocent declared "anyone who attempted to construe a personal view of God which conflicted with the Church dogma must be burned without pity."8

In 1254, to ease the job of the inquisitors, Pope Innocent IV decreed that accusers could remain anonymous, preventing the victims from confronting them and defending themselves. Many churches had a chest where informants could slip written accusations against their neighbors. Three years later, he authorized and officially condoned torture as a method of extracting confessions of heresy. 9

Victims were tortured in one room, and then, if they confessed, they were led away from the chamber into another room to confess to the inquisitors. This way it could be claimed the confessions were given without the use of force. The Inquisitional law replaced common law. Instead of innocent until proven guilty, it was guilty until proven innocent.

Inquisitors grew very rich, accepting bribes and fines from the wealthy who paid to avoid being prosecuted. The wealthy were prime targets for the church who confiscated their property, land and everything they had for generations. The Inquisition took over all of the victims' possessions upon accusation. There was very little if any chance of proving one's self innocent, so this is one way the Catholic Church grew very wealthy. Pope Innocent stated that since "God" punished children for the sins of their parents, they had no right to be legal heirs to the property of their parents. Unless children came forth freely to denounce their parents, they were left penniless. Inquisitors even accused the dead of heresy, in some cases, as much as seventy years after their death. They exhumed and burned the victim's bones and confiscated all property from their heirs, leaving them with nothing. 10

The actions of the inquisitors had devastating effects on the economy that left entire communities totally impoverished while the church glutted with wealth. They also crippled the economy by holding certain professions suspect. Inquisitors believed the printed word to be a threat to the church and interfered with the communication brought about by the invention of the printing press in the 15th century. Maps, cartographers, traveling merchants and traders were all placed under intense suspicion; a threat to the church.

Although the church had begun murdering people it deemed heretics in the 4th century and again in 1022 at Orléan, papal statutes of 1231 insisted heretics suffer death by fire. Burning people to death prevented the spilling of blood. John 15:6 "If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and men gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned."

The pedophilia witnessed today is just a small example of the insanity and the twisted, warped minds of most Christians and where any power that they obtain leads to.

The Witch hunts, 1450-1750 were what R H Robbins [The Encyclopedia of Witchcraft and Demonology] called "the shocking nightmare, the foulest crime and deepest shame of western civilization." In this 300-year period, the church stepped up the mass murder and systematic torture of innocent human beings. Torturers were allowed as much time as they needed to torture their victims. Most courts demanded that prior to the torture, the victim be thoroughly shaved, claiming that any Demon left undetected in the victim's body hair might intervene to deaden the pain that the torturers inflicted or answer for the victim.11

Doctors would be in attendance if it seemed the victim might die from the torture. The victim would then be allowed to recover a little before more torture was applied. If the victim died during the torture, inquisitors claimed the Devil intervened with the purpose of sparing the victim further pain or preventing them from revealing his secrets.12 Those who fainted had vinegar poured into their nostrils to revive them. The victim's families were required under law to reimburse the courts for the costs of torture. Entire estates were seized by the church. Priests blessed the torture instruments prior to their being used. Certain devices were employed to inflict the maximum pain; indisputable evidence of the sick Christian mind:

Judas Cradle

The victim was pulled up by a rope or chain and then lowered to the point. The torturer controlled the pressure by attaching weights to the victim or rocking or raising and dropping the victim from various heights.

Brodequin [The Boots]
The brodequin was used to crush the legs by tightening the device by hand, or using a mallet for knocking in the wedges to smash the bones until the bone marrow spurted out. People who passed out were further condemned as the losing of consciousness to be a trick from the Devil in order to escape pain.
Burning the feet.
Oil, lard and grease were applied to the feet before roasting them over a fire. A screen was used to control or increase the pain as exposure to the fire was applied on and off for maximum suffering. Also, as a variation, some victims were forced to wear large leather or metal boots into which boiling water or molten lead was poured.

Hanging and the Strappado

The victim's hands were bound behind the back. They were then yanked up to the ceiling of the torture chamber by a pulley and a rope. Dislocation ensued. Christians preferred this method, as it left no visible marks of torture. Heavy weights were often strapped to the victim to increase the pain and suffering.
Squassation was a more extreme form of the torture. This method entailed strapping weights as much as hundreds of pounds, pulling limbs from their sockets. Following this, the Christian inquisitor would quickly release the rope so they would fall towards the floor. At the last second, the Christian inquisitioner would again yank the rope. This dislocated virtually every bone in the victim's body. Four applications were considered enough to kill even the strongest of victims.

Many were hung upsidedown as well until strangulation ensued.

Heretic's Fork

This device was often used to silence the victim on the way to the burning stake, so they could not reveal what had occurred in the torture chamber or defend themselves in any way.

Ripping the flesh

Christian clergy delighted in the tearing and ripping of the flesh. The Catholic church learned a human being could live until the skin was peeled down to the waist when skinned alive. Often, the rippers were heated to red hot and used on women's breasts and in the genitalia of both sexes.

Breast Rippers

The Iron Torture Chair was studded with spikes. The victim was strapped in nude and a fire was lit beneath the chair. Heavy objects were also be used. They were placed upon the victim to increase the pain of the spikes. Blows with mallets were also inflicted. Often, other torturous devices were applied with the chair such as the flesh ripping pincers, shown above and leg crushing vices.

Skull Crusher

This one speaks for itself. Christian clergy preferred this device because it did not leave visible marks, unless the skull was completely crushed, which happened.

The Rack

The Rack, aka the Ladder was another device that was used extensively. The procedure was to place the nude or near nude victim horizontally on the ladder or rack. Ropes were used to bind the arms and legs like a tourniquet. The knot could be steadily twisted to draw tight the ropes and stretch the victim to where the muscles and ligaments tore and bones broke. Often, heavy objects were placed upon the victim to increase the pain. This was considered by the church to be "one of the milder forms of torture."

The Wheel

The nude victim, was stretched out, lying face downward on the ground or on the execution dock, with his or her arms and legs spread, and tied to stakes or iron rings. Wooden crosspieces were placed under the wrists, elbows, ankles, knees and hips. The inquisitor then smashed limb after limb and joint after joint, including the shoulders and hips, with the iron-tyred edge of the wheel, taking care not to bring about the death of the victim. There were splinters of smashed bones, blood spurted everywhere, and the victim's entire skeleton was crushed and smashed. Thereafter the shattered limbs were “braided” into the spokes of the large wheel.

The wheel has to be one of the most gruesome of all torture devices. The idea is, that the victims' limbs are shattered and entwined around the spokes of the wheel, attaching them to it.

The Thumbscrew

The thumbscrew was a device where the victim's thumbs were placed and systematically crushed. Similar devices were used on the toes. Thumbscrews were often applied at the same time as the strappado and other torture devices to inflict more pain.

The Water Torture

The victim was stripped and bound to a bench or table and a funnel was inserted and pressed down into his throat. Water was poured into the funnel in jugs full with his/her nose being pinched, forcing him/her to swallow. After this was repeated enough times to where the victim's stomach was almost to burst, the bench or table was then tilted, with the victim's head pointing to the floor. The water in the stomach put painful pressure on the victim's lungs and heart. There was not only the incredible pain with this, but also, the feeling of suffocation. Inquisitors would also beat upon the stomach with mallets to the point of internal rupture. In another variation, the victim was forced to swallow large quantities of water together with lengths of knotted cord. The cords were then violently yanked from the victim's mouth resulting in disemboweling.

The Iron Maiden also known as the "Virgin Mary"
Covering the front side of this device was a statue of the Virgin Mary, inside were spikes, sharp knives or nails. Levers would move the arms of the statue, crushing the victim against the knives and nails.
Other devices and methods:

Forced feeding of overly salted foods that resulted in extreme thirst, then, the denial of water.
Immersion in scalding water laced with Lime.
Yanking back and forth by 2 or more inquisitors with ropes attached to a spiked iron collar. This tore the flesh on the victim's neck. Variations used screws that could be tightened.
The prayer stool. A spike board on which the victim was forced to kneel.
Stocks which were fitted with iron spikes
Slowly roasting victims over fire.
"Walking a Witch" entailed forcing a victim to walk back and forth for days on end until completely exhausted. A variation of this was having the victim sit cross legged upon a wooden stool, being deprived of movement or sleep. Some victims were as much as 80 years old.
"Thrawing." Similar to the spiked iron collar, only a rope was tied tightly around the head and the victim was yanked back and forth.
"Turkas." These were a variation of pincers used to pull out fingernails.
Many were thrown in filthy dungeons with no light or human contact, in addition, often being chained or confined in the stocks.
"Scoring above the Breath" the ancient belief that bleeding a witch above the mouth and nose would break a spell incited inquisitors to tear flesh, stick with needles and other instruments upon the victim's face.

Galileo Galilei, the famous Italian astronomer and physicist was one of the most noted victims of the Inquisition. A letter in which he attempted to demonstrate the Copernican theory, that the Earth is not the center of the universe, was forwarded by some of his enemies to the inquisitors in Rome. He was tried in 1633 and found guilty of heresy. He was forced to recant [publicly withdraw his statement] and was sentenced to life imprisonment under house arrest.
In 1979, Pope John Paul II declared that the Roman Catholic Church "may have been mistaken in condemning him," and he established a commission to study the case.13
In 1993, the Catholic Church "officially" pardoned Galileo. In other words, they forgave him for teaching that the planets revolve around the Sun, not the Earth.
Loss of human life:

Salzburg, Austria, 1677-1681 over 100 murdered Basque region of the Pyrenees; 1608, Lawyer Pierre de Lancre was sent to the region to "root out and destroy those who worshipped Pagan Gods." Over 600 tortured and murdered.

Witch judge Henri Boguet c. 1550-1619 sent some 600 victims to their deaths in Burgundy, many of them young children who were systematically tortured and then burned alive.
A pregnant woman was burned alive and from the trauma, she gave birth before she died. The baby was tossed back into the flames.
Swedish town of Mora, 1669, more than 300 murdered. Among them, 15 children. Thirty-six children between the ages of 9 and 15 were made to run the gauntlet and were beaten with rods upon their hands once a week for an entire year. Twenty of the youngest children, all under the age of 9 were whipped on their hands at the church door for 3 Sundays in succession. Many more were severely beaten for witchcraft offenses.
In Scotland, under the rule of Oliver Cromwell, a total of 120 in a single month were murdered in 1661. Estimates of the total dead have been as high as 17,000 between 1563 and 1603.
In Würzburg, Germany, the Chancellor wrote a graphic account in the year of 1629: "...there are three hundred children of three or four years, who are said to have had intercourse with the Devil. I have seen children of seven put to death, and brave little scholars of ten, twelve, fourteen and fifteen years of age..."
Between the years of 1623 and 1633, some 900 "witches" were put to death throughout Würzburg. This was largely maintained by the Jesuits.
The Chronicler of Treves reported in 1586 that the entire female population of two villages was wiped out by inquisitors. Only two women were left alive.
Noted cases included the Knights Templar, Joan of Arc who was chained by the neck, hands and feet and locked in a cramped iron cage, Galileo, who stated that the Earth revolved around the Sun and was not the center of the universe as the church taught(See above).
The above accounts were taken from Cassel Dictionary of Witchcraft by David Pickering.

On Sunday, March 12th, 2002, the Pope John Paul II apologized for the "errors of his church for the last 2000 years."

About this capture

Death, Hell & the Afterlife

Many people are understandably frightened in regards to "Hell" being a place of torture, eternal damnation, and fiery torment. Personally, since coming to Satan, I have had extensive experience both in working with human souls who have passed from this earth, and in seeing Satan's Hell which is a safe place for the souls who are there.

In contrast to souls who go to the light when leaving their physical bodies through death; Satan is responsible and protective. He sends Demons to escort Satanic souls to Hell. This is to ensure these souls will be protected from the light, which is of the enemy. In addition to working with many different Demons, Satan has had me work with human spirits. Though their physical bodies are dead, they are very much alive and do not like being referred to as "dead." I am talking those of importance in Hell. Most spirits who have resided in Hell, have reincarnated. Some are still there for specific reasons. I can tell you, Satan's Hell is not some place of fire and brimstone, but a safe haven for souls who are of Satan.

There is another place- the Christian "Hell" where Christian believers who fall short, wind up. This is where the horror stories come from and angels have taken some unfortunate individuals on a personal tour of this, as they are human hating.

This place of torment is not of Satan, but is and was created by the Judeo/Christian "God." Those who tie into Christian beliefs and energies are all vulnerable:

Matthew 25: 41 Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels

The truth regarding the light seen by many in death and with near death experiences can be explained. The following quote taken from the Luciferian Liberation Front website article "Jesus of Borg" is quite accurate in many respects. Human souls are harvested by advanced extra-terrestrials for energy. These souls are "judged" according to how malleable they are. With any powers of the mind, energy must conform to the will of the operator in order for the working/s to be effective. Any resistance makes the soul unfit. Many believers who are deemed unfit are cast into torture and damnation.

Quote:
"When we dissect the cube of heaven we see that it is constructed like a living cell with its own system of energy circulation and metabolism. From all appearances, it is a giant solar battery/generator which allows the ONE mind of the collective G.O.D. to be able to feed off the life essences of the enslaved souls held within its "temple pillars" and redirect their energies according to the will of the ONE. When a human being dies, his life essence, spirit, or soul is scanned by the Soul Collectors who patrol the dimension between physical time/space and the finer dimension of subspace and these Collectors project an image before the just deceased soul of a life form that will be recognizable to the deceased, such as a relative or friend who had died before they had (a grandmother, religious figure, etc.). In this manner, the Soul Collector is able to get the newly deceased soul to lower his defenses. The Collector takes on the role of guide and attempts to lead the soul to the gates of the Holding Ship. In this Holding Ship, the spirit essence of the dead person is scanned again to determine its degree of purity of energy (its lack of resistant character traits) and its potential to provide nourishment to the collective mind of G.O.D. This potential is based on the degree that this spirit has been subdued through fear and dependence or how effective religious programming had been on this soul during its physical lifetime. Those spirits, which have little or no self-will and have been sufficiently programmed to serve G.O.D. during their lives will have the highest nourishment potential."
End of Quote

This topic [understandably] has come up many times in all of the groups…the Christian concept of "Hell." There have been cases of certain individuals who have seen horrors and such from near death experiences and related. Some of these people had ties to angels who showed them this sort of thing as well. This is of the Christian "God" and has nothing to do with Satan. Most tours of "Hell" such as in the story of "Dante's Inferno" are guided by an angel.

Now, when I say "Christian God" this term is a collective label for the human hating entities out there who have been exploiting humanity, using their invented Christian religion as a tool. Long before photography was readily available and knowledge of extraterrestrials was made public, occultist Aleister Crowley drew a picture of "Jehovah" and the image was of a grey extra-terrestrial. The greys hate humanity.

Not to get into a rehash of what is already on the JoS website; my point in making this post is to reassure people regarding "Hell." Knowing the truth is very important and when you open your mind through power meditation, you will see more and more truths. The enemy does have rotten places for human souls who fall into their traps. This has nothing to do with Satan. Things are backwards. Just as the Jews [who are of the enemy at the soul] accuse and blame Gentiles for everything THEY THEMSELVES DO, in order to create a distraction and diversion and to confuse, this bleeds over into a much larger area in the way of what Christianity does. Everything the Christians are and do, they blame upon Satan.

I have heard Christians [ad nauseum] go on and on about how "The Devil hates humanity" "was a murderer and a liar from the beginning" "is all about materialism" "works to prevent humanity from achieving everlasting life and immortality" the list of bullshit goes on and on and in reality, this all applies to Jehova, THEIR "God." One only needs to look to all of the murders, the endless lies, and the genocide of Gentile nations in the Old Testament of the bible. In addition, the Nazarene WHICH IN REALITY WAS STOLEN FROM A CONCEPT, was invented into a fictitious Jewish character for the purpose of creating another distraction and deception so that the concept is devoid of its spiritual message so that anyone who follows this kike on the cross will never perform the magnum opus and achieve immortality. Christians keep compulsively parroting "Jesus loves you" when the real truth is "Jesus hates you!" "Jesus" hates humanity!

"Jesus" is nothing more than a subliminal tool for ushering in the Jewish messiah [if enough people believe in this "second coming" and put their psychic energies into it, the ruling kike needed to unite the Jews of the world will appear on the scene and enslave every Gentile under the most heinous and brutal conditions] and TO KEEP THE DELUDED FROM SPIRITUAL KNOWLEDGE, ADVANCING THEIR SOULS AND ACHIEVING EVERLASTING LIFE/IMMORTALITY. "Jesus" also serves as a distraction so that believers never meditate or do anything to advance their souls. The deluded believe "Jesus" will take care of everything and that "Jesus saves" when in truth, we all save our own souls, given we have the knowledge and that we apply it. Those who are denied this knowledge and do not meditate will die and be reincarnated over and over, damned into repeating the same mistakes and totally at the mercy of their destiny. Try running this by Christians. They keep parroting "The Devil deceives" when in truth, it is their own "God." And, this so-called "God" of theirs is afraid of humanity obtaining knowledge and spiritual power? Is threatened by our physical nudity? "Loves" you so much he will damn you to a fiery pit to burn for all eternity? Hardly our creator. Everything the Christians accuse "The Devil" of is really their own "God." This is their deception. "He deceiveth the masses."

Now getting back to those near death experiences and such, Lilith told me something very enlightening. She told me that those who have had strong ties to Christianity in their past lives are very open to the enemy. Even if someone is non-religious, an atheist or an agnostic, if there is a strong essence of Christianity on that person's soul from former lifetimes; it is an opening for the enemy to manipulate him/her in this lifetime. Note that those who have had frightening experiences run straight back to the enemy. The enemy will use the individual for an example into scaring others, and in many other ways.

Many of us have been with Satan for centuries of past lives. I asked her about myself and she replied to me "you have always rejected it" [Christianity]. Because of the systematic removal of spiritual knowledge, few of us are really open and aware to what is on our own soul and the souls of others. Regardless of where one's soul was at in former lifetimes, when one performs the Dedication to Satan, this is very real and permanent. Christian sacraments such as baptism, confirmation, and such are false and non-binding. Satanic sacraments are real.

Some people have a harder time than others do in coming to Satan. For those of us who have been with him through all of our lifetimes, coming to Satan is like a duck coming to water, a bird flying free; it feels so perfect. There is nothing conflicting. Some of us [myself included], when first opening to Satan and studying Satanism, have felt a beautiful, comforting warm glow of energy surrounding us. People who have anxiety, more than likely have past life issues with Christianity and/or other false programs of the enemy. These need to be overcome and performing the dedication is the first step, as once one dedicates one's soul to Satan, this is permanent.

Close associations with the enemy in past lives, such as one being a devout Christian [this can even be worse if the past lives were many], has made one's soul very open to the influences of the enemy; holes so to speak. The enemy then uses certain individuals for their own nefarious purposes. Some people have a more difficult time in coming to Satan than others, but those who have found the truth and who are sincere, can overcome any obstacles. Key indications that one was with Satan in past lives are a very strong desire to be with him again, a higher than average interest in the occult, witchcraft and the powers of the mind and soul, and a very positive feeling when studying true Satanism, and in knowing Satan. Many of us have powers and knowledge that have come from past lives.

I have learned much about the soul, as I have had the privilege of working directly with a few human spirits who are of major importance to Satan. They do not like to be called "dead." They are very much alive, alert, and aware, with their same personalities, character traits, likes, dislikes, emotions, and everything else they were in their physical lives here. The only thing is they do not have a physical body yet. Reincarnation is not the only way one can obtain a physical body. Most people reincarnate because those souls who are without a body do not eat, they do not sleep, and basically, they stagnate. It is very boring for them. The soul can enter the body of a living being, [as the one I have been working with does with me], and enjoy physical pleasures such as eating, touching different things, and anything else physical. The soul by itself is also able to feel sexual orgasm. Sexual orgasm is not only physical, but is also spiritual, as when orgasm occurs, the chakras open, and this is one of the main reasons the Christian churches are and always have been against sexual pleasure, it is a spiritual thing, not physical, that they are against, as they work to destroy all spirituality.

Also, one does not obtain power through or after one's physical death. We take ourselves with us, our personalities, our abilities and one's spiritual power. Hell is dimly lit, from what I have seen of it. Lilith told me this is for two reasons; one being to protect the souls who are there and for another, light is power. Satan's side has been deprived of power. They lost a battle, though, not the war.

The experiences in death are highly individual. People who are vulnerable to the enemy, as I wrote of in the above, are at the mercy of the enemy. All of this has to do with past and present lives. There are others who for whatever reason, often an important issue, refuse to move on and remain as ghosts and stay here on earth. As I wrote of before in a sermon on ghosts, there are often serous unresolved issues such as one being murdered and others not knowing, one's corpse not being properly buried and such, as it matters to the individual. Others just go to the astral. Much has to do with one's spiritual beliefs if any, as one ties into corresponding energies. Satan protects those who are dedicated. The goal of Spiritual Satanism is physical and spiritual perfection and immortality, so you don't have to die and reincarnate, and forget everything you learned in this life all over again.

Satan takes care of his own. I asked a VIP human spirit of whom I have been working with, what happened when he died [after he fell to the floor following his swallowing of a cyanide capsule]. He told me four of our Gods showed up, took his astral hand, lifted him from his body and took him to Hell where others he knew who had passed on were already there and where he has been secure, safe, and very protected. Another VIP spirit who also swallowed cyanide was escorted this way. The VIP spirits have been segregated, as they are given extra protection.

A woman that a family member of mine worked with related her fears, years ago, concerning her husband seeing Demons on his deathbed. These were the messenger Demons; the gargoyle types and he was frightened. Again, at some point in a past life, his soul was of Satan, and Satan took responsibility for him. These Demons are there for the protection of Satanic souls to ensure they are not abducted by the enemy, by going to the light.

An essence is like a trace of energy left behind as with a violent death, so-called "haunted houses" and that sort of thing. An essence is just energy. An essence does not have a personality, emotions, or awareness.

I have seen Jew lying filth teachings that those who have passed on are "empty shells." Nothing could be further from the truth. Thanks to this sort of thing and the Christian churches, which are their major tool, many of those who have passed on are forgotten by their families, and survivors; due to spiritual knowledge being systematically removed. Survivors visit the empty corpse at the gravesites and don't know how to contact and communicate with their loved ones on the other side who haven't reincarnated yet. The physical body is dead, but the soul lives on and is not dead in any way.

As for endless questions concerning suicide, suicide should be a totally last resort, as many problems can be overcome through meditation and directing one's energies. There are certain cases where suicide is the only answer, such as facing torture or worse, where there is NO other way out possible. The Powers of Hell want us to live. The enemy tries to get people to commit suicide.

The experiences in the above article are not just my own, but of other dedicated Satanists who have also confirmed their own experiences regarding Hell and working with those who have passed on and are now in spirit form.

Copy of a Catholic Confession Primer

This is pathetic, but makes for a good laugh. This is a copy of a Catholic confession primer. Humor aside, in reading this, it is more than obvious that these people are seriously SICK.

This is so anti-life and a perfect example of how the alien "God" hates humanity and anything human. Every human trait is covered here; what makes us all human. These tenets are so anti-human and alien. What is worse, is how they push these sick teachings on innocent children and destroy more lives. This sick "religion" needs to come to an end and soon is not soon enough!

Besides telling the NATURE of our sins, we must also recollect, as far as possible, the NUMBER of times we have committed them, telling also (and only) those CIRCUMSTANCES which at times may either make a venial sin mortal or a mortal sin notably worse. Have I ever failed to confess a serious sin or disguised it? Have I been guilty of irreverence for this sacrament by failing to examine my conscience carefully?

Have I failed to perform the penance given me by the confessor or disobeyed any of his directions? Have I neglected the Easter duty of receiving Holy Communion or failed to confess my sins within a year? Have I any HABITS of serious sin to confess first (impurity, drunkenness, etc.)?

First Commandment

Am I ignorant of my catechism (Act of Contrition, Apostle's Creed, Ten Commandments, Seven Sacraments, the Our Father)?
Have I willfully doubted or denied any of the teachings of the Church (heresy)?
Have I taken active part in any non-Catholic worship?
Am I a member of any anti-Catholic or any secret society?
Have I knowingly read any anti-Catholic literature?
Have I practiced any superstitions (horoscopes, fortune tellers, etc.)?
Second Commandment

Have I used God's name in vain by way of profanity?
Have I murmured or complained against God (blasphemy)?
Have I maligned priests or others consecrated to God?
Have I sworn by God's name (oath) either falsely or rashly?
Have I broken any private vow?
Third Commandment

Have I missed Mass on Sundays or holydays through my own fault?
Have I been late for Mass through my own negligence?
Have I been inattentive at Mass or otherwise failed in reverence for the Most Blessed Sacrament?
Have I done unnecessary servile work (physical labor) or shopping on Sunday?

Fourth Commandment

Have I been disrespectful to my parents or neglected them?
Have I failed in obedience or reverence to others in authority?
Have I mistreated my wife or children? Have I been disobedient or disrespectful to my husband?
Regarding my children:

Have I neglected their material needs? Have I failed to care for their early Baptism or their proper religious instruction?
Have I allowed them to neglect their religious duties?
Have I otherwise failed to discipline them?
Have I given bad them example? Have I interfered with their freedom to marry or follow a religious vocation?
Fifth & Eighth Commandments

Have I quarreled with any one?
Have I cursed anyone or otherwise wished evil on him?
Have I taken pleasure in anyone's misfortune?
Is there anyone to whom I refuse to speak or be reconciled?
Have I lied about anyone (calumny)?
Have I rash judged anyone of a serious sin?
Have I engaged in gossip (detraction) or spread scandal?
Have I lent an ear to scandal about my neighbor?
Have I been jealous or envious of anyone?
Sixth & Ninth

Have I denied my spouse his or her marriage rights?
Have I practiced birth control?
Have I abused my marriage rights in any other way?
Have I committed adultery or fornication?
Have I touched or embraced another impurely?
Have I sinned with others of the same sex?
Have I committed masturbation or otherwise sinned impurely with myself?
Have I harbored lustful desires for anyone?
Have I indulged in other impure thoughts?
Have I failed to dress modestly?
Have I done anything to provoke or occasion impure thoughts in others?
Have I read indecent literature or looked at indecent pictures?
Have I watched suggestive films or programs?
Have I permitted my children or others under my charge to do these things?
Have I used indecent language or told indecent stories?
Have I willingly listened to such stories?
Have I boasted of my sins?
Have I sinned against chastity in any other way?

Seventh & Tenth Commandments

Have I stolen anything?
Have I damaged anyone's property through my own fault?
Have I cheated or defrauded other?
Have I refused or neglected to pay any debts?
Have I neglected my duties or been slothful in my work?
Have I refused or neglected to help anyone in urgent necessity?
Have I failed to make restitution?
OTHER SINS

Have I knowingly caused others to sin?
Have I cooperated in the sins of others?
Have I sinned by gluttony?
Have I become intoxicated?
Have I used narcotics?
Have I been motivated by avarice?
Have I indulged in boasting or vainglory?
Have I received Holy Communion or another sacrament in the state of mortal sin?
Is there any other sin I need to confess?

OOOOOOOOH ARMAGEDDON!!!
How Jehova's Witnesses have been predicting the "End of the World" for over 100 years

Here is some humor [Jehova's Witnesses] quotes from their material and the Watchtower and Awake! Magazines:

1877- THE END OF THIS WORLD...is nearer than most men suppose * from the book: "Three Worlds and the Harvest of this World" Jehova's Witnesses and Prophetic

Speculation; 1877

1889- In subsequent chapters we present proofs that the setting up of the Kingdom of God has already begun...And that the "battle of the great day of God almighty [revelation 16:14], which will end in A.D. 1914 with the complete overthrow of the earth's present rulership, is already commenced. [The 1915 edition of this book changed "A.D. 1914" to "A.D. 1915."] *from the book "The Time is at Hand; 1889

July 15th 1894- We see no reason for changing the futures- nor could we change them if we would. They are, we believe God's dates, not ours. But bear in mind that the end of 1914 is not the date for the beginning, but for the end of the time of trouble.

1904- The stress of the great time of trouble will be on us soon, somewhere between 1910 and 1912- culminating in the end of the "Times of the Gentiles," October 1914. *from the book "The New Creation" 1904

May 1st, 1914- There is absolutely no ground for bible students to question that the consummation of this gospel age is now even at the door...The great crisis...that will consume the ecclesiastical heavens and the social earth is very near. *Watchtower reprints

When the 1914 events did not occur, they were rescheduled for 1918-1925

The book "The Finished Mystery" Armageddon was to begin "in the spring of 1918" There was to be "worldwide all-embracing anarchy" in the "fall of 1920." The 1917 edition asserts that Revelation 11:13 would be fulfilled "early in 1918" ["the earthquake"] and in the "fall of 1920" [the fire]. The 1926 edition is again altered.

The Watchtower- Sept 1st, 1922: "The date 1925 is even more distinctly indicated by the scriptures because it is fixed by the law of God to Israel..."

Watchtower- April 1st, 1923: "Our thought is that 1925 is definitely settled by the scriptures."

So what happened when 1925 arrived??

Watchtower- Jan 1st 1925: "With great expectation, Christians have looked forward to this year. Many have been confidently expected that all members of the body of Christ will be changed to heavenly glory during this year. This may be accomplished. It may not be. "

What happened at the end of 1925??

Watchtower- Sept 1925: "It is to be expected that Satan will try to inject into the minds of the consecrated the thought that 1925 should see an end of the work, and therefore it would be needless for them to do no more."

All of a sudden Satan, not "God" is the one prophesying.

1930- "The great climax is at hand"

1931- "God's kingdom has begun to operate. His day of vengeance is here and Armageddon is at hand."

1933- "The overwhelming testimony of the prophesy and of the supporting facts shows the cleansing of the sanctuary has been accomplished and this indicates that Armageddon draws nigh.

1939- "The battle of the great day of God almighty is very near"

There were 44 more predictions; 42 from the Watchtower, from May 1940- April 1943.

Sept 1, 1944- "Armageddon is near at hand."

1946- [After WWII] "The disaster of Armageddon...is at the door."

1950- "The March is on! Where? To the field of Armageddon for the 'war of the great day of God almighty.' "

1953- "Armageddon is so near at hand, it will strike the generation now living" *The year 1954 was thought by many Witnesses to be "The Year."

1955- "It has become clear that the war of Armageddon is near its breaking out point."

1958- "When will Armageddon be fought? Jehova the great time keeper has scheduled Armageddon to come at the close of the "time of the end." That time is near. How hear?...No man knows the date but we know it will be very soon. How do we know it will be very soon? Because the time left for the Devil, now that Christ has hurled the Devil down to earth, is called 'a short period of time' [revelation 12:12]

Awake! October 1968: Stated that "certain persons" had falsely predicted the end of the world, and what they lacked was "God's guidance."

*But now, supposedly, this false prophesying is over:

1971: They have "all the evidence" and that God is "guiding them." and "it is overwhelming." Now Armageddon will occur in 1975.

1972: "In the mind of the average Witness, there is no doubt that the 1975 date is correct."

1976 Watchtower: March 15th- "Reconciliation through God's mercy before Armageddon"

September 22nd- "a global disaster unparalleled in human history, is very near."

December 15th- "Hold on, the promise nears fulfillment"

1979 Watchtower: June 15th- "A day of reckoning at hand"

Oct 15th "Take courage, the millennium is at hand"

November 1st- "Christian neutrality as God's war approaches."

A psychiatrist remarked that there is a psychiatric hospital they refer to as "the watchtower" as it is full of so many Jehova's Witnesses.

The Truth About Angels

Angelic entities seem to follow the same pattern in dealing with people. Known by different names; "Watchers" "Guardians" "Gatekeepers" their true nature is to keep humanity from progressing in any way especially in the area of spiritual power or knowledge. They are like guards in a concentration camp; the "Watchtowers." Angels are human-hating extraterrestrials and their agenda is to keep humanity spiritually enslaved and without power.

Those who are without and delve into the occult a little too deeply will often meet with unpleasant experiences [again, FEAR is often used as a means of control]. One way or another, those who are without are often deceived into relationships with angels.

Of course there are variations, but here is what to look for- you will see this if you read anything about people's experiences:

The angelic entity intrudes. Most often the creature is uninvited and takes it upon itself to barge in on someone's psyche totally uninvited.
The entity uses love to lower the victim's defenses. This is done deliberately and masks the entity's true intentions. The victim [human beings are emotionally vulnerable- how many serious mistakes have been made at the mercy of our emotions] feels the "love" and is deceived into believing this is a positive visitor.
The entity never explains much or gives the victim any valuable knowledge. Most questions are not answered, if they are, they are in riddles or nonsense. Any information given is either incorrect or incomplete.
Often, the entity will make a statement that it is coming to warn the victim and/or humanity of "erring ways." This many times has to do with anything the entity deems as a threat to their total control, in most cases playing upon the ability for one to defend one's self; humanity's use of mind power for psychic self defense is extremely threatening to these alien predators as their main tool of control is through the mind; their worst worry is should humanity ever discover the truth and attain the same powers of the mind as they possess. They preach a false concept of "peace" and "love" to disarm humanity and create a helpless/defenseless earth. Their own convictions concerning this are made blatantly clear throughout the Christian Bible where they are bringers of torture, suffering, and death. The book of revelation/apocalypse says it all.
The entity in many cases delivers negative prophesy. Most often, this predicts personal ruin, disaster for the victim, his/her loved ones or others who are close. The entity then offers false reassurance that it will remain with the victim through all of this, but does not lift a finger to stop it.
The entity in many cases, such as with ignorant [unknowing] new age people, acts as a healer when channeled. As usual, no knowledge of any value is given and the healer as well as the patient remain cripples and are helpless without the entity's assistance, making them slaves.
I have dealt with these entities and they are anything but benevolent. They are bringers of death, misfortune and their victims of choice are children. I have seen this many times. People who get into angel magick are either extremely arrogant or their personal lives end up in disaster. One guy who was into this sort of thing was severely depressed and into drugs.

When I was a small child, my mother told me her parents had a baby girl several years before she was born. This little girl, when two years of age [they were Christians] would point and say "angel" "angel." Soon afterwards, she hit her head on the streetcar when it jerked to a stop and soon died from complications.

An Christian woman who was expecting a baby was visited by an angel. The angel told her that the baby would be stillborn. Of course, the baby was stillborn.

The angels of apocalypse dump fire, plagues and all other kinds of nasties on humanity.

Angels prey upon children, and take their souls to use for hosting energy that angels and other ET entities feed off of.

About this capture

The Ten Commandments

Exodus 20
I Thou Shalt Have No Other Gods Before Me. Thou shalt not bow down thyself to them, nor serve them:

It is apparent the Nazarene is claiming he is "God." So where does that leave Jehova?:

Matthew 4
7 Jesus said unto him, It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. [Here he is obviously referring to himself]

8 Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them;

Matthew 28
18 And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.

Titus 2
13 Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ; Now "Jesus" is God?

Philippians 2
10 That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth...

II Thou Shalt Not Take the Name of the LORD Thy God in Vain; for the LORD will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.

So what is this entity's name? Jehova? Yaweh? Both JHVH and YHVH mean I am that I am. Which one? Shibboleh? This makes about as much sense as he does.

III Remember the Sabbath Day, To Keep it Holy.

Luke 6: 1-5
1 And it came to pass on the second Sabbath after the first, that he went through the corn fields; and his disciples plucked the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands.
2 And certain of the Pharisees said unto them, Why do ye that which is not lawful to do on the Sabbath days?
3 And Jesus answering them said, Have ye not read so much as this, what David did, when himself was an hungred, and they which were with him;
4 How he went into the house of God, and did take and eat the shewbread, and gave also to them that were with him; which it is not lawful to eat but for the priests alone?
5 And he said unto them, That the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

IV Honour Thy Father and Thy Mother:

Matthew 10: 37
37 He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me.

Luke 9: 59-62
59 And he said unto another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father. 60 Jesus said unto him, Let the dead bury their dead: but go thou and preach the kingdom of God.
61 And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but let me first go bid them farewell, which are at home at my house.
62 And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

Matthew 10: 34-36
34 Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.

35 For I am come to set a man at variance against his father and the daughter against her mother and the daughter in law against her mother in law.
36 And a man's foes shall be they of his own household.

V Thou Shalt Not Kill.

Jehova commits murder:

Exodus 23:27
I will send my fear before thee, and will destroy all the people to whom thou shalt come, and I will make all thine enemies turn their backs unto thee. Jehova orders the murder of thousands:

Exodus 32:27-28
And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Put every man his sword by his side, and go in and out from gate to gate throughout the camp, and slay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour.
28 And the children of Levi did according to the word of Moses: and there fell of the people that day about three thousand men.

Jehova orders his people to commit more murder:

Leviticus 26:7-8
And ye shall chase your enemies, and they shall fall before you by the sword.
8 And five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight: and your enemies shall fall before you by the sword. It is more than obvious, the "lord" thinks nothing of murder or ordering others to commit murder:

Numbers 1:51
And when the tabernacle setteth forward, the Levites shall take it down: and when the tabernacle is to be pitched, the Levites shall set it up: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death. Murder is so important to jehova, he has to repeat himself:

Numbers 3:10
And thou shalt appoint Aaron and his sons, and they shall wait on their priest's office: and the stranger that cometh nigh shall be put to death.

More murder, along with direct orders to partake in acts of cannibalism:

Numbers 21:3
And the LORD hearkened to the voice of Israel, and delivered up the Canaanites; and they utterly destroyed them and their cities: and he called the name of the place Hormah.
Numbers 23-24:

Behold, the people shall rise up as a great lion, and lift up himself as a young lion: he shall not lie down until he eat of the prey, and drink the blood of the slain.

Jehova orders more mass murder:

Numbers 25:16
And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying, 25:17 Vex the Midianites, and smite them:
Numbers 31:7
And they warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses; and they slew all the males.
31:8 And they slew the kings of Midian, beside the rest of them that were slain; namely, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five kings of Midian: Balaam also the son of Beor they slew with the sword.
31:9 And the children of Israel took all the women of Midian captives, and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods.
31:10 And they burnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire.
31:11 And they took all the spoil, and all the prey, both of men and of beasts.

Jehova commits more mass murder:

Deuteronomy 2:20
[That also was accounted a land of giants: giants dwelt therein in old time; and the Ammonites call them Zamzummims;
2:21 A people great, and many, and tall, as the Anakims; but the LORD destroyed them before them; and they succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead:
2:22 As he did to the children of Esau, which dwelt in Seir, when he destroyed the Horims from before them; and they succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead even unto this day:
2:23 And the Avims which dwelt in Hazerim, even unto Azzah, the Caphtorims, which came forth out of Caphtor, destroyed them, and dwelt in their stead.]
2:30 But Sihon king of Heshbon would not let us pass by him: for the LORD thy God hardened his spirit, and made his heart obstinate, that he might deliver him into thy hand, as appeareth this day.
2:31 And the LORD said unto me, Behold, I have begun to give Sihon and his land before thee: begin to possess, that thou mayest inherit his land.
2:32 Then Sihon came out against us, he and all his people, to fight at Jahaz.
2:33 And the LORD our God delivered him before us; and we smote him, and his sons, and all his people.
2:34 And we took all his cities at that time, and utterly destroyed the men, and the women, and the little ones, of every city, we left none to remain:
2:35 Only the cattle we took for a prey unto ourselves, and the spoil of the cities which we took.
2:36 From Aroer, which is by the brink of the river of Arnon, and from the city that is by the river, even unto Gilead, there was not one city too strong for us: the LORD our God delivered all unto us:

2:37 Only unto the land of the children of Ammon thou camest not, nor unto any place of the river Jabbok, nor unto the cities in the mountains, nor unto whatsoever the LORD our God forbad us.

Numbers 31
17 Now therefore kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man by lying with him.
18 But all the women children, that have not known a man by lying with him, keep alive for yourselves. The mass murders committed by and directed by Jehova fills much of the Old Testament. The above scriptures are only a small sample. Including all of them here would take pages and pages.

Like father, like son- quotes from the Nazarene:

Luke 19: 27
27 But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me. Matthew 10: 34-36
34 Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.

VI Thou Shalt Not Commit Adultery:

Exodus 22
16 And if a man entice a maid that is not betrothed, and lie with her, he shall surely endow her to be his wife.
17 If her father utterly refuse to give her unto him, he shall pay money according to the dowry of virgins.

2 Samuel 12
11 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will raise up evil against thee out of thine own house, and I will take thy wives before thine eyes, and give them unto thy neighbour, and he shall lie with thy wives in the sight of this sun.
12 For thou didst it secretly: but I will do this thing before all Israel, and before the sun.

Luke 8:
3 And Joanna the wife of Chuza Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, which ministered unto him of their substance.

VII Thou Shalt Not Steal:

Jehova orders his Hebrews to steal from the Egyptians:

Exodus 3
21 And I will give this people favour in the sight of the Egyptians: and it shall come to pass, that, when ye go, ye shall not go empty.
22 But every woman shall borrow of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house, jewels of silver, and jewels of gold, and raiment: and ye shall put them upon your sons, and upon your daughters; and ye shall spoil the Egyptians.

Jehova steals land from the Canaanites:

Leviticus 14
34 When ye be come into the land of Canaan, which I give to you for a possession, and I put the plague of leprosy in a house of the land of your possession; Murder and stealing under orders from Jehova:

Numbers 31:
1 And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
2 Avenge the children of Israel of the Midianites: afterward shalt thou be gathered unto thy people. 3 And Moses spake unto the people, saying, Arm some of yourselves unto the war, and let them go against the Midianites, and avenge the LORD of Midian.
4 Of every tribe a thousand, throughout all the tribes of Israel, shall ye send to the war.
5 So there were delivered out of the thousands of Israel, a thousand of every tribe, twelve thousand armed for war.
6 And Moses sent them to the war, a thousand of every tribe, them and Phinehas the son of Eleazar the priest, to the war, with the holy instruments, and the trumpets to blow in his hand.
7 And they warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses; and they slew all the males.
8 And they slew the kings of Midian, beside the rest of them that were slain; namely, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five kings of Midian: Balaam also the son of Beor they slew with the sword.
9 And the children of Israel took all the women of Midian captives, and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods.
10 And they burnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire.
11 And they took all the spoil, and all the prey, both of men and of beasts.

Like father, like son:

Luke 19: 29-35
29 And it came to pass, when he was come nigh to Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount called the mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples,
30 Saying, Go ye into the village over against you; in the which at your entering ye shall find a colt tied, whereon yet never man sat: loose him, and bring him hither.
31 And if any man ask you, Why do ye loose him? thus shall ye say unto him, Because the Lord hath need of him.
32 And they that were sent went their way, and found even as he had said unto them.

33 And as they were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose ye the colt?
34 And they said, The Lord hath need of him.
35 And they brought him to Jesus: and they cast their garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon.

Luke 6: 1-5
1 And it came to pass on the second sabbath after the first, that he went through the corn fields; and his disciples plucked the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands.
2 And certain of the Pharisees said unto them, Why do ye that which is not lawful to do on the sabbath days?
3 And Jesus answering them said, Have ye not read so much as this, what David did, when himself was an hungred, and they which were with him;
4 How he went into the house of God, and did take and eat the shewbread, and gave also to them that were with him; which it is not lawful to eat but for the priests alone?
5 And he said unto them, That the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

VIII Thou Shalt Not Bear False Witness Against Thy Neighbour.

There are hundreds of verses that prove Jehova is a prolific liar.
Some of Jehova's Lies:

Genesis 2
16 But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.
Adam lived another 930 years:
Genesis 5 5 And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years: and he died.

IX, X Thou Shalt Not Covet Thy Neighbour's House, Thou Shalt Not Covet Thy Neighbour's Wife, nor His Manservant, nor His Maidservant, nor His Ox, nor His Ass, nor Any Thing that is Thy Neighbour's.

The numerous verses, many are listed above, show how Jehova has no respect for human beings or their property. He coveted the land of the Canaanites, demanded relentlessly, the blood sacrifices of human beings and animals and continuously looted from others.

Luke 8:
3 And Joanna the wife of Chuza Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, which ministered unto him of their substance.

Luke 19: 29-35
29 And it came to pass, when he was come nigh to Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount called the mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples,
30 Saying, Go ye into the village over against you; in the which at your entering ye shall find a colt tied, whereon yet never man sat: loose him, and bring him hither.
31 And if any man ask you, Why do ye loose him? thus shall ye say unto him, Because the Lord hath need of him.
32 And they that were sent went their way, and found even as he had said unto them.
33 And as they were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose ye the colt?
34 And they said, The Lord hath need of him.
35 And they brought him to Jesus: and they cast their garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon.

About this capture

The Jesuits
[The Society of Jesus]

From the book: “The Secret History of the Jesuits” by Edmond Paris; translated from the French, 1975:

About the author “Edmond Paris”:
“In exposing such a conspiracy, he put his life at stake.” “Edmond Paris never knew me, but I knew him without meeting him personally when I, with other Jesuits under the extreme oath and induction, was being briefed on the names of institutions and individuals in Europe who were dangerous to the goals of the Roman Catholic Institution. His name was given to us.” “The Edmond Paris works on Roman Catholicism brought about the pledge on the part of the Jesuits to: 1] destroy him, 2] destroy his reputation, including his family and, 3] destroy his work."

-Dr. Alberto Rivera
[Ex-Jesuit Priest]

The names and the faces change, but this is still the same program as Jewish communism. Christianity is a preparation for communism. When either one fails, the other is ready to take control of a region or country. Just as the former USSR fell in 1991, along with the other countries of the "Iron Curtin," Christians moved right back in like fleas on a dog, endlessly and forcefully proselytizing and working to convert the populace. This is a vicious cycle.

"The Jesuits secretly and relentlessly work toward two major goals for the Roman Catholic Institution: 1. "Universal political power" and 2. "A universal church in fulfillment of the prophesies of Revelation 6, 13, 17 and 18." [1]

The Jesuits [Society of Jesus] are the spies and the assassination squad of the Catholic Church. People who believe this institution to be "religious" or "spiritual" are sadly deluded. It is and always has been political in every respect. It is a political front that operates to control people using many fictitious religious characters and ceremonies stolen from religions predating it from around the world. The separation of church and state mean nothing to the Catholic Church, which works relentlessly and ruthlessly for world domination by any means possible. This institution has been built on mass murder, torture, extortion, organized crime, lies and depriving humanity of true spirituality. It has controlled kings, queens, nobility, presidents, governments, and nearly anyone in power.

There are claims of a "Black Pope." This is only a myth; a myth to divert the responsibility from the Catholic Pope and his organization of criminals. In truth, they employ the concept of Hegelianism by playing both sides against the middle to gain control. This is analogous to someone who openly preaches against illicit drug use, openly works for the DEA pretending to fight illicit drug use, and in secret, operates a drug smuggling and distribution ring right out of the DEA; or a crooked cop. While the Catholic Church openly claims to be a religious and charitable institution, it secretly runs and controls organized criminal activities, working hand in hand with Jewish communism.

The Protestants are all too happy to condemn the Catholics and dig up dirt on them as blame shifting takes away the need to explain how such degeneracy and odious actions could repeatedly occur within the Christian Churches. Of course, we all know Satan has been a scapegoat for these criminals all along, as they are too deluded and indoctrinated to see it has been their own "god" who has always been deceiving them.

Ignatius de Loyola was the founder of the Jesuits. The Protestant reformation had done serious damage to the uncontested control of the Catholic Church by the time he arrived on the scene. He came to the conclusion the only way the Catholic Church could regain the power it lost was to enforce the canons and doctrines on the temporal power of the pope and not just destroy lives through the Inquisition, as the Dominican priests and nuns were doing, but to secretly infiltrate every area of life.

“The constitution of the Company of Jesus was at last drafted and approved in Rome by Paul III, in 1540, and the Jesuits put themselves at the disposition of the pope, promising him unconditional obedience.” [2]

Ignatius was more aware than any other Catholic leader who preceded him that the best way to control a man was to become master of his mind. “We imbue him to spiritual forces which he would find very difficult to eliminate later.” “…forces more lasting than all the best principles and doctrines; these forces can come up again to the surface sometimes after years of not even mentioning them, and become so imperative that the will finds itself unable to oppose any obstacle, and has to follow their irresistible impulse.” [3]

One must always remember how the Catholic Church has much esoteric knowledge at its disposal from centuries of confiscating, looting, and systematic removal of these materials from the populace. The Jesuits have used this knowledge to the detriment of humanity. Unbeknownst to most, the Jesuits have infiltrated every country on the face of the earth and have been expelled by many. Through the Catholic sacrament of confession, the Jesuits gained control of Kings and Queens, rulers and nobility. They were even offered important political posts openly. It wouldn’t be at all surprising that blackmail was frequently used.

"Whenever a country was infested with Jesuits, they managed to take control. This was done through infiltration. Soon after, the authorities began consulting them with important issues, large donations would start flowing in and before long, “they occupied all of the schools, the pulpits of most churches and the confessionals of all high ranking people.” 4

"The public is practically unaware of the overwhelming responsibility carried by the Vatican and its Jesuits in the start of the two world wars- a situation which may be explained in part by the gigantic finances at the disposition of the Vatican and its Jesuits, giving them power in so many spheres, especially since the last conflict." 5

“No state suffered as much as Poland did under the Jesuits’ domination.” “And in no other country apart from Portugal, was the society so powerful.” “While Poland was heading fast towards ruin, the number of Jesuit establishments and schools was growing so fast that the General made Poland into a special congregation in 1751.” 6

Teachings of the Far East were corrupted with the arrival and infestation of the Jesuits. Jesuit Robert de Nobile settled in India to convert the masses to Catholicism there. True to the nature of a Jesuit, he infiltrated the Brahmin priestly caste [always appealing to the ruling classes]. “He developed the clothes, habits, and way of living of the Brahmins, mixed their rites with Christian ones, all with the approval of Pope Gregory XV." He converted over 250,000 Hindus. 7

This, more than likely is where a lot of the ludicrous new age teachings with their promotion of the nazarene, the teachings of "karma" and angels comes from- Christian infiltration.

"In South America, they conquered the natives who were subsequently forced to live under strict Catholicism. "The Jesuits watch over them…" "…they punish the smallest mistakes…The whip, fasting, prison, pillory on the public square, public penance in the church, these are the chastisements they use."
"The culprit dressed in the clothes of a penitent, was escorted to church where he confessed his fault. Then he was whipped on the public square according to the penal code… The culprits always received this chastisement, not only without murmurs, but also with thanksgivings…The guilty one, having been punished and reconciled, kissed the hand of the one who struck him, saying 'May God reward you for freeing me, by this light punishment, from the eternal sorrows which threatened me." 8

"We will compose poems; but may our poets be Christians and not followers of Pagans who invoke Muses, Mountain Nymphs, Sea Nymphs, Calliope, Apollo, etc…or other Gods and Goddesses. What's more, if these are to be mentioned, may it be with the view to caricature them, as they are only demons." 9

"The Roman Catholic Church was among the richest landowners in North Africa. In Mexico, they had silver mines and sugar refineries, in Paraguay, tea and cacao plantations, carpet factories and also control over the food supply as they owned the cattle and "exported 80,000 mules per year." "And to make an even bigger profit, the fathers did not hesitate to defraud the state treasury, as seen in the well known story of the so-called boxes of chocolate unloaded at Cadix which were full of gold powder." 10

January 7th, 1960, in Rome, there was a summit conference that took place that was intended to bring a peaceful co-existence between the soviets and the eastern bloc and the west. In the USA, Cardinal Spellman [who has numerous photos in magazines and newspapers standing beside important world leaders] urged Catholics to show open hostility to Mr. Khrushchev, when he visited the United States and was a guest here. Cardinal Ottaviani, Secretary of the Holy Office, delivered a most vehement speech at the basilica of "Saint Marie-Majeure" against the Soviets and the Western Powers who were involved in the peace project. 11

One might ask what purpose war serves when an institution such as the Catholic Church is striving for world rule. Nothing known to humanity changes lives, creates devastation and opens people up for domination more than war. Both sides of the conflict are aided and funded by those intent on establishing world domination and the creation of a slave state. At the end of the war, all countries concerned are at the debt of the international bankers, much of these owned, and operated by the Vatican. This is not to disregard others who are working for the same objectives. All parties involved use each other to achieve these ends, along the way, both despise each other out of greed and seek each other's destruction so if the goal is achieved, the winner takes all. What they all have in common is the worship of the same "God."

About this capture

The Nazarene: the Worst Sinner of Them All

Christians believe the Nazarene to be perfect, a peaceful, loving, healing, and understanding being. Most are too lazy to read the facts. The bible may be the most purchased book, but it is the least read.

The Nazarene was slothful, indolent and lazy. He never worked like everyone else.
He freeloaded and lived off the work and labors of others.
He was a rude and inappreciative guest who often insulted his hosts.
He STOLE and ordered others to do so.
He condoned and advocated MURDER.
He is one of the worst hypocrites who ever existed.

The Seven Deadly Sins:

Pride
The Nazarene was a very arrogant, selfish and conceited individual. His overwhelming sense of negative pride and self exhaltation was seen in many of the scriptures:

He was arrogant enough to insult his host and leave her with the burden of work while he hogged all of the attention, indicating an extreme sense of self importance:
Luke 10: 38-42
38 Now it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village: and a certain woman named Martha received him into her house.
39 And she had a sister called Mary, which also sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word.
40 But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to him, and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me.
41 And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things:
42 But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

Anyone who does not love him more than their own parents is not worthy of him. What happened to honor thy father and mother? Here, the Nazarene is placing himself above the family members of his followers, AGAIN, indicating pride and extreme arrogance:

Matthew 10: 37
37 He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me. This is also the sin of ENVY- he is so jealous of anyone who might share their love for another.

The pleasure of being massaged with expensive ointment was more important than selling the ointment and giving the money to the poor.

Mark 14: 3-7
3 And being in Bethany in the house of Simon the leper, as he sat at meat, there came a woman having an alabaster box of ointment of spikenard, very precious, and she brake the box and poured it on his head.
4 And there were some who had indignation within themselves and said, “Why was this waste of the ointment made?
5 For it might have been sold for more than three hundred pence, and have been given to the poor.” And they murmured against her.
6 But Jesus said, “Let her alone; why trouble ye her? She hath wrought a good work on me.
7 For ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will, ye may do them good; but me ye have not always.

The Nazarene calls other human beings "dogs" and "swine," indicating they are way beneath him:
Matthew 7: 6
6 "Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you."

He stated he was "greater" then Jonas and Solomon:

Matthew 12: 41-42
41 The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here.
42 The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here.

Envy
The Nazarene was so envious of any devotion or affections shown for anyone other than himself, even close family members, he demanded that his disciples leave their families behind.
Luke 9: 59-62
59 And he said unto another, Follow me. But he said, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.
60 Jesus said unto him, Let the dead bury their dead: but go thou and preach the kingdom of God.
61 And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but let me first go bid them farewell, which are at home at my house.
62 And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

There are many more scriptures that blatantly expose the envious resentful character of the Nazarene. These are indicated in this article.

Wrath
Because of an excessive sense of pride, exaggerated self importance, arrogance and an overwhelming belief of being first and being entitled, the Nazarene was often subject to the sin of wrath:
Matt: 11: 20-24
20 Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not:
21 Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes.
22 But I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment, than for you.
23 And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day.
24 But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment, than for thee.

The Nazarene is forever condemning, insulting and threatening others:

Matt. 23:33
33 "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?"

Mark 3: 5
5 And when he had looked round about on them with anger, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts, he saith unto the man, "Stretch forth thine hand."

John 2: 15
15 And when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers' money, and overthrew the tables

In the above verse, the Nazarene is condemning money making in the temple and greed, but by his actions and demands, the Nazarene is the greediest of them all.

The Nazarene makes it plain he comes to bring war on earth and conflict, hatred and enmity among family members; breaking up the family unit and home:
Matthew 10: 34-36
34 Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.
35 For I am come to set a man at variance against his father and the daughter against her mother and the daughter in law against her mother in law.
36 And a man's foes shall be they of his own household.

He showed impatience and upset by the presence of a father who's child could not speak, that petitioned him for help. His personal time and energy were more important than spending a few seconds to help a small child who was handicapped. He also insulted his disciples and those around him who he spoke to in reply to the asking for help.

Mark 9: 19
19 “O faithless generation, how long am I to be with you? How long am I to bear with you? Bring him to me.”

Greed
The Nazarene's distaste for labor was highly impractical. Because he lived off of the charity of others, there were times when charity couldn’t satisfy his needs, so he STOLE.
On the Sabbath, he and his disciples helped themselves to a farmer’s corn. When asked why he violated the law by eating on the Sabbath, he justified stealing by calling himself "lord of the Sabbath."

Luke 6: 1-5
1 And it came to pass on the second Sabbath after the first, that he went through the corn fields; and his disciples plucked the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands.
2 And certain of the Pharisees said unto them, Why do ye that which is not lawful to do on the Sabbath days?
3 And Jesus answering them said, Have ye not read so much as this, what David did, when himself was an hungered, and they which were with him;
4 How he went into the house of God, and did take and eat the shewbread, and gave also to them that were with him; which it is not lawful to eat but for the priests alone?
5 And he said unto them, That the Son of man is Lord also of the Sabbath.

The Nazarene's sloth and greed often led to more theft:
He sent two disciples to steal an ass and a colt. He had no consideration as to whether taking the animals for himself would place any hardship upon whom he stole them from. Here, in addition to the act of stealing, the Nazarene does not have the nerve to go and steal these animals himself, he orders others to do so.

Luke 19: 29-35
29 And it came to pass, when he was come nigh to Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount called the mount of Olives, he sent two of his disciples,
30 Saying, Go ye into the village over against you; in the which at your entering ye shall find a colt tied, whereon yet never man sat: loose him, and bring him hither.
31 And if any man ask you, Why do ye loose him? thus shall ye say unto him, Because the Lord hath need of him.
32 And they that were sent went their way, and found even as he had said unto them.
33 And as they were loosing the colt, the owners thereof said unto them, Why loose ye the colt?

34 And they said, The Lord hath need of him.
35 And they brought him to Jesus: and they cast their garments upon the colt, and they set Jesus thereon.

Sloth
The Nazarene has always been known for his hatred of physical labor. The Nazarene also hated washing and bathing: Here, the Nazarene encourages not washing:
Matt. 15: 1-20
1 Then came to Jesus scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusalem, saying,
2 Why do thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders? for they wash not their hands when they eat bread.
19 For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies:
20 These are the things which defile a man: but to eat with unwashen hands defileth not a man.

Mark 7: 1-9
1 Then came together unto him the Pharisees, and certain of the scribes, which came from Jerusalem.
2 And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with defiled, that is to say, with unwashen, hands, they found fault.
3 For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands oft, eat not, holding the tradition of the elders.
4 And when they come from the market, except they wash, they eat not. And many other things there be, which they have received to hold, as the washing of cups, and pots, brasen vessels, and of tables.
5 Then the Pharisees and scribes asked him, Why walk not thy disciples according to the tradition of the elders, but eat bread with unwashen hands?
6 He answered and said unto them, Well hath Esaias prophesied of you hypocrites, as it is written, This people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me.
7 Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.
8 For laying aside the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things ye do.
9 And he said unto them, Full well ye reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition.

Also, the stretch in the desert speaks for itself. (Matthew 4: 1-2)

Gluttony
Gluttony is an inordinate desire to consume more than that which one requires. Although the Nazarene preached abstinence, he did not intend this for himself.
He gets defensive about complaints directed at him and his followers who are always seen eating and drinking.

Luke 5:33-34
33 And they said unto him, Why do the disciples of John fast often, and make prayers, and likewise the disciples of the Pharisees; but thine eat and drink?
34 And he said unto them, Can ye make the children of the bridechamber fast, while the bridegroom is with them?
35 But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days.

He was known as a glutton and a drunkard.

Luke 7:34
34 The Son of man is come eating and drinking; and ye say, Behold a gluttonous man, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners!

The Nazarene was wrathful when his sources for free meals were not readily available. w. Once he cursed a fig tree for not having any fruit. The tree died.

Mark 11:12-14, 20-22
12 And on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry:
13 And seeing a fig tree afar off having leaves, he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon: and when he came to it, he found nothing but leaves; for the time of figs was not yet.
14 And Jesus answered and said unto it, No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his disciples heard it.
20 And in the morning, as they passed by, they saw the fig tree dried up from the roots.
21 And Peter calling to remembrance saith unto him, Master, behold, the fig tree which thou cursedst is withered away.
22 And Jesus answering saith unto them, Have faith in God.

Lust
Lust is an inordinate craving for the pleasures of the body.
The Nazarene preached celibacy for his followers, but being the hypocrite that he is, he did not apply these teachings to himself. Both men* and women put out sexual favors for him as did others in the way of food, shelter and other needs.
Luke 8:1-3
1 And it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God: and the twelve were with him,
2 And certain women, which had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene, out of whom went seven devils,
3 And Joanna the wife of Chuza Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, which ministered unto him of their substance.

*There are deleted passages in the gospel of Mark. The Nazarene had intercourse with one of his disciples while the others slept in the garden before his crucifixion.

The Nazarene advocated and encouraged MURDER for selfish reasons:
Luke 19: 27
27 But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me.

The Nazarene not only ADVOCATED SLAVERY, but encouraged and condoned the abuse of slaves:
Luke 12: 47
47 And that servant, which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes.

In addition to the sermon on the mount being ant-life and against nature (artificial), the Nazarene's actions speak much louder than his words and reveal his true nature- that of a big hypocrite:
Matthew 5
1 And seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his disciples came unto him:
2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,
3 Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

The Nazarene was ANYTHING but "poor in spirit." He was arrogant, self righteous and always put his own needs and desires before that of others.
Luke 10: 38-42
Matthew 10: 37
(see above scriptures)

4 Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.

Matthew 8:21-22
21 And another of his disciples said unto him, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father.
22 But Jesus said unto him, Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead.

5 Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.
"Meek" means "humble." Read the above paragraph of scriptures revealing the Nazarene's pride and arrogance.

6 Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.

The Nazarene openly advocated and encouraged chaos and lawlessness. These unethical, suicidal, anti-life teachings have worked to undermine and destroy legal systems, resulting in the punishing of the victim, while criminals are rewarded and encouraged in their behavior. The end result is the collapse of civilization. Any species that fails to defend itself will end up extinct. If the human body ignored the germs, bacteria, and viruses that invaded it, nearly all people would be dead in less than a day. These teachings are anti-life and designed to destroy human lives.

Matthew 5: 38-44
38 Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth:
39 But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.
40 And if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also.
41 And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.
42 Give to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away.
43 Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy.
44 But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you;

7 Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.
The Nazarene was anything but "merciful." He is forever condemning, threatening and damning people.

8 Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.

The Nazarene was anything but "pure of heart."

He LIED:
John 5: 31
31 If I bear witness of myself, my witness is not true.

The Nazarene told his disciples that they would not die before his second coming:

Matthew 16: 28
28 Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom.

Revelation 3: 11
11 Behold, I come quickly: hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.

He STOLE:
Luke 19: 29-35
Luke 6: 1-5
(see above)

He ADVOCATED and ENCOURAGED MURDER on a whim:
Luke 19: 27 (see above)

He was one of the worst hypocrites that ever lived.
Matthew 5: 19
19 Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.

9 Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.

Matthew 10: 34-36
34 Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.
35 For I am come to set a man at variance against his father and the daughter against her mother and the daughter in law against her mother in law.
36 And a man's foes shall be they of his own household.

10 Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.
The Nazarene condemns righteousness and works against it- see the other scriptures on this page.

Matthew 5: 11
11 Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.

This is blatant of the Nazarene's hatred of humanity.

The Nazarene preached self mutilation:
Matthew 19: 12
12 For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.

A "eunuch" is a castrated male; in other words, a male with his balls cut off. The Catholic Church routinely castrated young choirboys in order to prevent their voices from changing.

Matthew 5: 29-30
29 And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.
30 And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

The Nazarene's CRUELTY TO ANIMALS:
Matthew 8: 30-32
30 And there was a good way off from them an herd of many swine feeding.
31 So the devils besought him, saying, If thou cast us out, suffer us to go away into the herd of swine.
32 And he said unto them, Go. And when they were come out, they went into the herd of swine: and, behold, the whole herd of swine ran violently down a steep place into the sea, and perished in the waters.

No individual in history has been provided with more excuses. Twisting, warping, distorting and outright lying of what this entity taught and did is commonplace among those who are deluded, sympathetic and/or just plain stupid.

Many argue that this entity never existed and/or is unimportant. People who maintain these opinions are as deluded and foolish as those who believe the Nazarene was a righteous individual. Whether or not this entity physically existed is irrelevant. The effects this creature had upon humanity has permeated every aspect of the society in which most of us live. There are millions and millions who worship this creature and promote him at every level relentlessly. The impact this entity has had upon humanity is horrendous. Nearly every war there has been has been fought for RHP religious purposes. Millions and millions have severe psychological disorders and hang-ups, which prevent them from living a healthy normal life.

The sorry list of crimes against humanity perpetrated because of this individual goes on and on.

It does not matter whether the entity is a myth or physically and historically existed. The entity is a reality through all of the major injustices and workings of which have held us ALL back for centuries and must be destroyed.
Those who take a stand for personal liberty and freedom are incessantly battling Christians in the courts as they relentlessly and obsessively work to deprive every last man, woman and child of their freedom and their lives.

The Ubiquitous Nazarene

The Nazarene is made up of nothing but stolen legends, stolen identities and a bunch of meaningless, worthless hypocritical and contradictory teachings. I don't think there has been a character in all of history that is as fictitious as this Nazarene idiot, and because he is a lie, he can change according to the times.

He was invented to be nothing more than a distraction for the masses, with the intention of removing all spiritual knowledge and power from the populace and placing it in the hands of a controlling few to the detriment of the all.

Christianity has survived because it always adapted to the times, just as it is doing today. The Christian church finally admitted insidiously that the Earth is not flat. If they hadn't, they would have never survived. That is just one of numerous examples.

Now, the Nazarene has put on a New Age face. The teachings of the Original Gods and ancient knowledge are all of a sudden attributed to the Nazarene. This is whether they come from Egypt [Some double-digit I.Q. individuals have the stupidity to claim he was a "pharaoh."]

In the 1960's and 70's, he was the ideal hippy. Now he is the great teacher of this new age crap and the "threefold" joke, which of course includes those nefarious angels and Judeo/Christian mysticism.
During the crusades, he was the Christian warrior, leading the Christian armies to slaughter everyone in their path- "Onward Christian Soldiers." With Islam, he still exists, but this time, as not the "Son of God" but as a prophet.

He seems to be everywhere and conforms to every trend, and every culture. Just slap the ragged poor professional victim on two crossed sticks of wood and there he is. The only thing that is real concerning this ubiquitous clown is the suicidal teachings designed to turn the whole of society into malleable slaves. The underlying message never changes.

This is analogous to a harmless looking rodent that brings in lethal parasites that infest the locale like what happened with the Bubonic Plague of the Middle Ages.

Because he is fictitious, he can be made into whatever they please as long as it is done insidiously. He can be anything at any time and anywhere. On the one hand, he is celibate and the "Son of God." On the other hand, in order to adapt with the sexual openness of today, he now has sexual relations with Mary Magdalene.

Because new knowledge has come from the Far East, of course, he was there from age "13 until 30," as there is no written record so they can make up anything they wish. This way, they can attribute a lot of the Eastern teachings to him and claim "the all is one." Yeah, the "all is one" until someone mentions "Satan" and either there is denial or defensiveness out of these jokers.

Because homosexuality is becoming more open, now parts of the gospel of St. John, which were conveniently deleted, claim he had sexual intercourse another male. He can be anything at anytime and anywhere.

The Nazarene never gave any direct answers to anything. This way, any bible thumper is free to quote here and there, as they see fit. His parables fit any situation at any time and say nothing. They can be interpreted 100 different ways. Just put him on a stick and start pounding away!

Exposing Spiritual Corruption: Spiritual Alchemy
The Bible

True Satanism is based upon the ancient religions that predated Judaism, Christianity, and Islam by hundreds to thousands of years. The traditional colors of black and red used in Satanism, date all the way back to Ancient Egypt and are symbolic of spiritual transformation. The ancient religions were based upon completing our Creator Satan's work: that of transforming the human soul into that of a god and achieving god-like power and immortality. Satan's Kingdom was stolen from him.

The Judeo/Christian Bible is a corruption of stolen material that has been used to spiritually enslave humanity. All of the legends of the Gods are allegories. The Vatican and its cohorts have gained wealth, power, and control by forcing people to believe these allegories are literal places and characters.

The completion of the work, what is known in alchemy as the "Magnum Opus" has its foundation in the kundalini. The kundalini serpent lies coiled at the base of the spine. Through meditation, the fiery serpent ascends. This is what is known as "Raising the Devil." There are 33 vertebrae in the in the human spinal column. We often hear the term "33rd degree Mason" or that the fictitious nazarene lived 33 years. The kundalini serpent ascends the 33 vertebrae of the spine.

The seven chakras are also very important in the work. When the kundalini ascends, it must pierce through each of the seven chakras. This is why there is so much emphasis on the number seven in many ancient spiritual texts and also what has been corrupted in the Judeo/Christian Bible. Christian leaders mislead their followers through deceiving them into believing the stolen legends in the bible are real. Through this deception, the Vatican and Christian churches have obtained unbelievable wealth and power. This power is not only in the material world, but in the spiritual as well. All spiritual knowledge was systematically removed with the Inquisition. Those at the top are adept at black magick and have advanced to spiritual power, while the rest of humanity suffers under their control.

Many ancient paintings we are told are of the nazarene, "virgin mary" and related are really of the Original Gods, such as Marduk (Amon Ra) and Astaroth. The Magnum Opus begins ideally in the spring when the Sun is in Aries, thus the man standing with the lamb. The halo is the ascended kundalini and the vibrant aura of witchpower. The Catholic Church stole this and has been passing it off as their fictitious nazarene. The glyphs for the sign of Aries can be readily seen in Astaroth's Sigil:

The story of the creation in the book of genesis is another allegory: "God' creates the universe in "seven days," "On the seventh day he rested." Those of us who are educated know once the kundalini serpent has ascended through the 6 chakras and passed through the three "knots" (trinity), the seventh is effortless. In truth, "Heaven" is a code word for the seventh chakra. We have all heard the term "Seventh heaven." "God" is a code word for ourselves and also the word "Gods" is a code for the chakras in many ancient texts. "Hell" is a code word for the base chakra, aka "the lower world" where the scorching hot kundalini serpent lies dormant.

The tree in the "Garden of Eden" in the bible was stolen from many different religions predating Christianity and symbolizes a map of the human soul, the trunk of the tree representing the human spine, with the branches symbolizing the "144,000" nadis. "Adam and Eve" symbolize the Ida and the Pingala, where the two meet and become one. With the ascended kundalini and the fusion of the ida and pingala at the 6th chakra, gnosis is obtained and one's spiritual eyes are opened. This was originally symbolized in the Egyptian "All-seeing Eye."

The number 12 is also ubiquitous in many ancient texts and also in the stolen material of the bible. The number 12 symbolizes the 12 steps in the magnum opus. These are based upon the 12 signs of the zodiac.

Genesis 1
1 In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.
The heaven and earth symbolize the crown and base chakras

2 And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.
"Without form and void" represent what is known as the "chaos" stage in the magnum opus.

4 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.
The light is where one creates what is known as the prima materia, the foundation of the philosopher's stone. This is done by condensing the bioelectricity/chi into a ball of light.

5 And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night. And the evening and the morning were the first day.
This is a first step and foundation, thus "the first day."

16 And God made two great lights; the greater light to rule the day, and the lesser light to rule the night: he made the stars also.
17 And God set them in the firmament of the heaven to give light upon the earth,
18 And to rule over the day and over the night, and to divide the light from the darkness: and God saw that it was good.
19 And the evening and the morning were the fourth day.

The above verses regarding the "two great lights" symbolize the heart chakra, where "heaven" and "earth" meet. As we can see in the downward point of Satan's Sigil, the Satanic Pentagram, and Baphomet, light descends through the crown to the base chakra.

20 And God said, Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life, and fowl that may fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven.
"The elixir of life, the blessed waters, penetrate down to them [the metals/chakras] and rouse them from their sleep." This is what is known as the "dew" that is secreted by the pineal gland as a result of power meditation. Birds are also very important symbols in alchemy.

27 So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them.
31 And God saw every thing that he had made, and, behold, it was very good. And the evening and the morning were the sixth day.

From the above, again the ALLEGORY is perverted and twisted. The "sixth day" is the sixth chakra where the male and female ida and pingala meet.

3 And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it: because that in it he had rested from all his work, which God created and made.
Here is another alchemical allegory that was stolen and twisted. When the alchemist has completed his/her work, he/she rests. "God" = OURSELVES!

The genesis saga continues, all of it stolen and corrupted from religions predating xianity.

Genesis 3: 3 But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.

There is the stage in alchemy where one undergoes a death of the prima materia. This is known as "nigredo" "black stage."

"The initial, black stage of the opus alchymicum in which the body of the impure metal, the matter of the Stone, or the old outmoded state of being is killed, putrefied and dissolved into the original substance of the creation, the prima materia, in order that it may be renovated and reborn in a new form."[1]
Here is where the fictitious nazarene was also invented. The nazarene was stolen from some 18+ Pagan Gods who were "crucified" on a cross or hung from a tree. All of this is an allegory, for example: The Norse God Odin hung from a tree and experienced a death of sorts to obtain knowledge. Through being reborn, he obtained gnosis. The cross represents the all-important four quarters. This is also the meaning of the hanged man card in the Tarot. The Egyptian phoenix has the same meaning- rebirth through fire. The eclipse said to have occurred during the supposed "crucifixion" of the nazarene also symbolizes the nigredo stage of blackness. This stage is also symbolized by the black crow and the Black Sun.

4 And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die:

The kundalini serpent transforms, but does not kill.

5 For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.
This is the gnosis that the Christian Churches and their nefarious cohorts have relentlessly worked against. Once our eyes have been opened, we can no longer be deceived by ANY lies!

7 And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves aprons.
Nakedness is another allegory of rebirth. Everyone is born naked.

Now, we get to "Noah" and the ark, which was stolen from the Sumerian epic of Ziusudra.

"Noah's flood is a symbol for the 'dissolution of the Stone's matter into the prima materia during the nigredo. At this stage of the opus, the cold, moist, feminine principle (Luna) is said to dominate the hot, dry coagulating male aspect of the opus (Sol)." [2]
The water element is feminine, while the fire element is masculine. This stage of the opus is symbolized by a flood of energy which is symbolized by the flood of waters. The flood is another allegory of death and regeneration. The ark itself is symbolic of the human body. The allegory of the crow not returning to the ark is symbolic of the stage is not yet completed. The "dove" symbolizes the white stage aka the "albedo."

"The albedo occurs after the blackened matter, the putrefied body of the metal or the matter for the stone, lying dead at the bottom of the alembic, has been washed to whiteness by the mercurial waters." [3]
It is readily apparent how this allegory has been corrupted into an assumed actual event, complete with characters.

4 And the ark rested in the seventh month, on the seventeenth day of the month, upon the mountains of Ararat.
AGAIN, the number seven and "rest." This symbolizes the seventh chakra, which is effortless bliss and the " mountains of Ararat" symbolize the completed work, which was STOLEN from the meaning of the Egyptian pyramids- the apex point at the top which has its foundation at the four quarters.

Now, I might also add here- to the fools who have been attacking Enili/Beelzebub with drowning humanity- GET A LIFE!!!!
Knowledge comes from Satan.

13 I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth.
14 And it shall come to pass, when I bring a cloud over the earth, that the bow shall be seen in the cloud:

15 And I will remember my covenant, which is between me and you and every living creature of all flesh; and the waters shall no more become a flood to destroy all flesh.

The "bow" is the rainbow, the iridescent colors that indicate another higher stage of the magnum opus has been completed. THIS STAGE, I MIGHT ADD IS ALSO SYMBOLIZED BY THE PEACOCK. THE PEACOCK IS A SYMBOL OF AND IS SACRED TO SATAN!

Verse 13 reads: "a covenant between me and the earth." "God" is another alchemical code word for the crown chakra, aka "heaven" (the top three chakras are also symbolic of 'heaven') "paradise" "bliss" and the earth is the lower world, symbolized by the three lower chakras. This indicates "heaven" and earth have been merged at the heart chakra.

The following biblical books are the fictitious history of the Jewish people. The "torah" was STOLEN and corrupted from the Egyptian Tarot. The "Torah" is also known as the "Pentateuch," the five books of "Moses" (another fictitious character). One can see this was stolen from the five suits of the Tarot- the wands/rods (suit of fire); the pentacles (suit of earth); the cups (suit of water); and the swords (suit of air) and of course the trump, representing the element of the quintessence.

"The nigredo stage ends on the surface of a starry aspect, which is likened to the night sky which told shepherds and kings that a child was born in Bethlehem." 4
AGAIN, this is symbolic and indicates another stage of the work, when one can 'see' the light of the chi stone in the black void, when one's eyes are closed, during meditation. The "three" magi represent the three stages of the work. The fictitious nazarene- the stone (which was born from the work).

"There are three stones, or three works, or three degrees of perfection, within the work." 5
Here we go again with twisted allegories in relation to that fictitious nazarene – the "crucifixion" – two others were crucified with the nazarene, making three.

I could go on and on and on, citing biblical verses and revealing how they were stolen and corrupted. The character of the nazarene, which was invented from an allegory has:

1. Acted to remove all spiritual knowledge and replace it with bullshit. The "Jesus saves" crap (ad nauseum) and the "born again" have been twisted and incorporated into this fictitious character. in other words, deluded ones have been deceived into believing this character will take care of everything spiritual as long as they conform to the agenda.

2. The "Jesus" character has acted as the thought police for ultimate control. Wars have been fought repeatedly over beliefs and ideas. Control what is in the mind of humanity and you will control humanity.

3. Since the nazarene is fictitious, he can be anything to anyone which those in powerful positions in the xian program dictate. He can change with the times and conform to any agenda.

It is time everyone wakes up to the spiritual corruption that has played humanity to the tune of trillions and trillions of dollars, souls and everything else these parasites have taken their followers for a ride with.

About this capture

The Subliminal Message of the Judeo/Christian Bible:
Jewish Supremacy over Gentiles

There is a secret Jewish cabal that goes back thousands of years. This cabal controlled and always had a much higher level of knowledge way beyond anything the majority knew. When new societies were established, this Jewish cabal would usurp the positions of religious and political power and ensure that any advanced knowledge in circulation was removed from the public domain and into their secret schools and organizations. The ruling hierarchy of the Vatican are nothing more than organized criminals who have caused humanity untold destruction, misery, suffering, and grief. The Catholic Church and Christian religion are staffed with at the higher levels, and tools of the Jews who are their masters. The Jews are the ones who control the Christian Churches, especially the Vatican from which all other Christian sects evolved.

At the upper levels, they know the true power of the sun, numerology, the mass mind, the effects of planets on human behavior, how to manipulate time, energy, they have used their secret organizations to create institutions in the public arena such as religions and political parties to remove occult knowledge and keep it out of circulation. The Inquisition was a prime example, for even to speak of anything occult or esoteric was to sign one's own death warrant.

In order to maximize power for their agenda, Christian churches were built upon Ley Lines. Ley Lines are areas within the earth that have increased geo-magnetic energy. The human body is composed of and runs on bio-electricity. Our thoughts are made up of electrical impulses. Through meditation and working with our own energy centers, we can hone our thoughts to have a stronger electrical output and to affect our environment. When one who is knowledgeable uses earth energy in addition to this directed thought energy, this greatly amplifies the power behind the thoughts and direction of the energy through the will. Pagan temples were destroyed and Christian churches were erected in their place. Special rituals were also conducted at these energy crossings within the earth grid. Human/animal sacrifices and such produced extreme fear in intended victims. This directed fear energy, that they use to control was pumped into these vortexes of earth energy. What happens is this energy, magnified thousands of times creates a state of vibration within the earth field in which we all live. From what I understand, it encircles the earth like a spider web. This is one reason why Christianity has such a powerful hold on many. Fear is the four letter word that controls the world and it is very effective.

In addition, the lying preaching, chock full of emotion and the doctrines that were repeated endlessly inside of these structures had all the power they needed to do their job. Along with using the energy of the ignorant congregation, a constant and powerful supply of energy was and has been available to be directed and manipulated by enemy adepts for the control of and the damnation of the populace. Ancient works of art through the Renaissance are proof of the control the Christian church had upon the people in every aspect of their lives. There are very few paintings, sculptures and other works of art that do not depict the Nazarene or the Virgin Mary and their ilk. This also goes for music during the time period. To create any number of non-Christian works was to subject one's self to be condemned as a heretic. The prayer energy alone, that has gone into this foul institution is beyond the imagination. One person alone who fixates upon a thought or idea generates thought energy; think what millions can do.

Unfortunately, given the greed, this has not been enough for the nefarious aliens and their human slaves who run this ring of destruction. There had to be war. The human energy output is most powerful in times of great fear, when facing death or when dying. The more violent, the better. Anyone who is familiar with the Old Testament of the Bible should be well aware of the endless wars and genocide of Gentiles promoted by the so-called "Jehova," which is Jewish domination over, and mass murder, torture, and genocide of gentiles. This sick perverted filth is forcibly drummed into the minds of gentiles from day one, creating a powerful subliminal thoughtform, which has manifested into reality.

About this capture

The Bible: A Jewish Conspiracy and Hoax on the Gentiles

The Bible is a Jewish conspiracy. Christians are deluded under a powerful spell. Christianity is nothing more than a vicious program, with the goals of:

Forcing the Gentiles to give up all occult knowledge and power so all psychic power is in the hands of select Jews for total control.

Indoctrinating the the Gentile masses into pacifism and a slave-like mentality of servitude

Encouraging the Gentiles into giving up all money and worldly goods which is funneled into the hands of the ruling Jews and their Gentile lackeys like Billy Graham Preparing the Gentile masses for a one world communist slave state with the ruling Jews in control.

Channeling Gentile psychic energy and prayers into the "Second coming of Christ" which is in reality the Jewish Messiah as any working of the mind must have a connection.

Cutting the Gentiles off from their own Tribal Gods and Demi-Gods, whose identities have been altered and replaced with fictitious Jewish characters. Our True Creator God has been denegrated, viciously and heinously insulted and blasphemed and relegated to the enemy of humanity.
"May his name and memory be blotted out."
--The Jewish Talmud

"We shall destroy God"
--Quote from the Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion

The list is endless and it is so glaringly obvious what was done. Now, we all know the Nazarene is fictitious. The Jews themselves know it and don't believe in him as he is a lie based upon some 20+ crucified "saviors" stolen from Gentile pantheons around the world.

I have put a lot of effort and time into researching the Bible, as so many people have serious hang-ups because of intense indoctrination with Christiainty and the psychic power that has gone into it. It is obvious the Bible is a hoax and a lie.

"We shall now endeavor to answer the question which must naturally arise in the minds of all who see for the first time, the similarity in the legends of the Hebrews and those of other nations, namely: have the Hebrews copied from other nations, or, have other nations copied from the Hebrews? To answer this question we shall; first give a brief account or history of the Pentateuch and other books of the Old Testament from which we have taken legends, and show about what time they were written; and second, show that other nations were possessed of these legends long before that time, and that the Jews copied from them."
- Bible Myths And Their Parallels in Other Religions By T. W. Doane © 1882, page 92

The Creation:
"Structurally, Genesis 1-11 presents a fascinating insight into how the Bible evolved from a collection of polytheistic myths and legends from various cultures into a mostly coherent monotheistic account of Israelite history."
- 101 Myths of the Bible by Gary Greenburg © 2000; page 3

In summary, every character in the bible was stolen form Pagan Gentile religions and replaced with a Jewish character:

Jewish monotheism was stolen from Egyptian Akhenaton

The Jewish creation was stolen from the Egyptian Creation [1]

The Jewish Yahweh's use of the word to create was stolen from the Egyptians (Jewish Yaweh replaces Ptah) [2]

"Let there be Light" was stolen from the Theban Creation epic.[3]

The "firmament in the midst of the waters…" was stolen from the Egyptian Creation4

Adam and Eve were stolen from the Egyptian Geb and Nut 5

Eve coming from Adam's rib was stolen from the Epic of Enki and Ninhursag: "My brother what hurts thee?

"My rib hurts me"
ANET, 41.
Ninti who's name means
"Lady of the Rib" cured Enki's rib6

Adam and Eve's punishment and loss of immortality were stolen from the Mesopotamian story of Adapa
(Jewish Yaweh replaces Sumerian Enki)7

Jewish Cain, Abel and Seth were stolen from Osiris, Set and Horus8

The conflict between Cain and Abel was stolen from Set and Osiris and as the story goes on, it is later based upon the Sumerian Dumuzi and Enkimdu 9

Jewish Samson was stolen from Heracles,

The putting out of his eyes is based on Oedipus

The pulling down of the pillars was stolen from the Egyptian tale about Re-Herakhte10
The Jewish story of Jacob and the Ladder was stolen from the Egyptian Funerary Rituals for the deceased King
"Hail to thee, O Ladder of God, Hail to thee, O Ladder of Set. Stand up O Ladder of God, Stand up O Ladder of Set, stand up O Ladder of Horus, whereon Osiris went forth into heaven." "The Egyptian Ladder consisting of the bodies of two Egyptian deities upon which Osiris ascends into heaven, has been replaced by a ladder with several supernatural beings, angels, climbing up and down between earth and heaven."11

Jewish Moses was stolen from several Gods and kings, depending on what stage of his life story:

Sargon (the birth and abandonment in the river, being rescued by royalty, etc)

The wanderings in the desert were based upon the Sun-God Bacchus as seen in the Hymns of Orpheus 12

The Hebrew stint of "40 years in the desert" claimed in the Jewish book of Exodus and the subsequent "40 day and 40 nights" wanderings in the desert of the Jewish Nazarene were stolen from:
"The struggle of Set and Horus in the desert lasted forty days, as commemorated in the forty days of the Egyptian Lent, during which time Set, as the power of drought and sterility, made war on Horus in the water and the buried germinating grain....These forty days have been extended into forty years, and confessedly so by the Jews."13
Jewish Joshua was stolen from the Egyptian Deities Shu and Nun.14

Jewish Deborah was stolen from the Egyptian Goddess Neith 15

Jewish Noah was stolen from Sumerian Ziusudra
The fictitious Jewish God Yaweh in the Noah story replaced the Sumerian God Enlil, aka Beelzebub

Noah's son Jewish Ham was stolen from Belus 16

Jewish Nimrod was stolen from the Egyptian Pharaoh Sesostris17

Jewish Abraham was stolen from King Hariscandra of the Hindu Sankhayana-Sutras Jewish Isaac was stolen from King Hariscandra's son Rohita
The fictitious Jewish God Yaweh in this story replaced the Hindu God Varuna18

Jewish character Daniel was stolen from Egyptian Neferti 19

Jewish Jonah and the whale; Jonah was stolen from the Hindu character "Saktideva" found in the Somadeva Bhatta.

The "Twelve Tribes of Israel" like the Twelve Disciples of Christ are based upon the twelve signs of the Zodiac.

Jewish Lot and his wife were stolen from the Greek Orpheus and Eurydice
Jewish Yaweh replaces the Greek God Hades

Jewish Jacob and Jewish Esau were stolen from Horus and Set20

Jewish Rebekah was stolen from The Egyptian Goddess Isis21

Jewish Joseph with the eleven brothers was stolen from Egyptian Psammetichus22

Jewish story of Joseph and Potipher's wife stolen from Egyptian Anubis and Bata23

"The Ten Plagues" against Egypt were grossly exaggerated and altered and stolen from the Ipuwer Papyrus 24

The Ten commandments was stolen from The Code of Hammurabi Jewish Yaweh replaces the Sumerian Sun God Shamash aka Azazel25

Jewish David killing Philistine Goliath were stolen from Thor throwing a hammer at Hrungnir and striking him in the forehead.26

The Jewish Job was stolen from Ugaritic Keret and Jewish Yaweh replaces the God "El."

The Jewish "Job," was stolen from a story written in the Ugaritic language (Cuneiform Script), composed circa 1400 BCE by "Ilimilku The Scribe." This epic involves "Keret" and the God "El." NOT Job and Jehova. Keret's family tragedies and illness are comparable with the story of Job. In the original tale, "Satan" never even entered into the picture.
Here, Jewish Jehova replaces El27
By creating opposing Gods, one "good" and the other "evil" the Jews have been able to manipulate the world beyond belief.

The Jewish book of Proverbs, along with the writings in the book of Ecclesiastes were stolen from the Teachings of Egyptian Ptah-Hotep.28

Many of the writings in the Jewish book of Joshua were stolen from The El Amarna Letters29
The Jewish book of Judges is comprised of material stolen from:

The Story of Aqhat
The Diary of Wen-Amon
The Gezer Almanac30
The Jewish books of Samuel and Kings contain stolen material from:
The Mari Prophecies
The Stele of Mesha
The Karatepe Inscription
The Annals of Shalmaneser III

The Black Obelisk of Shalmaneser III
The Annals of Tiglath-Pileser III
The Annals of Sargon II
The Siloam Inscription
The Yavne-Yam Inscription
The Lachlish Letters
The Arad Ostraca
The Annals of Sennacherib
The Annals of Nebuchadnezzar II
More stolen material in the biblical books of Ezra and Nehemiah from:
The Cylinder of Cyrus31

Jewish Mordecai stolen from the Babylonian God Marduk32

Jewish Esther and the Jewish book of Esther was stolen from Ishtar, aka Astaroth, Astarte, Ashtar.33

The Jewish Virgin Mary "Queen of Heaven" was stolen from Astaroth

Jewish John the Baptist stolen from Anup, baptizer of Horus; both lost their heads.34

Jewish Judas was stolen from Set.35

Jewish Matthew was stolen from Thoth 36

Jewish Thomas was stolen from Tammuz 37

"Like Jesus, the Greek God Hermes was also wrapped in swaddling clothing and placed in a manger, as was Dionysus." 38

The Gentile Gods wound up in the grimoires of blasphemy.

"No other people has ever been so conscious of ultimate primacy through supernatural intervention. This has given them cohesion and courage to persevere in the face of persecution and decimation. The conviction that every jew will one day share in his divine destiny as a member of the world's ruling race has made him proud and has enabled him to survive unassimilated among the nations of the earth."
"Included in the promised inheritance was a deliverer or messiah to bring about "the kingdom." This messiah would be either a temporal, human leader who with his armies would overthrow the enemies of Israel, or a supernatrual being who would do likewise, establishing an "everlasting" Jewish kingdom as well." "The Jewish imperialism would thus come as the awaited deliverer destroyed the enemies and gave their booty to Israel. As Larson says 'This Messiah shall bring judgement upon the Gentiles and they shall become the slaves of Judah..."

The above two paragraphs were excerpts taken from The Christ Conspiracy: The Greatest Story Ever Sold by Acharya S. © 1999 taken from pages 325 and 326

The purpose of the bible was:

To give the Jewish people a history they never had

To give the Jewish people a special status as the "Chosen of God"

To enable the Jewish people to advance in their quest for world domination. The gentiles have been disarmed and spoon-fed a pacifistic anti-life philosophy with Christianity

To keep all occult, psychic and mind power under the control of the Jews and disarm the gentile populations psychically.

For the Jewish secret cabal to seize and direct as much psychic energy as possible into the coming of their "messiah" who will unite the Jews and rule the world. (This is the fictitious Christ, - the Jews themselves know Christ is fictitious- the "Temple of Solomon" and various other faces of the same theme).

Because the multitude of characters, numbers and stories were stolen and altered from gentile sources, they are strong enough in the gentile racial memory to use as a powerful psychic tool for manipulation.

The Christian Program and Purpose

Quote from the Talmud:
Libbre David 37: "To communicate anything to a Goy about our religious relations would be equal to the killing of all Jews, for if the Goyim knew what we teach about them, they would kill us openly."

With enough research, Christianity and its cohorts can be summed up, revealing its true purpose. Jehova's Witnesses know of all the Pagan origins of the holidays, such as xmas and Easter. They are deluded as to the nazarene, as the nazarene is also a stolen CONCEPT, from some 18+ crucified Pagan Gods who hung from a tree, such as Odin. Everything in the Christian program is FALSE, STOLEN, CORRUPTED, AND COUNTERFEIT!

The entire purpose of Christianity is to PREPARE Gentiles to be slavishly obedient and worshipping of their jewish masters in a new world order, where the jews will have total and complete control, unless people wake up and this is stopped.

As can be seen from the articles on this website, the pantheon of Gentile/Pagan Gods (subliminal worship) was replaced with fictitous jewish archetypes with the program of Christianity. Along with this, the jews achieved a special status they did not deserve- being "The chosen of God." All of this is subliminal in that it creates the mindset of slavish, self-sacrificing, servile mentality in its victims, that readily accepts the jews to be in charge. The fictitious jewish archetypes such as the nazarene create a powerful subconscious association with what is known as "The God Part of the Brain" and act to transfer this mindset of worship to the jews who intend upon ruling the world. There is NOTHING at all spiritual about Christianity. The Bible is nothing more than a fictitious history of the jews, and intense blasphemy against the Gentile Gods and our True Creator God Satan, which means "enemy" in Hebrew. We prove all of this on this website.

Quote from the Jewish Talmud:
Simeon Haddarsen, fol. 56-D: "When the Messiah comes every Jew will have 2800 slaves."

In addition to the subliminal workings, Gentiles are severely threatened with delving into the "occult" in order to remove all powers of the mind and soul and to keep these powers within the circle of ruling jewish masters for total abuse and exploitation of the Gentiles. Because sexual orgasm is the doorway to the power and advancement of the soul, the Christian doctrines have always worked relentlessly to suppress it. Christianity drums into its victims minds that they are nothing more than property. Their minds, souls and bodies all belong to "Jehova" which in reality is the top ruling Jews who are masters of occult power.

Quotes from the Talmud:
Nidrasch Talpioth, p. 225-L: "Jehovah created the non-Jew in human form so that the Jew would not have to be served by beasts. The non-Jew is consequently an animal in human form, and condemned to serve the Jew day and night."

Seph. Jp., 92, 1: "God has given the Jews power over the possessions and blood of all nations."

The denegration of women in these programs is a sick, twisted and perverted attempt, again, subliminal, like the suppression of human sexuality, to deprive Gentiles of occult power. This has its origins in the Far Eastern teachings of "Shakti" which represents the female (subconsious and kundalini power) aspect of the human soul. The male aspect is the left brained logical side. Both must work together to achieve material results, which is the purpose of yoga. By suppressing the female side of the brain, one's powers of mind and soul are completely dormant and inaccessible.

Ouija boards, astrology, and other forms of divination have also been strictly suppressed in attempts to deprive Gentiles from communicating with our own TRUE Gods who have been shamefully and hideously blasphemed and labeled as "evil." Our Gods have been the victims of Jewish horror and gore Hollywood flics and other denegrating and insulting themes, where Gentiles are fooled into mocking, cursing, and fearing them, while working for their own damnation and paying out the ass for it, not only to the tune of trillions and trillions of dollars, but also with psychic energy. The jews have had a long history of deluding the Gentiles into paying for their own damnation and ruin. The war in Iraq is a blatant example, where thousands of young American men and women have died or are permanently disabled- all for Israel.

GENTILES NEED TO WAKE UP!!

About this capture

Why Christianity Attacks Sexuality

The Christian Church has done everything in its power to suppress and control sexuality. Sexual energy is the creative life force that liberates the kundalini, and is a direct threat to their agenda for enslaving humanity.

There is nothing spiritual about Christianity. Christianity is a tool to remove all spiritual knowledge and spirituality. This has been effectively accomplished by attacking the second chakra, which is the sexual chakra, thus keeping the kundalini serpent bound in the base. In order for the kundalini energy to ascend, and ascend safely, all of the chakras must be free and open. Psychological hang-ups manifest themselves in the chakras, which are the key components of the soul, and create blocks that prevent the ascension and circulation of spiritual energy, both in the 7 main chakras and in the 144,000 nadis.

Christianity, Islam, and other related programs to destroy spirituality vehemently attack sexuality in any way they can, whether it is heterosexuality, homosexuality, etc. They work to instill sexual inhibitions, guilt, shame, and turn something beautiful and spiritually empowering into something ugly. Few if any Christians or Muslims are even aware of what spirituality really is. All of these nefarious programs have replaced spiritual concepts with imposter Jewish characters, Jewish places, and other fictitious Jewish archetypes, such as Jesus, the Nazarene. Jesus has been used as a diversion and distraction, keeping followers from accessing true spirituality and working on their souls. Truth be known, we save our own souls. "Jesus" is a fictitious Jewish character that is nothing more than an imposter to a CONCEPT.

Kundalini liberates the soul and also opens up the psyche. The Christian Church has also done everything in its power to keep us from communicating with beings such as Satan and his Demons, and deliberately cut us all off from any knowledge and power. This keeps us all in the dark, and has cut us off from our True Creator God.

"WE SHALL DESTROY GOD" - Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion

The sexual suppression creates an imbalance in the base and second chakras which bleeds over into the emotional level (chakra) this extends to the next chakra and from here, we have a further imbalance, creating fear and guilt, and other emotional and psychological disorders. Because of the cut-off, there is no outlet and humanity degenerates spiritually from generation to generation. Each generation has been indoctrinated and conditioned to view sexuality in the Judeo/Christian/Muslim way. Those of us who are completely free from this influence are few. Sexuality= Life, liberation, and spiritual advancement. The Church knows this and has denied the general population this knowledge for centuries.

Now, when I mention "the Church" I am referring to those on top, not the average pedophile priest or minister. The Catholic priesthood is a prime example of the level of indoctrination, ignorance, and stupidity all the way down the line with blind obedience. The child raping and molestations are chief illustrations of what occurs when one consciously suppresses the powerful sex drive, which is the life force, itself.

Because of the suppression of this knowledge, humanity is operating at 1/5th-1/10th of the total potential. The energy centers remain closed and dormant, cutting the world off from other dimensions, blocking spiritual, mental, emotional and physical potential, in order to keep power in the hands of a "chosen" few.

All of this is the use of black magick at the top levels that has been handed down through the centuries. The new age movement teaches helplessness, and strongly discourages any forms of black magick to ensure this power only remains in the hands of a few. Justice and righteousness are strongly discouraged and attacked. People are being indoctrinated to be victims and slaves. Fear is used incessantly, no different from Jewish communism, which is where Christianity eventually leads.

The New Agers who dabble in magick are also imbalanced. The Ancient Egyptians knew that to be adept, one must be versed in both the white and black aspects of magick. Black magick is suppressed and controlled by the few in power at the top who make liberal use of it. The average person is not only ignorant to this fact, but helpless against it.

The denigration and exclusion of women in RHP religions is also for a specific purpose. As Thoth stated, everything comes in two's for balance and harmony. Two is the creative force. The female energy within us all is the subconscious and the psyche. The female aspect connects us to the higher dimensions of the mind in balance to the male logical side of the brain. The two ideally, should work together in harmony. The kundalini energy is of the female part of the soul. By attacking and denigrating women, this further suppresses this energy subliminally.

Destroying this female energy is fundamental to the enemy agenda. Once this feminine energy is completely subdued, the intuition and higher consciousness are switched off and become dominated by the lower consciousness. The chakras below the heart, which is the switch off point and connector of the seven chakras, remain disconnected and a serious imbalance results. The Church and its controlling cohorts are well aware of the imbalance that occurs when this female energy is cut off. The chakras all work together.

What then occurs is a total loss of a much needed sense, also known as "the sixth sense." Humanity is spiritually blind and through this, have become total victims. This is the goal of the Christian Church, to prepare Gentiles to be ignorant and unquestioning slaves who are unable to fight back at the hands of Jewish masters [the communist state]. For example, when an adept Jew throws a curse, the Gentile victim who has been indoctrinated with the lies of Christianity is helpless and succumbs to it. He/She can't even see it coming, and doesn't even know. This way, the Jews become "God."

Quote from the Jewish Talmud:
Simeon Haddarsen, fol. 56-D: "When the Messiah comes every Jew will have 2800 slaves."

About this capture

The Stolen Year

Our Gentile Satanic/Pagan Sun Wheel was stolen and is at the center of the Vatican:

For more information see: Christianity has Nothing of Its Own.

With the arrival of Christianity, Pagan temples and important religious centers were destroyed and razed to the ground. These structures were built upon powerful ley lines to align with the powers of the earth. Christian churches were then built over the destroyed Pagan temples and places of learning. Anything of Gentile origins was cursed and condemned as "evil." This step ensured that psychic energy could then be harnessed and directed toward the worship of the Jews and to enforce a plethora of lies.

The Eve of Beltane, aka "Walpurgisnacht" "The Feast of Valbörg" the Feast of Beltane, May Day- an ancient and important Gentile/Pagan ["Gentile" is a Word meaning "Pagan"] holiday. The feast is in honor of Baal/Beelzebub, for more information, please click here.

Beltane/May Day has been replaced with the Christian version of "Easter." Instead of our original Gods and customs, a Jewish invented Nazarene is the focus of slavish worship and psychic energy. May 1st has also been replaced a step further with a major day of celebration for Jewish communism.

"Easter" originated with Astaroth and was originally known as "Ashtar." This holiday coincides with the Vernal Equinox of spring when day and night are of equal length, and was known as "Eastre" to the Anglo-Saxons. As the Goddess of fertility, she was associated with rabbits and eggs. Other names include: Easter, Eastre, Eos Eostre, Ester, Estrus, [Estrus is when an animal goes into heat; mating season] Oestrus, Oistros, and Ostara. Again, the "Lamb of God" was stolen from the Zodiac sign of Aries the Ram that occurs every spring.

All of the above has been stolen and corrupted into focusing upon and worshipping a fictitious Jew, which creates a powerful psychic link:
Quote from the Jewish Talmud:
Simeon Haddarsen, fol. 56-D: "When the Messiah comes every Jew will have 2800 slaves."

The Pagan Summer Solstice was stolen and replaced with "St. John's Day" in Honor of "Saint John the Baptist" another Jewish invented character stolen from a Hindu alchemical concept, for Gentiles to slavishly worship and focus psychic energies upon.

Lammas Day/Lughnasadh was replaced with "Assumption Day" again, to focus upon the fictitious Jewish Virgin Mary, for Gentiles to slavishly honor and focus their psychic energies into reinforcing a lie.

Halloween/Samhain was replaced with "All Saints Day."

The Yule Season and Winter Solstice have been replaced with "Christmas." This is the ultimate blasphemy!!
Again, there is total focus upon the Jewish invented Nazarene and his phony birth, phony Jewish parents, and phony everything else. These lies are drummed into the minds of Gentiles all over the world, creating a massive psychic vortex of energy that insidiously destroys our cultural heritage and memory, and promotes our own damnation. The entire Yule Season has been infested with fictitious Nazarene story, from "Advent" to the circumcision of the Jewish Nazarene on the 8th day in the synagogue by a rabbi.

Imbolc was replaced with "Ash Wednesday" which was stolen from an ancient Hindu rite of applying ashes upon the spot of the third eye in the middle of the forehead.

Christian fundamentalists have been working overtime to eradicate all traces of the Pagan origins of these holidays in order to reinforce and keep the lie of Christianity going strong. As I have stated repeatedly, history has been and is being rewritten. Truth is replaced with lies that promote Jewish supremacy and their agenda of a communist new world order where they will be "God." Rebellion, which has always been associated with Satan is intensely discouraged, in order to establish this new Jewish world order where all Gentiles will bar-coded and be slaves.

In addition, Gentile/Pagan culture is being relentlessly attacked subliminally in the many movies created through Jewish Hollywood, and by having deluded Gentiles in many cases forced to curse and condemn our own people and praise the Jews. The Jews have had a history of fooling Gentiles into doing their dirty work for them, such as fighting their wars and damning ourselves. A blatant example was the war in Iraq, which was fought for Israel, by nearly all Gentiles, as only four Jewish soldiers were reported to have died in the war.

The robotic songs and prayers exalting the Jews and Israel, corrupted from Far Eastern mantras, are sung and repeatedly recited in the Christian Churches, along with the trillions of dollars raked in through tithing and such, condemn us Gentiles!!! Gentiles sing and pray for their own damnation. It is stated in the Talmud that Gentiles "shit before their god." Satan is God!!!!!!

This past Halloween, I noted in a Halloween store, the supply of extremely hideous masks of the Devil, portraying our Creator God Satan. Halloween is my favorite holiday with dressing up, partying, and such, but what has been to our Creator God is another matter. It is not only a major insult to our Creator God, but a huge slap in the face for all Gentiles.

The Easter Bunny, which predates Christianity, has been attacked relentlessly by fundamentalist Christians, along with Santa Claus, aka known as "Nick" and "Nicholas." "Santa" is an anagram of "Satan" and the red, the white and the black, are the colors of the main nadis of the soul. "Nick" is another name for Satan as well.

The Jews use deluded Christians to do their dirty work for them and they laugh at their stupidity. They, themselves know the Nazarene isn't real and was only invented and relentlessly pushed to enslave the Gentiles and create a massive vortex of Gentile psychic energy into bringing their "Messiah" into reality.
Quote from the Jewish Talmud:
Simeon Haddarsen, fol. 56-D: "When the Messiah comes every Jew will have 2800 slaves."

Because it is false, Christianity is a stepping off point to Jewish communism, where any and all traces of spiritual knowledge are forcibly removed as was done with the Inquisition. This ensures that all occult knowledge and power is kept in the hands of the Jews to completely enslave and control the masses and establish them as "God."

About this capture

Murderers, Thieves, and Liars:
Christianity has Nothing of Its Own

The Judeo/Christian Bible certainly doesn't appear to be as old as it is believed to be, and neither is that foul program they call a "religion." The truth can be seen in the Gothic cathedrals for one. They were ORIGINALLY PAGAN. Regardless of what the popular history books claim, [and many support the Jewish lie of Christianity], it appears that Christianity arrived on the scene with the Inquisition, especially in Europe. This is nearly identical in every aspect to a communist take over, where mass murder, torture and deprivation of even the most basic of human rights are instituted.

"Christianity and communism are very close spiritually and ideologically. This is a fairly well known concept that has been adopted by various thinkers, from Thomas More to Lev Tolstoy. Few people know that the world's first socialist state was established in Paraguay and was based on the ideas of Catholic Jesuits before Marx created his teachings."

"The "Society of Jesus" - the Jesuit religious order - in the Catholic Church was roughly equivalent to the KGB in the Soviet Union."
Above quotes taken from "Pravda" [The main Communist Party Newspaper and leading newspaper of the former Soviet Union]

The Jews and their Christian cohorts have destroyed ancient records and texts and have rewritten a fictitious history in compliance with their agenda. They try to claim that some Paganism was kept to ease the populace into Christianity, but I strongly question this, as should any intelligent thinking person, as EVERYTHING they have WAS STOLEN FROM PAGAN RELIGIONS PREDATING CHRISTIANITY. The Jehova's Witnesses know of all the Pagan elements in the Christian religion, but they are deluded to the Nazarene. The Nazarene was stolen and corrupted as well from some 18+ Pagan Gods who represented a concept.
LIKE THE JEWS, THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION HAS NOTHING OF ITS OWN!!

Check out Vatican Square- the Egyptian obelisk in the middle of the Satanic wheel of the year:

Here is another one of the ceiling of the Vatican Staircase- note the design of the Runic Galdr staves, yet the Druids and other Pagan priests were mass murdered by the inquisition; the penalty for using Runes or even having knowledge of Runes was automatic death:

Note all of the Egyptian Gods in the Vatican Museum. If one cares to do the necessary research, it is obvious that nearly everything the Vatican has, has been STOLEN. Egypt is condemned in the Judeo/Christian Bible, and yet, if you read through everything on this website and do more research, it is apparent just how much the Judeo/Christian religion has STOLEN and corrupted from Egypt! These gods wound up in what is known as "the Goetia" in the Jewish written grimoires of blasphemy.
Satan's kingdom was stolen from him!!!!!!!

ANUBIS EGYPTIAN GODS IN THE
"HALL OF STATUES"
SEKHMET
More photos of Pagan Gods in the Vatican:

Apollo [Many images of Apollo, such as the one below were passed off as the Nazarene]

Many images passed off and assumed to be the Nazarene contain a male figure with a halo either with the rays as shown in the above photo, or four quadrants depicting the crown and temple chakras. People have been Indoctrinated to believe these are of the Nazarene, when in reality, all these are of is a model of a human male with his kundalini ascended.
This is a concept!
This concept was stolen from Pagan Gods and is of Satan- the risen kundalini is what is termed to be "Raising the Devil" and is what manifests in the halo seen in so many old paintings.

Once everyone understands the real meaning of all of those symbols, the veil is dropped and the Jews can no longer pull off their bullshit. This is the main reason the Judeo/Christian Bible threatens anyone who studies the occult or practices anything of the occult with "burning in a lake of fire."

Paintings in the catacombs, which date back to the 3rd and 4th centuries CE, have this same male image. Some images are of are Marduk, some are of Apollo and other Pagan Gods. The book "The Unknown Catacomb" is interesting and reveals much about the Pagan art seen in the catacombs.
Now, here are the so-called "Christian Burial Grounds" aka as the "Catacombs:"
Here is some image labeled as a saint- in reality, the SHEPHERD WAS STOLEN FROM HERMES, AKA AS THOTH: Click Here
Note the four quarters again.

Here is another typical painting of which everyone is told it is "Paul." It is only an image of a man:

It certainly does not have the name of the man on or near the painting. People are sheep, most believe whatever they are told without question, and are incessantly warned to "trust" and "have faith."

As for the images with the lamb, the lamb represents Aries and when the Sun is in Aries, this is the best time to begin the great work of alchemy and has nothing whatsoever to do with Christianity.

Look at this deadbeat Jewish asshole and his replica of the Egyptian Pharaoh's Headdress:

SHAME ON HIM!!!

Gargoyles, which are lesser Demons are also seen lining nearly every major cathedral in Europe:

This statue located in Strasbourg cathedral appears to be an Assyrian genie:

There is so much more and it is endless. Many history texts call these "three great religions" meaning Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. Now, if they are so great and so original, why is it they have NOTHING of their own???? Islam won't even allow the human figure to be painted. This conforms to the communist agenda of removing history and knowledge from the general populace so people can be disposable slaves.

That was then, this is now- HISTORY IS BEING DESTROYED AND REWRITTEN WITH LIES!!

About this capture

The New World Order and the Christian Churches

We often hear the hysterical ranting of Christians who claim “Satan” is going about setting up a “New World Order” where human beings will be bar-coded like cattle and lose all of their freedoms and rights. This NWO is said to be a “one world communist state.” Christianity has a history of blaming Satan for everything they do not agree with or in reality, their own crimes against humanity. This article is written to set deluded individuals straight. With enough research and just plain common sense, Satan has nothing to do with this, whatsoever. It is Judeo/Christian inspired, the Catholic Church, National and World Council of Churches [of which most Protestant Churches belong to and support] are working for it, funneling the bulk of their contributions into advancing the Jewish program of communism, and are at the uppermost levels abusing occult power to achieve these ends. Of course, with the incessant blame-shifting, one will often hear from deluded Christians: “Oh no!! That’s NOT MY church!!” The Protestants condemn the Catholics; completely ignoring the fact that their religions in many respects parallel Catholicism and ALL Christian sects had their origins in the original Christian Church- the Catholic Church.

To summarize, Satanism does not place restrictions upon people. Satan advocates individuality, freedom and the advancement of the human race. Satan does not represent chaos, as some believe. One must know him to appreciate this. Satan is very consistent. Satan stands for freedom and rebellion, not a communist NWO where ruling Jews enslave the Gentile masses who become only a number and are what they call "disposable human beings."

Quotes from the Jewish Talmud:
Baba Necia 114, 6: "The Jews are human beings, but the nations of the world are not human beings but beasts."

Simeon Haddarsen, fol. 56-D: "When the Messiah comes every Jew will have 2,800 slaves."

Nidrasch Talpioth, p. 225-L: "Jehovah created the non-Jew in human form so that the Jew would not have to be served by beasts. The non-Jew is consequently an animal in human form, and condemned to serve the Jew day and night."

Deluded Christians and others readily blame Satan and “Satanists” when it comes to the subject of being “bar-coded” like animals. To begin with, if one would look with open eyes, one can see these are not teachings of Satan, but of the Judeo/Christian Bible, where people are referred to as “sheep,” one’s body is the property of “God,” and one’s sex life, one’s desires and lusts, who one is having intercourse with and so many other things THAT ARE INSIGNIFICANT TO ONE’S SPIRITUAL ADVANCEMENT are made issues of in the Judeo/Christian bible. The Judeo/Christian Bible is nothing more than a foundation for instituting Jewish communism, by weakening the morale and the character of the people, promoting injustice such as "turning the other cheek" "walking the extra mile" and other suicidal advice; and weakening the will to resist. These are all tactics preparing the populace for a communist revolution and were taught by Vladimir Lenin [Jewish communist leader].

Now how about chaos? This is another communist tactic and is very blatant here in the USA. The Jews who work to institute communism use every means both inside and outside of the courtroom to break down the judicial system, and to establish confusion amongst the populace. The "Holy Bible" is about the most confusing text ever concocted. Most people never even bother to read it, yet call themselves "Christians." Look to the endless contradictions and of course, the teachings of the Nazarene:

Jesus stole [Luke 19: 29-35; Luke 6: 1-5],
Jesus lied [Matthew 5:17; 16: 28; Revelation 3: 11]
Jesus advocated murder [Luke 19: 27]
Jesus demanded one of his disciples dishonor his parents and family [Luke 9: 59-62]
These are just a small sampling of commandments he not only set a bad example by breaking, but ordered others to do so as well. Contradictions such as these in religious teachings set the stage for confusion and chaos.

The number of Christian sects who violently disagree with and condemn each other also speak for themselves, not to mention all of the endless and unnecessary bloody wars that are essential to this NWO, nearly all were incited by the Jews and their tools of Christianity and Islam. Forgiving one's neighbor endlessly "seventy times" as the Nazarene taught and turning the other cheek encourages nothing but chaos and crime. People are indoctrinated on how to be prefect slaves and victims. Their own bodies are the property of some alien entity that decides their innermost thoughts, desires, and sexuality. As for the idea of people being bar coded, DON'T BLAME SATAN!! SATAN HAS ALWAYS STOOD FOR FREEDOM AND REBELLION!!

Christians and others are so quick to blame shift- "it's the Catholics," "Oh, no! it's the Protestants!" They cannot comprehend this sort of thing is and has been for centuries happening in their own churches and is the entire theme of their own bible. They have been contributing to it financially, psychically and spiritually. BE A SLAVE! It is much easier for them to blame Satan than it is for them to realize they have been deceived by their own "God" and their own ministry. Satan has been conveniently used both as a distraction and as a scapegoat for centuries by the Christian Churches. Just blame everything on Satan, preach to the world that Christianity and the Nazarene are "good" "humanitarian" and above all "God." A lie repeated and enforced often enough will eventually be believed, no matter how ludicrous it is. Trillions and trillions of dollars have been channeled into promoting this lie publicly, while their top religious leaders clandestinely work to enslave the world as they have in the past through their root, the Catholic Church. The Protestants are no different with their Salem Witch Trial murders and compulsory church attendance in Colonial America. FREEDOM IS NOT IN ANY WAY COMPATIBLE WITH JUDEO/CHRISTIANITY!!

Christianity is not spiritual in any respect. They are in truth a political institution posing as a religious/spiritual front. Followers are deceived into living for their death, and giving up all occult/spiritual knowledge and power so they are defenseless and harmless against those who have this knowledge and know how to use it. They are deluded into thinking their "God" will punish these people when all along, they have been prepared through generations to be mindless slaves and their souls have through generations of rejecting true spirituality, atrophied in spiritual power. The goal is nearly accomplished and will succeed if these idiots don't wake up.

I read where Billy Graham's churches now have DVD and plush loudspeaker systems with stereo. What does this have to do with spirituality? Their front of Christian charity is a joke. Most of the donations, which total in the trillions of dollars, are funneled into the World Council of Churches where they are used politically, for funding communism, wars, and other terrorist activities. Secular organizations such as the local county welfare agencies are the ones who in truth do the most for the needy. This comes out of the pockets of the taxpayers, NOT the Christian churches.

The leaders of both Christianity and totalitarian governments themselves are incredibly materialistic.
When we look at the Catholic Church through the centuries, we find that as they were bleeding the last bit of money from poverty stricken families, widows and even generations of families who were targeted by the inquisition, the church itself was amassing and hoarding gold, silver, valuable knowledge, artifacts, and precious gems in unbelievable quantities.

In addition to taking in and gathering all the gold, silver and other valuables it was able to confiscate, the Catholic Church acquired huge amounts of real estate; most of this was also accomplished through the mass murders and extortion carried out by the Inquisition. The Catholic Church today is undoubtedly the most exceptionally wealthy institution on the face of the earth. The amount of money, land, treasures, artifacts, and other material holdings of the Catholic Church alone is beyond the stretch of the imagination.

Even through the Dark Ages when poverty was widespread, mostly because of Christianity itself, we find these huge and fabulously wealthy cathedrals, built in the midst of the extreme deprivation of the populace, with altars and apses made of gold with ornately decorated vaults, columns and walls. Magnificent basilicas, cathedrals, abbeys, baptisteries, monasteries, convents, and churches were built. Practically all of these were so lavish and so huge in comparison with the meager surroundings of the times, that they flamboyantly stood out as the main repository of all the material wealth — gold, silver and architectural lavishness — of both their era and their geographical location.

The Catholic Church during the Dark Ages established itself as the unconditional ruler over all of Europe. The Catholic Church had complete dominion over kings and queens, the military and ruled by terror. No one was free in any respect. Knowledge was destroyed and/or removed from the populace, because to create a perfect slave state, slaves must be illiterate and without power.

"Christianity and communism are very close spiritually and ideologically. This is a fairly well known concept that has been adopted by various thinkers, from Thomas More to Lev Tolstoy. Few people know that the world's first socialist state was established in Paraguay and was based on the ideas of Catholic Jesuits before Marx created his teachings."

"The "Society of Jesus" - the Jesuit religious order - in the Catholic Church was roughly equivalent to the KGB in the Soviet Union."

Above quotes taken from "Pravda" [The main Communist Party Newspaper and leading newspaper of the former Soviet Union] From the article: Is there any difference between Christianity and Communism? 30/04/2013

The mass murders committed by Josef Stalin [Jew], Mao Tse-tung, and other communist dictators were repeats of the Christian inquisition. The names and the faces change, but it is still the same agenda with the same people. Mao marched on Tibet, murdering and torturing native Tibetans en masse. The Chinese Army, under orders from Mao traversed steep mountains and dangerous terrain for the primary purpose of destroying ancient knowledge, regardless of what the history books claim. The Tibetan monasteries, because of the surrounding Himalayan Mountains, have been secluded from the rest of the world and as a result were able to keep ancient knowledge out of the control of the destructive Christians. Anyone who has any serious knowledge or spiritual power is a threat to the state. Slaves must neither possess knowledge nor have access to occult power. Knowledge and power are kept in the hands of the controlling few. Of course, Billy Graham's "East Gate Ministries" was permitted to flood China with bibles; a project that totaled in the millions of dollars- all tax-exempt.

The concept of world domination by a select group who rule with an iron fist and use mass murder and terror to achieve their ends is spelled out through the entire Judeo/Christian bible.

Concepts: The state owns and controls all property. Listed below are parallels and teachings in the Judeo/Christian bible: Your body isn't your own; it is the property of "God."

Don't have sexual urges, if you do, the owner of your body will do as he pleases with it and "cast it into Hell" [Rule by terror]: Matthew 5: 27-30
The "lord" has control over all of your personal relationships: Matthew 19: 9
No freedom of speech: Matthew 5: 33-37; 12: 36
Let them throw you in prison: Matthew 5: 25
Don't defend yourself or fight back; be the perfect slave: Matthew 5: 39-44; Luke 6: 27-30; 6: 35
The meek make the best slaves; "meek" means "submissive": Matthew 5: 5
Live for your death, never mind the life you have now. This is a classic on how to run a slave state. Life is not worth fighting for: Matthew 5: 12
Break up the family unit to create chaos: Matthew 10: 34-36 Luke 12: 51-53
Let the chaos reign: Matthew 18: 21-22
Don't own any property: Matthew 19: 21-24; Mark 12: 41-44 Luke 6: 20; 6: 24; 6: 29-30
Forsake your family- "Father, mother, sisters and brethren" this is what a totalitarian state demands of and rewards children for who turn in their parents to be executed: Matthew 19: 29
More slavery and servitude: Exodus 21:7; Exodus: 21: 20-21; Leviticus: 25:44-46; Luke 6: 40- the state is perfect. Luke 12: 47; Ephesians: 6:5; Colossians: 3:22; 1 Timothy: 6:

1; Titus 2: 9-10; 1 Peter 2:18
The Nazarene, much like the teachings in the Old Testament, demanded complete and total obedience and enforced this concept through fear and terror. Preachers delude their congregations into believing “Jesus loves you.” They scream and whine “out of context” but they are the ones who miss the entire message and are “out of context.” The Nazarene never taught humanity anything for independence or advancement. Christians rave about how this entity healed the afflicted, but he never taught anyone how to heal themselves or to even understand the nature of disease. He surrounded himself mainly with the ignorant and the servile. The Christian religion holds the mentally retarded in high regard.
The true evil one is the master of deception and lies; “he deceiveth the world.” Paying for one’s own damnation is a common theme here. HIS NAME IS NOT SATAN/LUCIFER, BUT YAWEH/JEHOVA!!

Christians have stripped themselves of all occult power and understanding, have financed and worked for all of this for centuries and now they blame it all on the Devil. They cannot see it is their own “God” and Nazarene.

Occult knowledge can be used by anyone for any purpose. Any fool can readily see the above is not of Satan, nor does it have anything to do with him and these so called “occult groups” are infiltrated from top to bottom by Catholic Jesuits and others who wish to delude those who might be Luciferian or Pagan and keep them under their control. This can be seen with their Judeo/Christian occult symbols, Jehova/YHVH “God” names, and angels.

It is obvious in addition to all of this, the Catholic Church was enraged by the revelation of the pedophilia scandals. These actions were planned and deliberate. The pope and high-ranking clergy acted indignant and spiteful when their child molestations and abuses were exposed to the world. They were anything but sorry. We all know child rape makes for unstable adult personalities and the victims are needed to add to the chaos for fulfillment of the Jewish/Christian communist objectives, making for deluded individuals who are spiritually and psychologically lost.

The Truth About Christian Charity

"Because the churches are tax-exempt, the average citizen pays an additional $925.00 a year in taxes to support them."

"According to the Internal Revenue Service, church donations total over 19 BILLION dollars a year. "This does not include profits from businesses, stock holdings, bond holdings, retirement centers or lease back arrangements."

"The Mormon Church alone collects at least $4.3 billion a year from its members and another $400 million from its many business enterprises purchased with tax-exempt donated money. "

"The churches own 81 billion dollars' worth of tax-exempt real estate in Texas and $1.3 billion in Los Angeles county alone. Consider the prime real estate owned by them in New York City, Chicago, Boston, in every state - the amount involved is staggering."

"Every tax dollar that the church avoids paying, you as an individual tax payer must make up."

Growing in power and ownership, the Christian churches own 20-25% of all the real estate in America.
-Taken from "The Book Your Church Doesn't Want You To Read" - Tom C. Leedom, editor 1993

The House Chaplain's salary 1993 was $115,300.00
The Senate Chaplain's salary was about the same with an additional $300,000.00 budget including pay for secretaries and office space. 1

On the subject of abortion, this is definitely a personal issue, but I want to expose what is being done behind the scenes of the Christian "pro-life" movements.

First off, I want to mention if Christianity had not held us back, there would be effective birth control. Forced abstinence is not healthy and it does not work.

As for the Christian Church and the Catholic stance on banning birth control and abortion, this is another huge money making racket. The children are the ones who pay. The intentions behind this made available to the public as propaganda, come with the pretext of good will and humanitarianism. Behind the scenes, there is the true story.

American Atheists did an exposé on "Mother Theresa" some years back. This woman has received millions if not more in donations. Most of the money is unaccounted for.

The largest number of victims of the pro-life movement are from third world countries. Most of these countries in Africa, Central and South America and Asia have been exploited and infested with Christianity. Missionaries are forever returning to these areas of the world as prime hosts for their vicious agenda as these people are poor and illiterate.

To feed, clothe and house an individual in most of these places, it costs only 10 cents a day and a bowl of rice. Children are walking around emaciated, in rags and filthy. The mortality rate is high and the churches use this to rake in millions upon millions in tax exempt donations to "give" to these children. The sad fact is little or nothing ever reaches the children. Because the infant mortality rate is so high due to starvation and disease, the Catholic Church exploits this with a ban on birth control and abortion. This in turn provides the church with more poster children to use to rake in more money, keeping the unfortunate babies coming. In addition, many of these children are viciously and brutally used for slave labor. The Jewish owned and operated corporate monopolies want cheap slave labor in the way of disposable human beings who can be systematically worked to death; no different from Jewish communism.

With the Western currency markup in each of these countries, the churches could easily afford to have the entire third world living decently. This is nothing more than a tragic money making racket. In the rare event these Christian leaders are ever investigated, the dirt found on them is endless. The Christian Church with all of its tax-exempt wealth and funding has organized into a powerful voting bloc.

"They have tied up so many senators and representatives, having their own religious lobbying groups, that it has been next to impossible to enforce any kind of tax laws or tax violations against them, allowing them to continue to gain in power with unlimited funds." 2

In Mexico, poor barefoot ragged people walk down a burning dusty road for 15 miles to attend a lavish church that takes a percentage of their income while they live in slum like conditions with dwellings of dirt floors and a corrugated tin for a roof. The churches are lined with gold and continue to tithe from these people.

Christian charity is a sham. They give as little as possible up front before the public to keep a humanitarian image, but most of the donations line the pockets of their preachers and are funneled into organized criminal activities, and for the advancement of Jewish communism. The problems people come to them with are rarely if ever alleviated. Drug addicts are told to pray and so forth. They are kept from power meditation, and knowledge of the soul, which would heal their cravings. People remain cripples in the Christian system and are used for exploitation. Newbies who come to "Jesus" are taken in again and again, but "Jesus" doesn't last long and the person "backslides" into worse conditions than before as in addition to their problems and misfortunate circumstances that brought them in, "Jesus" shits on them.

Most of the Christian donations go to fund war and organized criminal activities

The "National and World Council of Churches" includes the membership of the Lutheran, Episcopal, Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist and other denominations.

"The World Council of Churches and its affiliate, The National Council of Churches supported by church donated dollars quietly help to finance selected covert operations and wars." "Mainline churches support left-wing causes and killings, and fundamentalist churches support right-wing causes and killings. The blood is on the hands of every donor."

"In chilling testimony given at American University in Washington D.C., and televised over C-Span on Dec. 12, 1989, ex-CIA officer John Stockwell told how the Christian Contras burst into the huts of innocent villagers. He saw them drag a man out of one house and castrate him in front of his wife and children. These savages next raped his wife, then cut off her breasts with their bayonets. [Their] terrified children were forced to watch. Again, these atrocities were partially financed by the dollars put in the collection plates of the neighborhood churches that tell the faithful that these special collections go to the 'world hunger fund.' Compounding the tragedy, the Nicaraguans are wonderful people, love Americans and still cannot understand why America would do this to them." 3

"Jesus" Doesn't Heal Drug Addicts

It is nothing but a huge money making racket and the exploitation of human beings. Something must be replaced with something; not nothing. The Christian victim usually "backslides." People with serious drug habits need to mend the weak areas and holes in their auras and empower themselves with the energy they need so they will not slide into addiction again. The Christian churches provide none of this. They only lure people who are desperate in to exploit them for their money. The victim pays large sums of money and is given new problems he/she did not have before in exchange. The Nazarene and ilk sap the victim's self-esteem, confidence and vital energies, setting him/her up for a relapse into addiction. The relapse is received with the victim being told he/she is a "sinner" and needs to repent [further lowering self-esteem, personal worth, and confidence in one's abilities, that is so drastically needed to overcome the addiction]. This sets up a vicious cycle of human exploitation and cruelty.

Satan gives us the strength, self-esteem and power to beat drug addiction. When one's chakras and aura are healthy, one does not crave these kinds of substances to make up for psychic deficiencies.

In closing, the social services with the welfare department and other state/government run agencies; the Red Cross and so forth, all do hundreds of times over, more to aid the underprivileged and poverty stricken than does the Christian churches. In addition, unlike the Christian churches and missions, they don't demand your freedom, your mind and your soul.

Illumination on the Illuminati
by
Reverend Mageson666

On the much framed subject of the Free Masons and the Illuminati here is a brief history of the events that lead to subversion of the Masons by Jewry and the truth of the Illuminati:

Several good articles addressing the subject are here:

The Truth About the New World Order
The Temple of Solomon
The New Atlantis

Rothschild hired a son of a Jewish Rabbi named Adam Weishaupt to create a psuedo-Masonic looking front- [The Illuminati] and armed him with massive funds and contacts the stage was set.

History records that on May 1, 1776, Dr. Adam Weishaupt founded the Bavarian Order of the ILLUMINATI. Weishaupt was a Professor of Jewish Canon Law at the University of Ingolstadt in Bavaria, Germany. He was born to Jewish parents and later "converted" to Roman Catholicism. He became a high-ranking member of The Order Of The Jesuits, whom he subsequently left to form his very own organization at the clear behest of the newly formed "House Of Rothschild."

It was the Jewish Weishaupt's belief that only a chosen few could qualify for enough "illumination" to guide and rule the world. The problem was, where could he find enough intellectual "light bearers" to start the ball rolling? He subsequently found them in various lodges and orders of the day, such as the various Masonic lodges, the Rosicrucian Order and other legitimate and sincere orders of antiquity. This is confirmed yet again by Edith Starr-Miller in her classic, "Occult Theocracy:" "As the organization of the Illuminati developed, so did its ambitions, which ended in a plot to subvert Freemasonry to its aim of world domination by any and all means ……. After obtaining control of certain Masonic Lodges, Weishaupt and his associates recklessly vaunted their growing power."

Weishaupt took the name, Spartacus, because, like the Roman warrior, he was dedicated to freeing the [opressed masses] from the oppression of all monarchies and religious powers, his desire to shake off the yoke of limitation would include not only governments and organized religion, but also the institution of marriage, and even family....

Weishaupt wanted a system of truly global dimensions, even if it brought about violent worldwide revolution and rivers of blood. His "benevolent dictatorship" had six main points dealing with the abolition of:

1. Ordered or nationalistic governments in the form of monarchies.

2. Private property.

3. Inheritance rights.

4. Patriotism to nationalist causes.

5. Social order in families, sexual prohibition laws [protecting minors] and all moral codes.

6. All religious disciplines based on faith in a living God, as opposed to faith in nature, man, and reason. [Pushing atheism to remove all spiritual knowledge].

This is almost word-for-word from Karl Marx's THE COMMUNIST MANIFESTO and that these six points are also perfectly consistent with the Protocols in general, [once again proving their legitimacy].

Weishaupt's vision for a future world was a full-on Communism, with all possessions, even children, held in common.

It is more interesting to learn that Karl Marx was not the real founder of Communist world revolution. Its true father was Adam Weishaupt, founder of the "Freemasonic Order" of the Illuminati- Marschalko

"The great strength of our Order lies in its concealment; let it never appear in any place in its own name, but always covered by another name, and another occupation. None is fitter than the three lwers degrees of Freemasonry; the public is accustomed to it, expects little from it, and therefore takes little notice of it."
- Adam Weishaupt

At its beginning, the Illuminati was not a Masonic order, and Weishaupt himself did not enter a lodge until 1777, when he received induction into the Lodge Theodore de Bon Conseil in Munich. However, once inside Masonry, Weishaupt immediately saw its potential value to be a vehicle for the realization of his Illuminati dreams. To create an official union between the Illuminati and Freemasonry, Weishaupt set about organizing the Congress of Wilhelmsbas at the Castle of William IX of Hesse-Kassel, to occur on July 16, 1782. That special even, which was momentous in both size and aspirations, was attended by elite representatives of Masonic lodges from all over.

It was also there that a decision was reached to allow the previously excluded Jews to be granted admittance into Freemasonry. The Illuminati creed claimed all people are equal.[Communism/Christianity]
Christianity & Communism: Jewish Twins

However, there was another, tacit reason for the change in Masonic policy towards the Jews, money was needed....And the Jews where the principal bankers of Europe, a role they had assumed since the time of the fall of the Knights Templar. And don't forget King William IX was in debt at the time, and was in general a psychopatic individual.

When the time came for a vote on their admittance at Wilhelmsbad, the Jews were so anxious to win the day that they completely filled the hall with other Jewish supporters. It was not long afterwards that the Illuminati membership included an abundance of Jewish banking families, including the Rothschilds, the Oppenheimers, the Wertheimers, the Schusters, Speyers, and Sterns.

New lodges of predominantly Jews were formed in Frankfurt the Rothschild's financial capital in Europe, and soon all of Illumininzed Freemasonry would make the city its world headquarters.

The first order of buisness for the Illuminati-initiated Jews, who were the was to manifest their prophesied Zion, a world ruled by the chosen people of Yahweh. Plans were set in motion for the Jews to finally have their "land of milk and honey" that had been promised to them for so long [in their own Jew minds] and it would be the entire world.

The opportunity for manifesting their Zion arrived with the Russian Revolution, which was financed by the Jewish bankers. One of their own, the German Jew, Karl Marx, had catalyzed the event with the publication of his Commnunist Manifesto.

Karl Marx who's real name was Rabbi Mordechai Levi was a member of the League of the Just of which would lead to the creation of the Communist League.

-1841, Moses Hess, brought Marx into a society called the "League of the Just"

The motto of the League of the Just (Bund der Gerechten) was "All Men are Brothers" and its goals were "the establishment of the Kingdom of God on Earth, based on the ideals of love of one's neighbor, equality and justice".[1]. See how Christianity is the twin of Communism.
See- Christianity & Communism: Jewish Twins

The Bolshevik leader of the Revolution, Lenin, who on both sides of his family was of Jewish lineage, contributed his plan for a centralized government that would be controlled by a Jewish oligarchy. After Lenin and his Illuminati cohorts raised their flags at the end of the Russian Revolution, their new communist government emerged with Jews occupying at least 75% of its highest positions...And end up with 60 million Gentiles murdered by the Jews, by the time Communism was over. Many of them murdered in an organized system of camps all run by Jewish Commissar's.
Slave Labor in Soviet Russia

The Jewish bankers also took another tact and and slowly built up an empire of financial istitutions to oversee a capitalistic infrastructure that would govern the world. As one Jewish banker and Illuminati patron, Amshel Rothschild, is known to have famously remarked, "Give me the control of a county's finances, and I care not who governs the country!"

Which leads to Communism in the end. The Jews hold all wealth and power and the Gentiles are reduced to total slavery to global Jewry's One World Order.

The nations will gather to pay homage to the people of God: all the fortunes of the nations will pass to the Jewish people, they will march captive behind the Jewish people in chains and willl prostrate themselves before them, their kings will bring up their sons, and their princesses will nurse their children. The Jews will command the nations, they will summon peoples whom they do not even know them will haten to them. The riches of the sea and the wealth of natons will come to the Jews of their own right.
"Any people of the Kingdom who will not serve Isreal will be destroyed"
-Isidore Loeb [Le Litterature des Pauvres dans la Bible].

What were the effects of the subversion of Free Masonry by the Jews, within the organization? Masonry is based upon Judaism. Eliminate the teachings of Judaism from the Masonic Ritual and what is left?
- The Jewish Tribune [New York,Oct 28,1927]

"In the present nations, Freemasonry is only of benefit to the Jews"
-Theodore Herzl [Founder and Leader of World Zionism]

"We have founded many secret associations, which all work for our purpose, under our orders and our direction. One of the many triumphs of our Freemansonry is that those Gentiles who become members of our Lodges, shoud never suspect that we are using them to build their own jails, upon whose terraces we shall erect the throne of our unversal King of the Jews; and should never know that we are commanding them to forge the chains of their own servility to our future King of the World"
-Opening speech made at the B'nai B'rith convention in Paris [published in the Catholic Gazette, Feb 1936]

Here it should be obvious why the Third Reich banned such organizations within Germany. They are organs of Jewish Communism.

About this capture

The Truth About the "New World Order"

There is a lot of confusion concerning Freemasonry, The New World Order, The United States, and where these all stand in regards to True Satanism. The reason for the confusion is because of infiltration. The ORIGINAL Freemasons who were mainly responsible for establishing the United States of America, designing Washington DC and many other US Cities where the architecture is specially designed and geographically arranged for a future goal, using occult knowledge, had a completely different idea of a New World Order.

This NWO that our Founding Fathers (Whom were almost all Freemasons) had in mind was based upon Luciferian Principles. The goals of this NWO were:

1. To establish a free country where citizens could escape the severe oppression of Christianity and learn the ancient secrets of the past for themselves without any fear of losing their lives.

2. The United States was to be “The New Atlantis” and was meant to set a precedent for other nations of the world to follow in regards to spiritual knowledge.

3. To establish a free nation where each individual could become the best he/she could be.

4. The other goals of this NWO can be found in the original doctrines of the United States.

Now, what happened to the above and where this other NWO, which is of the Jews is going today is another story. I remember asking Father Satan about Freemasonry some time ago as I was confused by conflicting information. His reply was “They have been infiltrated” and he also told me the Freemasonry of today is much different from the original, which was based upon Luciferian Principles.

I read soon after this how Mayer Amschel Rothschild, father of the multi-trillion dollar Jewish banking dynasty used his trusted position:

Here is an excerpt from the book “Rule by Secrecy” by Jim Marrs, © 2000, pages 58 -

“Young Mayer studied to become a Rabbi. He was particularly schooled in Hashkalah, a blending of religion, Hebrew law, and reason”
“The death of his parents forced Mayer to leave rabbinical school and become an apprentice at a banking house.

Quickly learning the trade, he became court financial agent to William IX, royal administrator of the Hesse-Kassel region, and a prominent Freemason. He ingratiated himself to William, who was only one year older than himself, by joining his interest in Freemasonry and antiquities. Mayer would search out ancient coins and sell them to his benefactor at greatly reduced prices. Considering his rabbinical training, coupled with his serious searches for antiquities, he surely developed a deep understanding of the ancient mysteries particularly those of the Jewish Cabala. It was during this same period that the metaphysics of the Cabala began to fuse with the traditions of Freemasonry."

The Jews infiltrate every source of Gentile power they can. From the inside, they either gain total control or they seek to rot it out and destroy it, through corruption.

The Jewish NWO is a world slave state, headed and run by the Jews. This NWO is the exact opposite of what was intended by the original Freemasons who were Gentiles:

1. The Jewish messiah in the form of "Jesus" (A sympathetic magick connection of where all of the Christian prayers and psychic energy has been shafted into) will unite the Jews and establish a one world government communist state run out of Israel (Stolen from the Palestinians, based upon the fictitious history of the Jews in the Bible, and especially selected because of its being at the crossroads of the three major continents of Europe, Africa, and Asia, and centered upon powerful ley lines) where the Jews will have total rule and control over the Gentiles of every nation, culture, and race of the world.

2. People will be bar-coded like cattle (the meaning of the derogatory Jewish word "goyim" for Gentiles) are branded to ensure this total control. Microchip implants are another possibility to ensure Gentiles can be tracked like animals.

3. All spiritual knowledge will be systematically removed from the Gentile populace (The true goals of both Christianity and Communism) through mass murder and torture as was done during the Inquisition and recently (1950’s) as Chinese Communist Chairman Mao Tse-Tung marched on Tibet and burned their monasteries and slaughtered and tortured to death their religious leaders. Tibet, because of its seclusion in the Himalayan Mountains contained much in the way of ancient doctrines of the original spiritual teachings, long before the arrival of Judaism, Christianity, and their cohorts.

4. Spiritual knowledge and occult power will firmly be in the hands of the Jews for total world control.

5. Nearly all uninvolved, lukewarm, and neutral Jews will only be too glad to join this new ruling class of their brethren should the time come.

6. The race-mixing program will further erase all racial and cultural identities for total control. With a loss of self through the destruction of racial and cultural identity, history can be rewritten any way the Jews see fit. They have been doing this for ages, unbeknownst to the majority of the Gentile populace. This has already been done with Satanism (Humanity's Original Religion), where the original teachings, Priests, Priestesses, other spiritual leaders and people with knowledge, along with libraries were systematically destroyed. The Christian Church has been at liberty to define Satanism any way the see fit, given there is little remaining of the past in regards to knowledge and truth. The Bible is nothing more than a fabricated history of the Jewish people of which they never had. Because of the mass indoctrination and force fed beliefs, the mass mind has created a powerful thoughtform that has aided the Jewish people in their quest for world takeover.

7. Human beings will be nothing more than lost souls with no identity, freedom, knowledge or individuality; just a number in total service of a Jewish run slave state.

The above is completely opposite from the intended NWO of the original Freemasons who were Gentiles. Unfortunately, again, this is playing both sides against the middle for total control. Modern rituals in Freemasonry which are geared to the second coming of that filthy messiah and a fusion of all religions of the world are now quite different from those years ago upon which the records have been removed and sealed in secrecy.
 See: The Second Messiah: Templars, the Turin Shroud, and the Great Secret of Freemasonry by Christopher Knight and Robert Lomas.
Published New York : Barnes & Noble, 2000.

It is all too blatant once the spell is broken, how the Jews have wrested control of, and abused occult power in their quest to become "God." If one does the necessary research and studying, one can blatantly see the correlation between the Judeo-Christian Bible, Communism, and the Jewish version of the New World Order. Though the book: "Deadly Deception: Freemasonry Exposed by One of Its Top Leaders" by by James D. Shaw and Tom C. McKenney, was written from a Christian perpective, it contains much useful information regarding Modern Freemasonry. Upon reaching the 33rd degree (this now a days is much different from the original rank where spiritual knowledge was obtained and the 33 degrees represented the spinal column and the kundalni), the Freemason is usually invited to join the Illuminati, a communist organization with the goals of a Jewish run New World Order.

The Judeo-Christian Bible is, like the goal of the modern day Jew infiltrated Freemasonry, "All religions are one." This is quite blatant given everything in the Christian religion has been stolen from religions all over the world, both east and west and their nazarene (the psychic connection for the Jewish messiah), is comprised of some 18+ Gentile Pagan Gods, like Odin who hung from a tree. Anyone who is familair with the occult and powers of the mind knows there must be a connection in which to channel the psychic energy.

The Jews have infiltrated nearly every Gentile Occult Organization. The Golden Dawn is chock full of Hebrew symbols, Hebrew angel, god names, Jewish aleph-bet, and so forth. Wicca is also going this way with the emphasis in some groups on Jewish angels, the Jewish "Three-fold" which is a spin-off of the six-pointed (division of three) "Star of David" which the Jews adopted recently (within the past 100-150 years) and was stolen from the Hindu "Star of Vishnu." The emphasis on the number one (Jewish monotheism, where they, themselves become "God") is unnatural as it takes two to create and even asexual creatures must connect to reproduce at some point.

The truth is: Gentile psychic power, through Christianity and on the other side (The Jews play both sides against the middle and control both sides), the Occult Lodges is being systematically channeled into making the coming of the Jewish messiah, along with a Jewish run New World Order a reality.

Because of the total infiltration and control of key positions, many Gentiles, namely Christians, are confused and lump this NWO into one, where it is really two seperate ideas. Because of the occult power used, they are blind to the fact that this monster is in their own back yard so to speak and they are duped into fervently working for it. The Founding Fathers of the United States used occult power for benevolent purposes in establishing a free nation where ancient teachings and spiritual knowledge could flourish without fear of reproach. It should also be blatantly obvious, there is NOTHING "spiritual" about the Christian "religion." It is and always was plain materialism. Christians have no knowledge of the anatomy of their soul, how to heal themselves or others or anything else of a spiritual nature. The entire so-called "religion" is nothing but false and counterfeit. Christians who reach the advanced stages of Christianity take on an artificial pastey look- that infamous Christian pasted on smile. This is because their entire lives revolve around lies, to the point where they begin to take on an artifical appearance and physically resemble the lies they are so steeped in. This is part of their punishment, which will eventually lead to their eternal damnation through the degeneration of their souls due to their rebuking spiritual knowledge, and cursing and blaspheming humanity's True Creator God whom is none other than "Satan."

About this capture

The Temple of Solomon

Now, for those of you who think Modern Freemasonry is of Satan, think again. Modern Freemasonry, which was originally a Gentile order, has been infiltrated and taken over by Jews.

Here is an excerpt from the book “Rule by Secrecy” by Jim Marrs, © 2000, pages 58 - 59:
“This secretive banking dynasty was begun by Mayer Amschel Bauer, a German Jew born on February 23, 1744, in Frankfurt…” “Young Mayer studied to become a Rabbi. He was particularly schooled in Hashkalah, a blending of religion, Hebrew law, and reason” “The death of his parents forced Mayer to leave rabbinical school and become an apprentice at a banking house.

Quickly learning the trade, he became court financial agent to William IX, royal administrator of the Hesse-Kassel region, and a prominent Freemason. He ingratiated himself to William, who was only one year older than himself, by joining his interest in Freemasonry and antiquities. Mayer would search out ancient coins and sell them to his benefactor at greatly reduced prices. Considering his rabbinical training, coupled with his serious searches for antiquities, he surely developed a deep understanding of the ancient mysteries particularly those of the Jewish Cabala. It was during this same period that the metaphysics of the Cabala began to fuse with the traditions of Freemasonry."

The Jews infiltrate every source of Gentile power they can. From the inside, they either gain total control or they seek to rot it out and destroy it, through corruption.

Modern Freemasonry is now geared to the rebuilding of the "Temple of Solomon." Anyone who knows about the biblical construction of this edifice knows our Demons, namely Asmodeus, were viciously abused and coerced into constructing it against their will by the Jew "Solomon" aka "Shlomo." As quoted from "Legends of the Jews by Lewis Ginzberg, Asmodeus was "in chains." As most of us already know, the Goetic (Gothic) Demons (Gods of the Gentiles) were bound and degraded for centuries. Asmodeus explained much to me and answered most of my questions. The Jewish "Temple of Solomon" is an allegory and the underlying theme of the Judeo/Christian bible. The entire bible is a subliminal tool using the directed psychic power of the masses, and reinforced with occult power and magick.

It goes like this:
Solomon had unimaginable vast wealth. The "Temple of Solomon" symbolizes the Jewish people (Israel) as a whole.

1 Kings 4: 1 So king Solomon was king over all Israel.
20 Judah and Israel were many, as the sand which is by the sea in multitude, eating and drinking, and making merry.
21 And Solomon reigned over all kingdoms from the river unto the land of the Philistines, and unto the border of Egypt: they brought presents, and served Solomon all the days of his life.
22 And Solomon’s provision for one day was thirty measures of fine flour, and threescore measures of meal,
23 Ten fat oxen, and twenty oxen out of the pastures, and an hundred sheep, beside harts, and roebucks, and fallowdeer, and fatted fowl.
24 For he had dominion over all the region on this side the river, from Tiphsah even to Azzah, over all the kings on this side the river: and he had peace on all sides round about him.
25 And Judah and Israel dwelt safely, every man under his vine and under his fig tree, from Dan even to Beersheba, all the days of Solomon.
26 And Solomon had forty thousand stalls of horses for his chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen.
27 And those officers provided victual for king Solomon, and for all that came unto king

Solomon’s table, every man in his month: they lacked nothing.
28 Barley also and straw for the horses and dromedaries brought they unto the place where the officers were, every man according to his charge.
29 And God gave Solomon wisdom and understanding exceeding much, and largeness of heart, even as the sand that is on the sea shore.
30 And Solomon’s wisdom excelled the wisdom of all the children of the east country, and all the wisdom of Egypt.
31 For he was wiser than all men; than Ethan the Ezrahite, and Heman, and Chalcol, and Darda, the sons of Mahol: and his fame was in all nations round about.
32 And he spake three thousand proverbs: and his songs were a thousand and five.
33 And he spake of trees, from the cedar tree that is in Lebanon even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the wall: he spake also of beasts, and of fowl, and of creeping things, and of fishes.
34 And there came of all people to hear the wisdom of Solomon, from all kings of the earth, which had heard of his wisdom.
1 Kings 10: 21 And all king Solomon’s drinking vessels were of gold, and all the vessels of the house of the forest of Lebanon were of pure gold; none were of silver: it was nothing accounted of in the days of Solomon.
22 For the king had at sea a navy of Tharshish with the navy of Hiram: once in three years came the navy of Tharshish, bringing gold, and silver, ivory, and apes, and peacocks.
23 So king Solomon exceeded all the kings of the earth for riches and for wisdom.
24 And all the earth sought to Solomon, to hear his wisdom, which God had put in his heart.
25 And they brought every man his present, vessels of silver, and vessels of gold, and garments, and armour, and spices, horses, and mules, a rate year by year.
26 And Solomon gathered together chariots and horsemen: and he had a thousand and four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen, whom he bestowed in the cities for chariots, and with the king at Jerusalem.
"Solomon" also had several hundred wives and an overabundance of everything else.

Ok, now what becomes of the Gentiles? Read on...

1 Kings 9: 20 And all the people that were left of the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites, which were not of the children of Israel, 21 Their children that were left after them in the land, whom the children of Israel also were not able utterly to destroy, upon those did Solomon levy a tribute of bondservice unto this day.
22 But of the children of Israel did Solomon make no bondmen: but they were men of war, and his servants, and his princes, and his captains, and rulers of his chariots, and his horsemen.
The Gentiles who were not "UTTERLY DESTROYED" by the "Children of Israel" were made into SLAVES. GET IT??????

The Gentile Gods enslaved by the Jews and viciously abused, following with the mass murder and enslavement of the remaining Gentile people. Asmodeus explained to me that the "Temple of Solomon" is the "empire of the Jews."

The Nazarene is another allegory where the 12 apostles represent the 12 tribes of Israel and he unites them. The whole damned bible is nothing more than a powerful subliminal working with an allegory where the Jews create their own fictitious history (stolen from Gentile legends and twisted), usurp all of the knowledge (Solomon asked the Jewish "God" for wisdom, as knowledge is the key to all things) from the Gentiles who were mass murdered and tortured to death as witches and so forth (those who had occult knowledge), remaining Gentiles are then enslaved at the hands of the Jews who control all of the wealth and the power. The above biblical scriptures say it all.

The Nazarene is also said to be a direct descendent of "Solomon." The theme of the entire Christian program is one of debt and owing. "Adam and Eve" "sinned" so humanity must pay. This is just one of numerous examples. Everyone's got to be sorry and pay up. So there is the subliminal on debt and owing. Everyone's got to be sorry. This subliminal trash is drummed into the minds of Gentiles from day one.

"The power of the united thought of a number of people is always far more than the sum of their separate thoughts: it would be more nearly represented by their product"
- The Astral Body and Other Phenomena by Lieut. Colonel Arthur E. Powell © 1927 is the Kabbalistic square of the Sun. 666 is the all-important solar chakra. The true meaning of the "Temple of Solomon" is the TEMPLE OF THE SUN. Please Note: The true meaning of the "Temple of the Sun" is spiritual. The Jews completely corrupted this. "Sol" "Om" and "On" are all words for the Sun. "Sol" is the Latin word for the Sun and is close to the English word "soul." "Om" is a name given by the Hindus to the Spiritual Sun and "On" is an Egyptian word for Sun. The symbolism of the Temple of Solomon was stolen by the Jews and corrupted into a fictitious character, as with the fictitous nazarene and nearly everything in the Judeo/Christian Bible. For more information:

Ancient Gentile Religious Texts:
Replaced With Meaningless Rabbinical Drivel and Jewish Literary Filth
Please Note: The true meaning of the "Temple of the Sun" is spiritual. This symbolizes the perfected soul, where the rays from the solar [666] chakra, which is the center of the soul and circulates spiritual energy, radiates into 8 separate rays. The shining soul is symbolized by the sun. 8 is the number of Astaroth. This is also "The New Jerusalem." The name of "Jerusalem" has also been stolen and corrupted into a city in Israel. "Jerusalem" IS A CONCEPT!

"THE NEW ATLANTIS"
by
High Priest Don

The purpose of this article is to show the truth behind the creation of the United States of America which is not what the fundies and their Jewish masters want you to know. In essence this is the true, hidden and Satanic history of America. Read these before going further:

The Truth about the "New World Order"

USA Founding Fathers

"Many leading Serpents of Wisdom were quietly drawing up plans for what was to be a model nation across the western sea. Referred to within closed circles of initiates as the "New Atlantis." This new land was to be governed by the Serpents of Wisdom elected "by the people and for the people."

In reality Europeans already new about the new world back into the time of the Vikings as the north American rune stones prove. It's also been shown many of the Templar's had bases in America going back to their day. America was the goal of the Free Masons. A nation free of the Catholic/Jewish grip, and where they could create a nation based on solely Satanic principles. This plan was put into work over a hundred years before the official revolution.

"Starting in the late 1600's members of the Free Masons began leaving their comfortable lives behind in order to undertake the long arduous journey across the Atlantic Ocean to become citizens of the New Land of the Phoenix. Once in America they proceeded to organize a cohesive network of Rosicrucian and Freemasonic Lodges within a nation of 13 colonies the ancient number of the Phoenix Dragon. In 1694 a Rosicrucian colony was established in Pennsylvania and by the early 1700's Freemasonic Lodges were literally sweeping across the new land. By the beginning of the Revolutionary period there was a multitude of common lodges and seven (the number of the Serpent) Grand Provincial Lodges scattered evenly throughout the Thirteen Colonies."

"One of the favorite forums of the Freemasons in Boston was the Green Dragon Tavern, where Daniel Webster referred to as "the headquarters of the revolution." During a frenzied meeting at this tavern a plan was hatched to resist the British tariff on tea by destroying a new shipment of the commodity residing in Boston Harbor. It was decided that on the night of December 6, 1773 a group of Freemasons of Saint Andrew's Lodge would disguise themselves as Native Americans, clandestinely board the tea ships and toss the cargo overboard. This act was to become an unforgiving thorn in the side of the British Crown and a full scale Revolutionary War was declared soon afterward."

"The North American Freemasons pooled their resources in order to organize a formidable resistance against their oppressive rulers. They chose the Rosicrucian and Master Mason George Washington to supervise the building of an army and brought over from Germany Freemason Baron von Steuben to instruct the virgin troops in the art of battle."

"The Colonial Army was a "Military Lodge" and a "Who's who of American Colonial Freemasonry." Over 2000 of its officers were Freemasons and out of these at least 100 were generals working directly under Washington. Many high-ranking officers were also Freemasonic Grandmasters. Included in this elite list was Washington, Paul Revere and Joseph Warren, the Grandmaster of the Massachusetts Grand Lodge who became famous for sacrificing his life while leading a battalion up Bunker Hill."

It should also be noted the American Freemasons also had many allies in the British government and military who where also committed to the creation of the New Satanic Nation, and helped to secure the creation of this nation from behind the scenes. It has been noted during many pitched battles, masons on both sides would make the Masonic signs to each other.

"Following their victory in the Revolutionary War, two important documents were drawn up by the Freemasons in Philadelphia, a city ostensibly named after Philadelphia, the name of the "Supreme Secret Society" of Freemasons in France."

"The first of their documents, the Declaration of Independence, was authored principally by the Freemason Thomas Jefferson and signed primarily by the high ranking Freemasons, of the 56 signers of the document, 50 were Freemasons, including the Grandmaster John Hancock."

"After the Philadelphia Convention the government of the United States began to take concrete form as the country's first President, the Freemasonic Grandmaster George Washington, was sworn in by Robert Livingston, Grandmaster of the New York Lodge. With hordes of attending Freemasons cheering the inauguration, a new "Nation of the Phoenix" was officially born."

A similar gathering was held in which the cornerstone of the new capital was lain. This ceremony was executed by the Grand Lodge of Maryland and several lodges under the jurisdiction of Washington's Virginia Lodge. As was his practice, President Washington attended the service in full Freemasonic ceremonial regalia complete with apron."

"When the wheels of the United States government finally began to turn, the new institution resembled one huge Freemasonic Lodge. Most of the high ranking officials in all three branches of government were either Freemasons or allied with the principles of Freemasonry. While the Grandmaster Washington was presiding over the Executive Branch of the government, John Marshall, a brother master mason from Washington's Virginia Lodge, was chairing the Judicial Branch as its first Chief Justice. The majority of lawmakers in the House of Representatives and Senate were also Freemasons."

"Of all the early American Serpents who laid the foundation work for the new nation, none is more important than Benjamin Franklin, a Rosicrucian, Freemason and Grandmaster of numerous secret societies."

"Franklin created the Leather Apron Club, one of the earliest of Freemasonic Lodges in America. It served as a vehicle for "preparing members for citizenship in a yet-to-be-born nation." Following this, Franklin acquired initiation into a Freemasonic lodge in Philadelphia and was alter elected as Grandmaster over all lodges within the state of Pennsylvania."

"In order to make the Freemasonic rites uniform within the 13 colonies, Franklin composed and published a series of "Masonic by- laws, manuals and constitutions" which served to standardize the rites and philosophies adhered to by the Colonial Serpents. He also published numerous treatises within which he encoded Rosicrucian wisdom along with a "call to arms" to all those ready to join in the fight for freedom. One of his occult literary vehicles was the famous Poor Richard's Almanac."

"Franklin's activity also included membership in the Apollonian Society, an esoteric fraternity founded upon the rites and principles of the ancient Egyptian and Atlantean Serpents of Wisdom."

It should also be noted, Franklin, while on diplomatic mission in France lived in the main Masonic lodge in Paris and was also initiated into French societies. He and his Masonic brothers in France got France to become involved in the war in America which enabled the final victory of the Satanists and the creation of the New Atlantis. Hence why America has the statue of Liberty. A gift from the French masons to commemorate such events.

Franklin also used the symbol of the Serpent in many of his works.

"Franklin is well known for making his own life a reflection of the spiritual principals he preached to other masons.. He led a pure spiritual life punctuated by vegetarianism and daily meditation. His prodigious philanthropic activities included the creation of numerous libraries, hospitals and firehouses. Franklin was also a crusader for the creation of positive relations with the Native Americans and eventually became an honorary member of various tribes. Through his efforts numerous treaties were created between the North American tribes and the Unites States government."

"The Freemason and Rosicrucian George Washington is considered the greatest of leaders during the United States earliest hours. Exhibiting spiritually precocious gifts from a young age, Washington was initiated into the Lodge of Alexandria Virginia as an Entered Apprentice when just twenty years old. Two years later he became the lodge's first Master Mason and later ascended to the degree of Royal Arch, one of the highest of Master Mason degrees. Washington was also honorably inducted into Mystics of the Wissahickon, the American Supreme Rosicrucian Council, which was instrumental in constructing both the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution."

"When Washington assumed the office of president he was simultaneously elevated to serve as honorary Grandmaster over all the Freemasonic Lodges in the United States."

"Washington's funeral was an elaborate Freemasonic affair. The service was based upon the ancient Egyptian rites of resurrection and presided over by three Freemasons from Washington's Alexandrian Lodge. Masonic symbols of sprigs of acacia, crossed swords and his apron where placed on his casket."

"A motion was introduced in Congress by Freemason John Marshall to erect a memorial in honor of the first president. It was decided that the most appropriate monument for the late Grandmaster Freemason was the Egyptian "frozen snake," the obelisk. Soon afterwards, in 1793, a special ceremony was held in which the Freemason Robert Mills used square, level and plumb, the symbolic tools of Freemasonry, to lay the cornerstone of what was to become a 600 foot obelisk, the tallest structure of its kind in the world."

"A Freemason, Rosicrucian and initiate of the French order of the Nine Sisters. Thomas Jefferson was another important Serpent and founding father. An important contributor to both the Declaration and Constitution and under his guidance the first American University was founded in Virginia. Modeled after the Lyceum of Greece and the Alexandrian Museum, Jefferson's university resembled an ancient mystery academy of the Serpents and offered a curriculum similar to that taught within the Museum."

"Jefferson was chosen by the North American Serpents to oversee the creation of a "New Alexandria" because of his intellectual and spiritual achievements. He was a recognized adept of most practical sciences including chemistry, botany, anatomy, surgery, zoology, natural philosophy, medicine, mathematics, astronomy, geography, politics and law. He was also an occult genius who had studied the esoteric wisdom and communicated the ancient mysteries through secret ciphers. His work with ciphers or secret codes earned Jefferson the title of "Father of American Cryptography."

"In this creation of his "New Alexandria" Jefferson brought together all the most renowned American teachers in both the scientific and religious fields. To house the classrooms of these adepts and their students, Jefferson constructed a campus of magnificent temples similar to those of the ancient Museum. Within the walls of these temples diverse subjects as chemistry, mathematics, religion, philosophy and metaphysics coexisted harmoniously and supportively.

The Truth About the Bible

This seems to be one of the last steps in exposing Christianity. This audio sermon is also exceptionally important for everyone who wants to know the truth to listen:
The Holy Bible: A Book of Jewish Witchcraft.mp3

Unless we take some serious action in the way of working relentlessly to destroy Christianity and to alert thinking, intelligent people, the future is very grim. I wrote this sermon some time ago and everyone here should have read it:
The Holy Bible: A Book of Jewish Witchcraft

In my many years of research and study, I have found the bible is not the so-called "word of God" but is a man-made book of witchcraft, hence all of the numbers therein. This is used liberally by top Jews in power to enslave the world. Jewish ritual murder subliminally ties into the Christian mass/service where the nazarene is the child sacrifice; "eat me and drink me" "this is the body of christ..." This son of jewhova, sacrificed by his father...i.e. murdered. In addition, the entire mass/service focuses upon the Jews, Israel and their fictitious history, creating a further subliminal tie. Believers are under a very powerful spell.
2000 Years of Jewish Ritual Murder

The bible is in nearly every home around the world, and in non-Christian countries, its twin, the Koran is the same. This is no different from the $20.00 bill and the 911 incident, as the $20.00 bill is the most common currency handled in the USA. The bible is pushed, it is in hotels, hospitals, nursing homes and is nearly found everywhere. It creates a powerful subliminal tie into the workings of Jewish witchcraft. Many believers have never read the bible, but rely on the interpretations of their corrupted preachers and the ramblings of double-digit IQ idiots, who claim this is the "good book" and believe Christianity to be a help to the poor and the needy and nothing more than a charitable, peace and love promoting movement. Nothing could be further from the truth.

This, like communism itself, is another Jewish lie; another Jewish "brotherhood" program that deceives believers with lies to get them ensnared. As with Jewish communism, intelligence and independent thinking is highly discouraged. The mentally retarded are sacred and revered in Christianity, and with communism, the Christianity program [Jewish communism is the higher level of Christianity] goes a step further and mass-murders intellectuals, in what are known as "purges." The "intelligentsia" are one of the first groups of people to be destroyed whenever Jewish communism forcibly takes over a country or area.

The success of these Jewish programs has been dependent upon the destruction and removal of spiritual knowledge from the Gentile populace. Jewish communism of course takes everything a step further, as most knowledge is systematically removed, not just any spiritual knowledge, but knowledge in general, and is replaced with Jewish communist propaganda. Where Christianity left off, communism take up. Like the Christian mass/service, where the congregation is forcibly brainwashed [people are bored and their minds are open to suggestion, or are nodding off and very receptive to suggestion and indoctrination]. The tactics are the same with Jewish communism and any fool who believes communism to be liberal needs a serious reality check. Jewish communism is in reality, living according to Old Testament laws and so-called "morals" in the strictest sense.

Christianity like its Jewish root creates the problem and then has its own solution. People are indoctrinated that poverty is a virtue, and the ownership of material things is discouraged. This in turn creates poverty on a subconscious level that manifests in reality. The mind and soul are programmed into poverty. Then...here comes Christianity to the rescue, appearing to those with lesser intelligence to be a hero and savior of humanity. In addition, the bible is chock full of destructive suicidal teachings and advice for living. Christianity creates the problem and then brings the solution that damns us all in the end. They work this from every angle and those who are strong believers, tie into this energy and perpetuate this nefarious program in numerous ways. Birth control and related, especially where they are needed, such as in Third World countries, are highly discouraged. This keeps the poverty running rampant, with Christian missionaries and related spiritual criminals to the rescue. This sort of thing fools the populace every time. Most, being too lazy to read the bible, or do any necessary research believe what they are told, that the bible is the "book of God" and that Christianity is a peace promoting, charitable, institution. Few are also aware of the fact that nearly every war was either directly or indirectly instigated by Christianity, nor are they aware of the fact that Christianity, with its twin of Islam has a foundation of the most heinous mass-murder and torture ever known to humanity. The inquisition finds itself in full power with the stepping off point of Jewish communism.

Getting back to the witchcraft aspect. In order to expose the bible for what it is, one must venture ahead into the unknown regarding the "occult," of which there are numerous threats and warnings against in the bible. There are also curses in place regarding this. Going in, those with lesser courage frighten easily and back out. Those of us who have gone in very deep regarding the occult, spirituality and the powers of the mind and soul...the numbers, the planets and such, have enough knowledge to see the bible for what it really is. You have to have the experience and the knowledge.

All of those bible "prophesies" are also man-made. Yes, this is true. Again, those with lesser intelligence, such as Christian believers and their preachers are deceived into believing these are acts of "God." Well, truth be known, these sorts of things can be accomplished by knowledgeable human beings as well; people who are well versed in knowing how to use occult power. The bible is no "book of God." The fact that is full of numbers should sound an alarm for many, but the sad truth is most are oblivious to this. Witchcraft uses numbers.

Lilith led me to a book in a second-hand store: Eye to Eye: Facing the Consequences of Dividing Israel by William R. Koenig. The idiot author who is a US senator lacks the intelligence to see through his own writings in the book. Phrases like "because the bible says so" and such reveal the gross stupidity of this deceived believer. It is obvious he cannot think for himself, BUT his research is excellent in providing a summary of events that correlate with the verses in the bible.

Now, every time there are issues involving Israel and before the manifestation of the bandit criminal state; any issues involving the Jews, disasters would soon follow. This is no "act of God." These are curses that were established over the centuries by the Jews, through Jewish ritual murder and related. The energies of believers and the fact that the bible is as ubiquitous as currency bolster these curses and provide a powerful energy host.

For those of you who are unfamiliar with the King Tutankhamen excavation, please take some time and learn about this. The opening of the tomb in Egypt in 1922 unleashed some powerful curses. These curses were also man-made. Ancient Egypt was highly spiritual. These curses were set into motion by gentiles, but the same principles apply...the use of witchcraft. If spiritual knowledge is removed from the populace and in return the populace is force-fed with lies, those who HAVE this knowledge and power become Gods.

Every time there are issues with Israel, the USA or any other country involved pays the price with natural and other disasters, loss of life and destruction, totaling losses in the billions. This is no "act of God" it is the result of centuries old man-made curses put into action by top Jews via Jewish ritual murder and its subliminal support of the Christian mass which focuses on the Jews with the theme of the sacrificed nazarene, which is a child sacrifice, being this is the assumed "Son of God."

As with any curse, all of these can be turned right back onto the senders. JoS has had many group workings over the years. In the hands of powerful Satanic mages under the direction of Satan, we can defeat all of this. If this is not done, the future is doomed. Knowledge is also a very important key, as the more people who wake up to the truth of the Christian and Muslim programs; this will act in breaking the spell. These programs are nothing more than powerful spells that masquerade as being the "word of God" and keep humanity in chains. The slavish worship lavished upon jewhova and that nazarene are then transferred to the absolute worst of criminals, such as Josef Stalin, Kim Il Sung, Mao Tse-Tung and other related communist filth that have mass-murdered and tortured innocents by the tens of millions. This is why Satan warns us in the Al-Jilwah against worshipping: "No god has a right to interfere in my affairs, and I have made it an imperative rule that everyone shall refrain from worshipping all gods."

Satan does not demand slavish worship and warns against this sort of thing as this sets up the populace to be enslaved and destroyed. Satan stands for rebellion, individuality, and freedom and above all, for the advancement of humanity.

The USA has been targeted for communism. High Priest Micama Gmicalzoma hs also made youtube videos of my sermons:
Exposing Christianity YouTube

Deluded Christians and Muslims blame everything on Satan. They do not have enough intelligence or knowledge to see everything is of their own so-called "God," who was a murderer and a liar from the beginning, and who depends upon human sacrifices. This in reality is the Jewish people. Again, as I have stated many times before, there is nothing spiritual about the bible, nor is there anything therein to advance humanity in any way; only to keep everyone enslaved and damned. The Old Testament, being full of genocide, infanticide, mass murder, torture, looting and plundering, war, and the enslavement of Gentiles is a system. This is used by Jew communism whenever it takes hold of a nation or area. Before actual communism, the Catholic Church and its inquisition acted by the exact same methods. Under this murderous institution, same as with Jew communism, all knowledge was removed from the populace, hence the tern the "Dark Ages" and replaced with compulsory church propaganda, same as with communism brainwashing. The New Testament with the communist teachings of the nazarene is chock full of suicidal advice such as cut off thine hand, pluck out thine eye, turn the other cheek, walk the extra mile, bless those who curse you, having blind faith, and other nefarious teachings to destroy humanity; preparing the unknowing populace to readily accept communism. And, as for "blessing those who curse you" the bible is very direct regarding blessing the Jews and Israel.

Some idiot preacher made a youtube video regarding the new $100.00 bill and how this time it is much worse than the $20.00 bill in the way of enacting disaster. Of course, the buzzard brained idiot blames this on Satan out of extreme stupidity. The level of stupidity and idiocy within Christianity is staggering to say the least. Satan has been trying to get through to those with enough sense to see through all of this. Satan is the liberator of humanity. Satan stands for rebellion. Unless Christianity and its twins of communism and Islam are completely destroyed, there will be no future for any of us.

"Xianity and communism are the same. Satan wants us to now focus on destroying communism. People need to know it is the Jews behind both. From what we have been getting in the news here, it appears the Jews are trying to resurrect communism again in Russia. They must be stopped. Several also in the JoS ministry are all getting the same message from Satan and the Powers of Hell - destroy communism. The problem is when communism goes down, then xianity is right back on the people. Most people are fooled into thinking xianity and communism are against each other and do not know that it is the same Jewish agenda designed to deceive the populace."

"Yes, communism is from other worlds out there - the reptilians and the greys. Lilith told me this. The reptilians use mass slave labor and the slaves are like nameless, faceless, emotionless and only a number. Just stay strong and know you are not working alone. Satan and the Powers of Hell are with you and an important ritual was done to wake up Russia. When you have the time, the meditation books should also be done, as Russia has been without spirituality for a very long time. Then, the xians come right back as soon as communism falls, just like fleas on a dog... Communism must be destroyed in Russia, as the energies for it are still there. There is a war going on in other worlds...communism versus freedom fighters. They really went head to head in WW2."

"Satan told me and the JoS ministry, he really wants the word out in Russia more than anything. He wants for as many Russian people to know the truth, that the Jews are behind communism and xianity is the very same Jewish shit as is communism. Satan wants both xianity and communism completely destroyed. That Jewish holocaust is used to distract the populace from communist atrocities. The Russian people must fight back."

"The Jews are beginning to panic. Holocaust denial is now so prevalent it made the white house here and the president [who is a communist] denounced it publicly. The USA has a lot of closet communists who are working to bring it down. They are breaking the constitution and doing all kinds of things here. Communism is rampant here, but not yet full blown..."

There is a war going on 'out there' involving other worlds, extending to different parts of our galaxy. The greys made a deal with the Vatican - wealth and power in exchange for souls. That was one. It all has to do with occult power, along with race as well. In addition to the mass murders and tortures of Gentiles, spiritual knowledge was forcibly removed. This is what Christianity and Islam are all about. Spiritual knowledge and occult power are systematically removed and replaced with meaningless crap. This is analogous to a sense taken from one side in a war, say one of the five senses and the enemy who has all five has an obvious clear advantage. The side with four or less will obviously lose.

In our case, this was the sixth sense that was removed along with knowledge pertaining to it. In its place, like I already wrote above- meaningless crap along with lies to replace it. The Inquisition even went as far as to murder the grandchildren and other descendants of so-called 'heretics." This is because the "witchpower" is hereditary. This was a huge victory for the enemy, no different from communism where mass murders are committed to wipe out any memory of the former generations that were a threat. Then, the occult knowledge is kept ion the hands of a few, mainly top Jews [they also have full control of the Vatican and also Islam at key points].

This was all accomplished with the help of the enemy human-hating greys and their reptilian superiors, and carried out by the Jews who are tied in with them. If one does the necessary research, there are many paintings of that period depicting an unusual amount of UFO activity. During the Second World War, there was also a high level of UFO activity when both opposing sides our Satan [National Socialism] vs. the enemy [communism] went head to head. Most of you also know about the Roswell incident in 1947, when the enemy greys became very confident along with post WW2 incidents involving them.

I posted a link to a youtube video here some time back, but it was taken down [so what else is new?]. This video for those of you who haven't seen it- here is another link http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=R7kcWt02fnk&list=PL54952C23C765D3F4

If you can't find it, if it gets taken down again, then look up "Ancient Aliens S02E05" or "Aliens and the Third Reich." Hopefully, the above link should work ok. Of course, there is the same slander, but the video itself is very revealing. Our side [Satan, The Empire of Orion"] worked with the Nazis. The other side- the enemy greys worked with those fighting for communism. Hitler vs. Stalin. WW2- things reached a climax, as never before in history.

If you note throughout history, and this goes back centuries, the greys- the Communist/Christian side always has been human hating, mass murdering, and brutally enslaving. Islam is no different. They are also prolific liars and deceivers who try to use, manipulate and promote slogans of "love," "equality," "brotherhood" and "better living conditions"; "a better life" to trap massive numbers of victims. This also comes along with their programs of "love" and "peace" resorting to endless mass murder, torture, war and the destruction of human life and spirit to accomplish their agenda of enslaving the entire world.

Quote from the Jewish Talmud:
Simeon Haddarsen, fol. 56-D: "When the Messiah comes every Jew will have 2800 slaves."

This has been going back and forth for a very long time and is not over with. In addition, each side has its own humans working here. I know most of the people on Satan's side here were born with certain marks. The enemy knew this a long time ago and gave the name for these birthmarks "witches' marks" which automatically meant death upon discovery. Our leaders; most were contacted by Satan early in life, before the age of their first Saturn return at 29-30. Satan has had his own souls, those who have been with him through many lifetimes, elite souls who attain the most powerful positions in this world such as Adolf Hitler, the reincarnation of Rameses II, a noted and very powerful historical figure and pharaoh. Some of the other top Third Reich Leaders were also reincarnations of important pharaohs. The importance and status one attains in a former life usually comes much easier in succeeding lives- elite souls.

I hope the above answers your questions. The Christian and Islamic programs of filth involve much more than just what we are told about human history and this earth. You have to research, study and learn to think outside of what we are all told. I know there are people here who take this lightly or just blow it all off, but this is deadly serious. We need to reach as many people as possible and work to destroy the programs of the enemy with exposing Christianity and its twin of communism. Our entire future is on the line.

I also want to add that in spite of the enemy campaign to destroy all Gentile spiritual knowledge, some still survives. In Russia and the Caucasus, there is knowledge of a centuries old protective and benevolent spirit that was very much revered and the name was "SHAYTAN." There is reference to this in the book in the chapter about the Almasty: The New Soviet Psychic Discoveries: A First-Hand Report on the Startling Breakthroughs in Russian Parapsychology Paperback - September 1, 1979 by Henry Gris and William Dick.

Communism's Christian Roots

“Christian theology is the grandmother of Bolshevism.”
- Oswald Spengler

"Christianity and communism are very close spiritually and ideologically. This is a fairly well known concept that has been adopted by various thinkers, from Thomas More to Lev Tolstoy. Few people know that the world's first socialist state was established in Paraguay and was based on the ideas of Catholic Jesuits before Marx created his teachings."

"The "Society of Jesus" - the Jesuit religious order - in the Catholic Church was roughly equivalent to the KGB in the Soviet Union."
Above quotes taken from "Pravda" [The main Communist Party Newspaper and leading newspaper of the former Soviet Union] From the article: Is there any difference between Christianity and Communism? 30/04/2013

"American Newspapers claim that Stalin has been preordained to save Christianity.
-Josef Goebbels 1

Communism is not anti-Christian, as is commonly believed:
In addition to this, the Catholic Church in China has over 70 million members and is growing. There is also the Catholic Changchung Cathedral in Communist North Korea; the nominal cathedral of the Roman Catholic Bishop of Pyongyang, North Korea. The Russian Orthodox Church worked hand in hand with the Communist Party in the USSR. The violence against its Clergy during the revolution, was simply to weed out the Czarist elements from its ranks, and nothing more. Stalin openly worked with the Orthodox Church to help the Communist war effort for the Red Army during the second world war. Today in Russia, high ranking Clergy in the Russian Orthodox Church openly advocate a Christian Communist movement within their nation. The Catholic Church also has had a strong hand in the Communistic, Liberation Theology in South America. It’s no mistake Catholic Clergy could traverse the “Iron Curtain” during the cold war with ease.
80 million Bibles printed in China - and counting Link to article from 'Christianity Today.'

"Ernst Bloch (1885–1977) was a German Marxist philosopher and atheist theologian. Although not a Christian himself, he is said to have "bridged the gap" between Christian communism and the Leninist branch of Marxism. One of Bloch's major works, the Principle of Hope, contains such declarations as: "Ubi Lenin, ibi Jerusalem" [Where Lenin is, there is Jerusalem] and "the Bolshevist fulfillment of Communism [is part of] the age-old fight for God." 2

In truth, Christianity prepares the populace to be open to and to accept communism. There is nothing within the Christian doctrines or the teachings of the Nazarene that conflicts with communism in any way. Christianity IS Communism.

Both programs work to enslave, using terror, brutality, mass murder and coersion. The Catholic Church was the KGB of the Middle Ages, ruling through terror, use of force and mass murder. The Inquisition is a blatant example.

Both programs prohibit the ownership of private property. Christianity prepares followers on a subliminal level for communism. Christians are indoctrinated to believe that poverty is a virtue. Once this concept takes hold upon one's subconscious mind, quite often, a serious lack of money is a result and this sometimes even lasts into future lives, speaking from a spiritual perspective. What this does is it also creates a self-perpetuating program, and in turn creates generations of poor. The Christian Churches then appear as helpers of the poor and benefactors, when all along, it was the Christian teachings that created and enforced the problem. The Jew creates the problems and then gives the Jewish version of a damned solution for Gentiles. Click here for an article econcerning Christian Mind Control

There is nothing at all spiritual about Christianity. Christianity is a tool for removing spiritual knowledge and powers, and replacing these with meaningless robotic 'prayers' corrupted from and repeated in the same fashion as Far Eastern mantras, and endless indoctrination with false teachings aimed to imbed a fictitious status and history of the Jewish people in the minds of Christians, which is nothing spiritual at all. Few if any Christian preachers can diagram the human soul, for example. The removal of and the corruption of spiritual knowledge prepares the populace to accept the atheistic communist state.

Both Christianity and Communism present themselves as brotherhood programs, promoting equality, prosperity, good will, and a better way of life, but upon closer examination of their real doctrines and histories, this is nothing more than a come-along and beneath the surface, terror, mass murder, torture, forced indoctrination, and keeping the populace ignorant are the bulwark of both of these programs. Any fool who reads the Judeo/Christian Bible can plainly see the endless accounts of mass murder, pillaging, rape, enslavement, and threats of eternal torture and damnation if the doctrines are not taken seriously or adhered to, and above all, how jewhova was a murderous monster who preyed upon Gentiles; no different from the communist programs. For proof of this see "Jehova and Human Blood Sacrifice." "A Murderer and a Liar from the Beginning."

"But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me."
Luke 19: 27
[Direct quote from Jesus advocating murder]

"Rebellion" is a definite NO NO and is "of the Devil."
Christianity also prepares followers for communism in that one is indoctrinated to endure injustice. Nearly everyone has heard the biblical scriptures about turning the other cheek, walking the extra mile, loving one's enemies and so forth. These teachings work together with communism in destroying the justice system and personal rights. Crime is allowed to get so out of control [as it already has]; that the populace is not only discouraged from fighting back, but if one should defend one's self, one is often punished for this. What these Jewish programs do, is they set a trap. Most people eventually are more than willing to give up their rights in favor of ultra-strict laws in order to control crime. Both programs prohibit taking any personal action in the way of enforcing justice and place this responsibility in the hands of the state for communism, and in the hands of that so-called "God" for Christianity. Any rebellion or fighting back is a grave offense. The acceptance of abuse and injustice are both very necessary for establishing a slave state. A slave must never try to fight back or rebel in any way. Hate is another taboo in both programs.

A look into Communism's birth:
Communism was created out of the organization "The League of the Just." The motto of the League of the Just ("Bund der Gerechten" or "Bund der Gerechtigkeit") was "All Men are Brothers" and its goals were "the establishment of the Kingdom of God on Earth, based on the ideals of love of one's neighbor, equality and justice".
"At a congress held in London in June 1847 the League of the Just merged with members of the Communist Corresponding Committee headed by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels, adopting a new organizational charter and programme and reconstituting itself as the Communist League." [3]
This is the basis of the Christian doctrine.

We can trace Communism's roots back to the radical Liberal ideology in Europe. Which itself is Christianity in disguise. As Nietzsche stated about the French revolution and its Liberal ideology as the: "Daughter and continuation of Christianity."

This radical, universalist, egalitarian doctrine is at the heart of Christianity, and Liberalism with its stepping off point into Communism. Where Liberalism then morphed into Communism openly:

"During the decade of the 1840s the word "communist" came into general use to describe those who hailed the left wing of the Jacobin Club of the French Revolution as their ideological forefathers. This political tendency saw itself as egalitarian heritors of the 1795 Conspiracy of Equals headed by Gracchus Babeuf. The sans-culottes of Paris which had decades earlier been the base of support for Babeuf — artisans, journeymen, and the urban unemployed — was seen as a potential foundation for a new social system based upon the modern machine production of the day.”

The French thinker Étienne Cabet inspired the imagination with a novel about a utopian society based upon communal machine production- "Voyage en Icarie" [1839]. The revolutionary Louis Auguste Blanqui argued in favor of an elite organising the overwhelming majority of the population against the "rich," seizing the government in a coup d'état, and instituting a new egalitarian economic order.” 4

A review of the emerging trends from Christianity to Liberalism and into Communism:

Liberalism is Christianity without the Christ
William Gayley Simpson's Which Way Western Man?

Revilo Oliver:
Quote:
"The other apostates I have mentioned, and many that are now forgotten, together with almost all of the anti-Christians of recent centuries, exemplify the operation of what may be called the law of cultural residues. In all civilized societies, when a long-established and generally accepted belief is found to be incredible, good minds abandon it, but they commonly retain derivative beliefs that were originally deduced from the creed they have rejected and logically must depend on it. Thus it happened that modern enemies of Christianity rejected the mythology, but uncritically retained faith in the social and ethical superstitions derived from it — a faith which they oddly call rational but hold with a religious fervor."

"They laugh at the silly story about Adam and his spare rib, but they continue to believe in a "human race" descended from a single pair of ancestors and hence in a "brotherhood of man." They speak of "all mankind," giving to the term an unctuous and mystic meaning with which they do not invest corresponding terms, such as "all marsupials" or "all ungulates." They prate about the "rights of man," although a moment's thought should suffice to show that, in the absence of a decree from a supernatural monarch, there can be no rights other than those which the citizens of a stable and homogeneous society have, by covenant or established custom, bestowed on themselves; and that while the citizens may show kindness to aliens, slaves, and dogs, such beings obviously can have no rights."

"They do not believe that one-third of a god became incarnate in the most squalid region on earth to associate with illiterate peasants, harangue the rabble of a barbarian race, and magically exalt the ignorant and uncouth to "make folly of the wisdom of this world," so that "the last shall be first" — that they do not believe, but they cling to the morbid hatred of superiority that makes Christians dote on whatever is lowly, inferior, irrational, debased, deformed, and degenerate."

"They gabble about the 'sanctity of human life' — especially the vilest forms of it — without reflecting that it takes a god creator to make something sacred. And they frantically agitate for a universal "equality" that can be attained only by reducing all human beings to the level of the lowest, evidently unaware that they are merely echoing the Christians' oft-expressed yearning to become sheep (the most stupid of all mammals) herded by a good shepherd, which is implicit in all the tales of the New Testament, although most bluntly expressed in another gospel, which reports Jesus as promising that after he has tortured and butchered the more civilized populations of the earth, there will be a Resurrection, and his ovine pets will pop out of their graves, all of the same age, all of the same sex, all of the same stature, and all having indistinguishable features, so that they will be as identical as the bees in a swarm."

"Although the "Liberal" and Marxist cults have doctrinal differences as great as those that separate Lutherans from Baptists, they are basically the same superstition, and whether or not we should call them religions depends on whether we restrict the word to belief in supernatural persons or extend it to include all forms of blind faith based on emotional excitement instead of observed facts and reason. When those "atheistic" cults scream out their hatred of "Fascists" and "Nazis," they obviously must believe that those wicked persons are possessed of the Devil and should therefore be converted or exterminated to promote holiness and love. And when they see "racists," who impiously substitute fact and reason for unthinking faith in approved fairy stories, their lust to extirpate evil is as great as that of the Christian mob that dragged the fair and too intelligent Hypatia from her carriage and lovingly used oyster shells to scrape the flesh from her bones while she was still alive."

"With very few exceptions, the anti-Christians, no doubt unwittingly, retained in their minds a large part of Christian doctrine, and they even revived the most poisonous elements of the primitive Bolshevism of Antiquity, which had been attenuated or held in abeyance by the established churches in the great days of Christendom. And today, professed atheists do not think it odd that, on all social questions, they are in substantial agreement with the howling dervishes and evangelical shamans who, subsidized with lavish publicity by the Organized Jewry who control the boob-tubes and other means of communication, greedily participate in the current drive to reduce Americans to total imbecility with every kind of irrational hoax."

-- Oswald Spengler

We can witness this statement with the open banner of Christian Communism:
"Christian communists seek to achieve large-scale social change, however. Some believe that, rather than attempting to transform the politics and economics of an entire country, Christians should instead establish communism at a local or regional level only."

The Latin American branch of Christian Communist Liberation Theology, according to theologians such as Leonardo Boff; is rooted in the concept that "prudence is the understanding of situations of radical crisis". Among Christian Communists, Historical Materialism is utilised as a methodology of analysis to define the nature of the crisis in question as a product of political-economic dynamics and modalities derived from the workings of what is termed "the late capitalist/imperialist mode of production". According to this subset of Liberation Theology, the challenge for the Christian Communist is then to define what it means (in context of "a concrete analysis of the concrete social reality"), to affirm a "preferential option for the poor and oppressed" as Praxis (active theory),and as commanded by an ethics allegedly "rooted in the beatidic teachings of Jesus".

Christian Communist Liberation Theology is not about evangelization per se, but rather about developing an Orthopraxis (ethical action; The condition of coming to the light by doing the works of God), that aims to reconcile the "Beatidic Ethics" of Jesus, as expoused in the Sermon on the Mount; with existing social struggles against what is termed "neo-colonialism" or "Late Capitalism". Both Christian Communism and Liberation Theology stress "orthopraxis" over "orthodoxy". A narrative of the nature of contemporary social struggles is developed via "materialist analysis" utilising historiographic concepts developed by Karl Marx. A concrete example are the Paraguayan Sin Tierra (landless) movement, who engage in direct land seizures and the establishment of socialized agricultural cooperative production in asentamientos. The contemporary Paraguayan Sin Tierra operate in a very similar manner as that of the reformation era Diggers. For Camilo Torres (the founder of the Colombian guerrilla group E.L.N.), developing this Orthopraxis meant celebrating the Catholic Eucharist only among those engaged in armed struggle against the army of the Colombian state, while fighting alongside them.

Christian communists hold the Biblical verses in Acts 2 and 4 as evidence that the first Christians lived in a communist society. Thomas Wharton Collens' Preaching is a good description of biblical sources being used with the goal of a common-property society; Prof. José P. Miranda, "Comunismo en la Biblia" (1981), translated as, "Communism in the Bible" (Maryknoll, N.Y.: Orbis Books, 1982).

But, in addition, they also cite numerous other Biblical passages which, in their view, support the idea that communism is the most ethical social system and that it is inescapably constitutive of the kingdom of God on earth. The most often quoted of these Biblical citations are taken from the three synoptic Gospels, which describe the life and ministry of Jesus.

One of Jesus' most famous remarks regarding the wealthy can be found in Matthew 19:16–24 (the same event is also described in Mark 10:17–25 and Luke 18:18–25, and the metaphor of a camel going through the eye of a needle is common to both Matthew and Luke).

21 Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me. 22 But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions. 23 Then said Jesus unto his disciples, Verily I say unto you, That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven. 24 And again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

Jesus also described "money changers" (i.e. those engaged in currency exchange) as "thieves" and chased them out of the Temple in Jerusalem. This is described in Matthew 21:12–14, Mark 11:15, and John 2:14–16.

In addition, communistic attitudes and implications can be found in Leviticus 25:35–38: Most significantly, this is part of the Law of Moses, and as such is commandment rather than exhortation or airing of opinion. This fact bears heavily upon subsequent discussion of the question of compulsory or voluntary relinquishing of riches, either as a possible entry requirement to Christian grace or as a means of achieving divine intentions for human social order. 5

Christianity, Communism, the Jews and the Bible

In exposing the Holy Bible as a book of Jewish witchcraft, always remember...the Jews are extremely clever and they take control of both sides; both opposing sides, which they pretend to be fighting each other, but underneath it all, they are working for their agenda of world enslavement. Just as many xian churches, particularly the Vatican, pretend to be against and fighting communism, unbeknownst to the populace, they are working FOR communism, the nazarene taught nothing but communism, his sermons, and even his life- quite like Karl Marx himself- lazy, and lived off of the charity of others like a parasite. The USSR made a show of persecuting a number of Jews [they scream the loudest], when millions of innocent Gentiles were tortured to death, but this Jewish persecution is only for show, and they do not care if they have to sacrifice some of their own to reach their goal of world enslavement and domination. For example, Josef Stalin [real name Josef Dugasvilli, the meaning of the Georgian surname Dugasvilli is "Son of a Jew"], claimed to be anti-Semitic, but given his second wife was also Jewish [as were his children], and his communist heroes such as Vladimir Lenin and the other scum he was directly involved with, any idiot can see through these lies, which again, are there only to fool the masses. Nearly all of the entire communist leadership and KGB were Jews and/or married to Jews and lived extremely well while the working classes were brutalized beyond the imagination. This did not just include the USSR, but all other communist countries as well. Prior to the fall of the “Iron Curtain” the USSR would also publicly support any country that was against Israel; pretending to be enemies with Israel, which beneath it all, is not the case, as both work together for the same agenda. KNOW THIS AND BE ONTO THEIR TACTICS- NEVER LET THEM FOOL YOU!

As I have state before and will again... just how can Christianity really be at odds with the Jews, when every single page of that stinking bible has the word "Jew" "Jews" Israel" and other kosher crap on it and above all, the nazarene is Jewish from birth to death. Given the spiritual energies put into Christianity by the ignorant followers, for centuries, the Jews have an endless supply to do as they please with. This is their bulwark and their root. This is why the bible is so full of numbers, specific verses [which vibrated in Hebrew are their mantras] and given the bible is planted in nearly every home in the world, Christianity is relentlessly pushed and coerced onto people [love jewsus or burn for eternity], the bible acts as a subliminal medium; a receiver for their workings. Bible verses are memorized by many Christians. What this does further, is it creates a very powerful link in the minds of many for which the Jews work their curses and their spells for attracting copious amounts of wealth. Even their bible states regarding the Jews “Thou shalt prosper.” YOU PAY AND SACRIFICE FOR THIS!

The "Holy Bible" serves as a link, as I mentioned in the above for their subliminal workings. This is no different from having a bible in your home. This creates a subliminal tie in. I do know since my last article “the Holy Bible, a Book of Jewish Witchcraft”; I was very aware of the magnitude of this article and given it hits at their most sensitive secrets, root, and their total bulwark, through Satan, we have exposed them.

Satan has protected me. If he hadn’t, myself along with others who are working very hard, would already be dead. We are working for a higher purpose; for a better world through Satan. We have identified and exposed the problems. The Jewish power structure works relentlessly to destroy our civil rights and freedoms so that they can enslave us all. Jewish greed knows no bounds. Few Americans here know just how brutal life is and has been in many other countries. The Jews are working very hard to change this. In the early 1990’s, after the fall of the USSR, many cutthroat Jewish communists emigrated to the USA and have been working for the destruction of our country ever since, and this can be blatantly seen in the many open violations of our constitution and how our legal system has been rapidly deteriorating. The USA is the last power on this earth that still has some laws protecting freedom of speech and the press, though these are very insecure and many of us are suppressed and harassed, such as what is now happening in the JoS e-groups. If the USA goes down, any smaller countries that are somewhat free will also go down and be under the yoke of communist control. Many of you know it is a felony crime to deny or question the Jewish holoco$t in many countries...resulting in an automatic prison sentence. Everything the Jew is and does, is blamed on Gentiles. This creates confusion, and makes for an effective diversion and distraction. The same is with Satan...everything their Christian “God” is and does, they heap the blame on Satan and the Powers of Hell. Even though the truth is before them in the “Holy Bible” and one can see that jewhova was a “murderer and a liar from the beginning” one only needs to look through the Old Testament and also that foul nazarene ordering his followers to commit both theft and murder:

Luke 19:27; Luke 6: 1-5; Luke 19: 29-35; and break other commandments: Matthew 10: 34-36.

Christians and others cannot see this, as they have been deluded under a powerful spell. Satan, himself told me some time ago how horribly Gentiles have suffered under Jewish communism. I have written several articles regarding the slave labor situation in Red China. This brutality is what Jewish communism is all about. Please read through and download the following PDFs. The first one is very large, but the second pdf [the one exposing the phony holoco$t] can be downloaded and easily distributed through copy & paste, uploading it to your website, distributing it through personal e-mails to people you know who may be interested, and through copying it to disc.

THE REAL CONCENTRATION CAMPS- ALL RUN BY JEWS!
[Slave Labor in Soviet Russia]pdf

The Real Holocaust pdf

Quote from the Jewish Talmud:
Nidrasch Talpioth, p. 225-L: "Jehovah created the non-Jew in human form so that the Jew would not have to be served by beasts. The non-Jew is consequently an animal in human form, and condemned to serve the Jew day and night."

Unless each and every one of us fights for our freedoms, they will all be taken away. As with the first pdf, on the Soviet slave labor, one can see the same identical thing occurring in Red China and in other parts of the world- disposable human beings; systematically broken, worked to death and replaced by more Gentiles. Even a little research blatantly reveals the Jews are and have always been behind this, and that the bible is nothing more than a blueprint for Jewish communism in its teachings and indoctrinations [both the Old and New Testaments], along with the all important purpose of working powerful spells for the Jews to profit tremendously. Satan pulls off the drapes in our minds and wakes us up to the truth so we are aware and can see. The Christians and related ignorant masses are under a most powerful spell. That spell must be broken.

Mind Control Programming and the Bible

by
High Priest Don

The article below has been updated in some areas. For more information, please read the "Sermon on 666" following this article, below.

Note with the fall of the Soviet Jewion. The Jews have been working to rebuild the Christian religion in the failure of their atheist Christian program. This allows them to maintain strict control over the populace. From which they will in time regain the former control they once had.

We can see in the link how the Jews use subliminal programming on America that connects into their spell book the Bible on the populace:
1960'S SUBLIMINAL MESSAGES (in slow motion)[Youtube video]

2 Corinthians
12:16 But be it so, I did not myself burden you. But, being crafty, I caught you with deception.

Note in the above youtube video, the Jews are using the terms with God repeatedly:

"God is real, God is watching" = 22 letters

"Believe in government God" =22 letters

"Obey Consume Obey Consume" = 22 letters

According to Christian and Jewish mysticism, 22 is the number of the Hebrew Alphabet is the number of the Master builder, infinity and completion, Quintessence [spirit which is God in the universal sense in the Hermetic teachings] the mind of God and God. The Nazarene utters the 7 last words of finality, on the cross which is the phase at the start of Psalms 22. It equals the 12 Zodiac signs and 10 planets in the Tarot of which such alphabet is assigned. Revelation the last book of the Bible also has 22 chapters.

The number 22 corresponds to the World trump card of the Tarot, indicating completion. This indicates the enemy completing their goal of world conquest and domination through communism.

More on this important subject in the following article:
The Holy Bible: A Book of Jewish Witchcraft

Psalm 66:7
He [God] rules forever by his power, his eyes watch the nations-- let not the rebellious rise up against him.

The book of psalms is the 19th book of the bible. Note the verse, 66:7; which also adds up to 19 [6 + 6 + 7 = 19]. 19 = 19 = 38 and 3 + 8 = 11, which is a number of downfall, so the above verse not only threatens against rebellion, but given the numbers, it subliminally points out that rebellion will result in down fall.

1 Samuel 12:15
15 But if ye will not obey the voice of the Lord, but rebel against the commandment of the Lord, then shall the hand of the Lord be against you, as it was against your fathers.

1 Samuel is the 9th book of the bible. 9 + 12 + 15 = 36; 3 + 6 = 9.
9 is the number of finality and Judgment, the power of God itself.

Colossians 3:22
Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh; not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but in singleness of heart, fearing God

Colossians is the 51st book of the bible. [5 + 1 = 6]. The Jews use the number 6 extensively, such as in their "six million" phony holoco$t. In the bible, the number 6 is the number of man without any spiritual power. The number 7 has to do with the 7 chakras and spiritual power emanating from these and spiritual perfection. 6 falls short. 6 is also a number of hard labor. Work was done for 6 days and the 7th was a day of rest.

"The number 6 is stamped on all that is connected with human labor. We see it stamped upon his measures, which he uses in his labor, and on the time during which he labors. And we see this from the very beginning."

The Jewish emphasis on and use of the number 6, sets up a vibration on the astral for the advancement of their agenda, their communist state and world order. Communism is slave labor. With the communist state, the jews become "god" and all spiritual knowledge is replaced with material atheism.

The above verse of the 51st book of the bible [1 + 5 = 6] advocates slave labor. Taken further, the verse 3:22 can be multiplied 3 x 22 = 66; the total number of books in the bible, indicating completion of the Jewish communist slave labor state and their new world order.

Romans 13: 1-7

1 Everyone must submit himself to the governing authorities, for there is no authority except that which God has established. The authorities that exist have been established by God.
2 Consequently, he who rebels against the authority is rebelling against what God has instituted, and those who do so will bring judgment on themselves.
3 For rulers hold no terror for those who do right, but for those who do wrong. Do you want to be free from fear of the one in authority? Then do what is right and he will commend you.
4 For he is God's servant to do you good. But if you do wrong, be afraid, for he does not bear the sword for nothing. He is God's servant, an agent of wrath to bring punishment on the wrongdoer.
5 Therefore, it is necessary to submit to the authorities, not only because of possible punishment but also because of conscience.
6 This is also why you pay taxes, for the authorities are God's servants, who give their full time to governing.
7 Give everyone what you owe him: If you owe taxes, pay taxes; if revenue, then revenue; if respect, then respect; if honor, then honor.

The Founders wanted the Great Seal put upon the dollar for a good reason, but they never put anything about the Jewish "God" on there. Reference to the Jewish "God" was put on American currency by Jewish President Dwight David Eisenhower.
"July 30th, 1956, two years after pushing to have the phrase "under God" inserted into the pledge of allegiance, President Dwight D. Eisenhower signs a law officially declaring "In God We Trust" to be the nation's official motto. The law, P.L. 84-140, also mandated that the phrase be printed on all American paper currency." 1 Eisenhower was a Jew by his own confession; the name Eisenhower is taken from Eisenhauer a Jewish surname.

"In Eisenhower's West Point Military Academy graduating class yearbook, published in 1915, Eisenhower is identified as a "terrible Swedish Jew."

It's not a surprise that the Kosher owned White House with the President Franklin Delano Roosevelt who himself was of Dutch-Jewish ancestry and his staff read like a synagogue list.

"In 1943, Washington not only transferred Col. Eisenhower to Europe but promoted him over more than 30 more experienced senior officers to five star general and placed him in charge of all the US forces in Europe.

This great "General" who hid in fear pissing himself when it was believed a tiny unarmed, German Commando unit was after him during the war, personally ordered the murder of over 1.7 million German soldiers after the war was over in his P.O.W death camps. Their only crime was defending their nation and people. Many of the above where not any older then 15 years of age. This is another blatant example of Pure Talmudic hate.
For the full article "In 'Eisenhower's Death Camps': A U.S. Prison Guard Remembers, click here

"In God We Trust" has 12 letters: Twelve is a perfect number, signifying perfection of government, or of governmental perfection. There are 66 books in the Bible, which add to 12 [6 + 6 = 12].

The word God also appears 4473 in the Bible adding up to the sum of 9. 9 is the number of finality and Judgment, the power of God itself which is wrapped up with this:

The Judgments of "God" in Haggai 1:11 are enumerated in nine particulars:
"And I called for a drought upon the land, and upon the mountains, and upon the corn, and upon the new wine, and upon the oil, and upon that which the ground bringeth forth, and upon men, and upon cattle, and upon all the labor of the hands."

Haggai is the 37th book of the bible. 3 + 7 = 10; so Haggai 1 would be 11; here again, we have 11 11.

"The law was signed by President Eisenhower on July 30, 1956, and the motto was progressively added to paper money over a period from 1957 to 1966. (Public Law 84-851)[18] The United States Code at 36 U.S.C. § 302, now states: "'In God we trust' is the national motto."2

One can see that money is a powerful way to inject something into the unconscious of the public mind:

9/11 $20 Bill Trick [Youtube video]

Here is more information on subliminals in the Media leading up 911:
WHAT? ...Hollywood Predicted 9:11??? [Youtube video]

Bluntly here:

9/11 foreshadowed in Super Mario Bros. The Movie [Youtube video]

And we can witness how the Jewish powers inject their "God" into the mass mind again: "Eisenhower signed the bill into law on Flag Day, June 14, 1954. Eisenhower stated "From this day forward, the millions of our school children will daily proclaim in every city and town, every village and rural school house, the dedication of our nation and our people to the Almighty.... In this way we are reaffirming the transcendence of religious faith in America's heritage and future; in this way we shall constantly strengthen those spiritual weapons which forever will be our country's most powerful resource, in peace or in war.

The phrase "Under God" was incorporated into the Pledge of Allegiance June 14, 1954, by a Joint Resolution of Congress amending §4 of the Flag Code enacted in 1942."3

In closing, many people in the JoS e-groups have mentioned how they have seen certain numbers repeatedly. This can be a certain number recurring on a license plate of a vehicle, or on a digital clock, in an advertisement, and in many other places. Sometimes this can even occur for days, but this alone and by itself is harmless. When we are aware of certain numbers, this establishes a subliminal vibration and before we know it, we begin to see these same numbers frequently in our daily lives. This aspect is quite innocent and oftentimes meaningless, but in the above article, the perpetrators are fully aware of the power of numbers and they enforce this to establish their magickal workings in reality, via the Judeo/Christian Bible. This is why many Christians are practically coerced into memorizing bible verses, as this imbeds a subconscious link. For more on this:

SERMON ON 666

As I have already written two sermons concerning biblical numerology and how the bible is a book of Jewish witchcraft, here is more on the numbers...

The bible has a total of 66 books. As most of you already know, the jewish powers always emphasize the number 6, as with their 6 million phony holoco$t and May Day, important communist holiday [May 1st; 5/1; 5 + 1 = 6], and many more. Be aware of this, especially when watching the news and reading newspapers, magazines, etc. The Jews always emphasize the number 6. This is also corresponds to the kabbalistic Saturn square, which adds up to 15 on all sides, even the diagonal. In the bible, the number 6 is the number of humanity without any spiritual power. The number 7 has to do with the 7 chakras and spiritual power emanating from these and spiritual perfection. 6 falls short. 6 is also a number of hard labor. Work was done for 6 days and the 7th was a day of rest. "The number 6 is stamped on all that is connected with human labor. We see it stamped upon his measures, which he uses in his labor, and on the time during which he labors. And we see this from the very beginning." The number 6 also has to do with slavery:

Colossians 3:22
Servants, obey in all things your masters according to the flesh; not with eyeservice, as menpleasers; but in singleness of heart, fearing God.

The above verse of the 51st book of the bible [1 + 5 = 6] advocates slave labor. Taken further, the verse 3:22 can be multiplied 3 x 22 = 66; the total number of books in the bible, indicating completion of the Jewish communist slave labor state and their new world order.

The truth is... Satan's number 666 is the number for the kabbalistic square of the Sun and indicates spiritual power and advancement. Nearly all of the ancient Pagan religions emphasized "worship" of the Sun. The code word "worship" in truth translates into intense focus upon, as in deep meditation. In addition, 6 x 6 x 6 = 216, which has to do with certain powerful nadis within the soul. The solar chakra is the most powerful and important chakra of the soul and has to do with working the magnum opus. The solar chakra is the Grail chakra; the cup that holds the elixir of life secreted by the pineal gland. The bible with 66 books falls short of realizing the godhead and works to keep humanity spiritually and psychologically enslaved.

According to the bible, the number 12 is supposed to be a perfect number, with the number 13 being of Satan. As human beings, we have a total of 13 major chakras, not 12. 13 IS one of Satan's numbers [1 + 3 = 4]. Again, the number 12 falls short. In ancient times, there was a 13th sign of the zodiac. 12 also relates to our Saturn centered time; 60 seconds within a minute, 60 minutes within an hour and 24 [2 + 4 = 6] within a day. Saturn, as I already wrote in the above vibrates to the number 6. Saturn is the malefic planet of suffering, hard work, misery, misfortune, and loss. Wherever Saturn is placed in one's astrology chart, this is where one will suffer in life. The Jewish powers designate 12 as being the number for "perfect government," in other words, humanity being spiritually helpless, falling short of spiritual power and attainment, and being subject to enslavement through the government and total domination at the hands of the jews who run that government. The subliminal vibrations and messages in the bible set humanity up for this. In contrast, the 13-month lunar calendar is based upon the natural time of the earth. We are all living out of sync with the natural harmony of the earth in regards to our calendar and time.

The Holy Bible: A Book of Jewish Witchcraft

There is nothing "holy" or anything for spiritual advancement or the betterment of humanity in the bible. Look to the numbers, the books, the scriptures, and the contents and you will see it for what it is really for; it is a book of Jewish witchcraft, of which they use liberally way at the top, to advance their agenda and to enslave the masses. The whole point of this article is to explain in every day simple terms on how they do this.

For those of you who are unfamiliar with spirituality and the workings of the mind, known as "witchcraft," I am going to explain this so you can understand how this works. Look around you, everything you see, your computer screen, your chair, your bed, your furniture, the cars outside, buildings, windows...everything you see was once someone's idea before it materialized into a physical form in reality. Now, I also want to add in some instances, such as with science, for example storms manifest on their own; hot humid air colliding with cold, dry air for example, but the majority of everything here was once someone's idea.

Most of you are familiar with the cone shaped hats that classic wizards and witches wear. These often have stars drawn on them and such. The symbolic meaning of the cone is energy welling up to the top of the head. This is also symbolized by the Egyptian pyramids. Energy is needed to manifest an idea into reality. Energy is also like water in that it will take the easiest way out if not thoroughly directed. A conscious witchcraft working needs energy and the focus of the mind. The more important the working, the more it may take planning before doing it. By planning, I mean a date where the planets are supportive of the working [hence the stars on the cone-shaped hats], along with timing, and knowledge. The more forces working in harmony to support the spell, the better, especially the numbers, as life is made up of numbers...time.

The working is empowered by the right [female] side of the brain. This side of the brain rules over the subconscious mind and is also the passive side of the brain. The left side of the brain is the male, logical side that directs the working. The more energy that is directed toward a working, the more likely it will manifest in reality. Little things do not require massive amounts of energy, but controlling the world and what I reveal later in this article, do require the participation of the subconscious [female side of the brain] mass mind. The populace is unaware of this. This is the reason a Bible is in nearly every home, as it acts as a subconscious receiver and it has subliminal power, a connection with the numbers, the verses and given the centuries of massive amounts of psychic energy being poured into it from believers, it has plenty of power. Believers subconsciously tie into the energy and unbeknownst to most, can be controlled this way. This is only a brief summary of how the powers of the mind and soul work. To learn more, study up on the subconscious mind, especially how some people are able to obtain the entire contents of a book by just holding the book and focusing on it, without reading it. This should give you some idea of the power the Bible has. This is another reason why Bible verses are memorized, as these become embedded in the subconscious, and this bleeds over into the mass mind, making the mass mind a powerful tool in working a spell.

In addition, many of you are familiar with subliminal messages. Most of us have heard or read about how popular advertisements, music, and other media use subliminal messages that are not usually detected by the conscious mind. We are unaware of them, but they do work and they do influence people. At the end of this article are links to Youtube videos that further demonstrate this. To further confuse and misdirect the populace, these workings such as the 9-11 are blamed upon Satan, but with a little research and study, you will find the opposite to be true. All of these are of the Judeo/Christian Bible. This is no different from the phony Jewish "Holocaust" Lie of the "six million." Note how the number six is frequently used [more on this below]. The endless media publicity and otherwise this receives, acts as a major distraction and diversion away from the real atrocities, mass muder, torture and brutality committed by the Jewish communist program.

Some of you may remember here how after the 9/11 incident, many people were folding $20.00 bills a certain way, as the twin towers could be seen in flames, given the bill was folded, then viewed a certain way. The $20.00 bill is the most commonly used of US currency. Shortly thereafter the 9/11 incident, the $20.00 bills were very rapidly replaced with a new version. They all disappeared very quickly. The excuse used before the public was that they could be easily counterfeited. The real reason was because of the design of the bill and the subliminal vibrations it carried.

The number eleven is a number of chaos, destruction, and disintegration, according to the bible. Because that filthy Bible is in nearly every home, so many people adhere to Christian teachings, and put their faith in it, like the $20.00 bill, it is a very powerful subliminal tool, even more so than the $20.00 bill, as it has been around much longer, and is international. Thus, when Jews at the highest levels work their witchcraft in groups, they use the numbers and verses in the Bible to accomplish their ends. From what I understand, some of the verses are vibrated in Hebrew in boustrophedon, meaning read in zigzag. They also bob back and forth when they "pray" in groups.

The numbers 10 and 12 in the bible are supposed to be perfect numbers.

The 12 sons of Jacob minus Joseph ["one is not" - Genesis 42:13] without whom the other 11 would not have survived.
Note* Genesis is the first book of the bible; Genesis = 1 + 42 + 13 = 56, which reduces to 11. This is in addition to the verse itself.

King Jehoiakim [2 Chronicles 36:5-6] reigned 11 years before Nebuchadnezzar carried him away into captivity [his downfall and the end of his rule].

King Zedekiah [Jeremiah 52:1-11] reigned 11 years before Nebuchadnezzar imprisoned him, murdered his family, and mutilated him.

In the 11th year of the Babylonian captivity Ezekiel prophesied of the fall and the destruction of Tyrus, [Ezekiel 26:1-5].

In the 11th year of the Babylonian captivity Ezekiel prophesied of the fall and the destruction of Egypt [Ezekiel 30:20-26].
Note also in the above scriptures, if you do some more reading on them, they all rebelled against the Jews and were punished for it. The above serves as an example...there are many more.

Now, the number 9 is a number of endings and finality. Note how the biblical verses that emphasized the number 11, all related to destruction and fall.

I will not make this article too long, as I will have more detailed examples and such in the near future. The book of Job [suffering] is used to curse their enemies in many circumstances. The bombing of Dresden was carried out on the Christian holiday of Ash Wednesday and reduced the city to ashes. I could cite many more examples, but taking a look at how similarities all tie in, we have:

On 15 March 2004, there were exactly 911 days between the Twin Towers attack of September 11, 2001 and the bomb attacks on the trains in Madrid Spain on March 11, 2004.

Madrid, Spain has 11 letters.

New York City has 11 letters.

The American attacks occurred on September 11th 2001.

The Madrid attacks occurred on March 11th 2004.

There were 911 days between the American and Madrid attacks [9 + 1 + 1 = 11].

The Madrid attack occurred on the 11th Thursday of the year.

September 11th is the 254th day of the year [2 + 5 + 4 = 11].

After September 11th there are 111 days left to the end of the year.

September 11 has 9 letters and 2 numbers [9 + 2 = 11]

11 March 2004 has 5 letters and 6 numbers [5 + 6 = 11].

Each building had 110 stories [11 x 10 = 110].

The Madrid train attacks left 191 people confirmed dead [1 + 9 + 1 = 11].

On September 11, 2002 the names of the 2,801 victims of the World Trade Center attacks were read aloud from Ground Zero [2 + 8 + 0 + 1 = 11].

The Twin Towers standing side by side look like the number 11.

The first plane to hit the towers was Flight 11.

Flight 11 had 92 on board [9 + 2 = 11].

Flight 11 had 11 crew members.

Flight 77 hit the Pentagon [11 x 7 = 77].

Flight 77 had 65 on board [6 + 5 = 11].

911 is the number to call in case of emergency [9 + 1 + 1 = 11].

New York was the 11th State added to the Union.

Manhattan Island was discovered on September 11, 1609 by Henry Hudson -11 letters.

Saudi Arabia has 11 letters.

Afghanistan has 11 Letters.
Note how the vibration of the number 11 ties all of this in with the 9. Astral energy seeks the easiest way out and like attracts like. It is no wonder that Freemasons, who are controlled by Jewish powers, place their hands upon the bible during their initiation. Given every page of that evil Bible has the word "Jew" "Jews" "Israel" "Jerusalem" and related; the Nazarene and company- all Jews and given the Jews proclaim they are the "Chosen of God" and they are held in the highest esteem and exalted in the bible, no wonder they are so powerful and have secretly ruled over the world, unbeknownst to the masses, for centuries.

Satan, himself also showed me how these workings are like a domino effect. Once something is set into motion on the astral, the energies put into motion seek out like energies and things tie in. With the strange and eerie coincidence of the numbers [this is only a sample, there are many more], this reveals this is not a random act, but a dead giveaway that this was an occult working which was deliberate.

I would also like to add the Jewish emphasis on the number 6. Please do not confuse this with "666" which has an entirely different meaning.

Just be aware and you will notice what I am saying here. For example, the six million for that holoco$t hoax, Jewish communism has its important holiday May 1st; 5/1; 5 + 1 = 6. With this I could go on and on. Israel has 6 letters. Pay attention to the news and also history; anything connected with the Jews and you will see what I mean. In the bible, the number six is the number of man without any spiritual power. The number 7 has to do with the 7 chakras and spiritual power emanating from these and spiritual perfection. 6 falls short. 6 is also a number of hard labor. Work was done for 6 days and the 7th was a day of rest.

"The number 6 is stamped on all that is connected with human labor. We see it stamped upon his measures, which he uses in his labor, and on the time during which he labors. And we see this from the very beginning."

The Jewish emphasis on and use of the number 6, sets up a vibration on the astral for the advancement of their agenda, their communist state and world order. Communism is slave labor. With the communist state, the Jews become "god" and all spiritual knowledge is replaced with material atheism. Only the Jews at the top know the secrets of the occult and they use their curses and spells on an unknowing, and helpless populace to whatever suits them. Christianity in more ways than one is a stepping off point for communism. In addition, Christianity has made so-called "religion" into such a totally repulsive and vile concept, that many who are unknowing, gladly accept and promote atheism.

In closing, like everything else, this is all blamed upon Satan and our Pagan Gentile Gods by ignorant brainwashed fools. Most Christians do not have the intelligence or the strength of character to delve into the occult. There are also scriptures in that bible that the Jews use to curse and frighten outsiders away from really getting into the occult. I remember when I was new to Satanism, I had a bad experience, but this only drove me on and heightened my curiosity. One cannot be afraid. The Jews and their alien cohorts have used fear as a tool for control for centuries. In communist countries, the populace lives in a constant state of terror. This is also in league with the bible, as is everything else regarding Jewish communism.

I will have more information and many more examples on how the bible is nothing more than a book of Jewish witchcraft, hence the numbers; biblical numerology, and how the bible is continuously pushed upon the populace, it is in nearly every home, in hotel rooms and everywhere else. Everyone is familiar with it, and knows what it claims to be.

The world needs to wake up. Please feel free to educate others, distribute this and any other JoS articles and to work hard for Satan. Satan means "truth" in Sanskrit.

911 WAS ALSO A SPIRITUAL ATTACK [TOWER OF BABEL]

Below is a direct quote from the Torah:

(Genesis 11:9) Therefore the name of it was called Bavel, because the LORD confused the language of all the earth, there. From there, the LORD scattered them abroad on the surface of all the earth.”

NOTE: 11:9

Now, in the USA here, our civilian dates are month/day, but worldwide and with the military, it is day/month. So with most countries outside the US, it would be 11/9, not 9/11. This was also a spiritual attack, to divide, confuse, destroy communications.

More in the scriptures preceding this:

(GEN 11:6) The LORD said, "Behold, they are one people, and they have all one language; and this is what they begin to do. Now nothing will be withheld from them, which they intend to do.

(GEN 11:7) Come, let's go down, and there confuse their language, that they may not understand one another's speech."

The Tower of Babel has to do with raising the Serpent [building a tower is an analogy]. With the Serpentine Power, telepathic communication and all knowledge are possible and with telepathic communication, there are no language barriers, as the communication is filtered down through the pineal gland from the communicator into whatever language the receiver mainly speaks and understands. This is why some telepathic communications can be 'off' sometimes. Specific words don't always get filtered perfectly for one, due to an under-activated pineal gland, and for another, there are sometimes major differences in languages. In some languages there is no equivalent expression or word to convey what is meant in another language.

Every time throughout recorded history when humanity has advanced to a certain level of knowledge, that knowledge has been systematically destroyed. This is most notable with the fall of the Roman Empire, where Europe regressed into the Dark Ages for 1,000 years. After the Jews were expelled from Western Europe, then the Renaissance emerged, bringing enlightenment. The Jews who migrated to the east and also to Sicily [especially after being expelled from Spain], wreaked havoc on the Gentiles of the east [eventual communism in Russia and of course, the same Jewish ritual murders, where the Gentile populace responded understandably with pogroms] along with establishing organized crime in Sicily.

Most people are fully aware that Jews control Hollywood and the media.

WHAT? ...Hollywood Predicted 9:11??? [Youtube video]
The above video is proof that the so-called "prophesies" in the Bible are nothing but a hoax. The Bible is not the "Book of God" but is a work of the Jews, of which they use subliminally to carry out their curses, some of which are centuries old. One only has to be knowledgable about the workings of the mind and of witchcraft to see this and to fully understand.

The Christian Mass and How it Ties into Jewish Ritual Murder

Due to centuries of the vehement suppression of spiritual knowledge, most people are not only unaware of, but also they are unable to see certain truths. This is the enemy's way of conquering; by creating a blind spot on the soul, where one is spiritually disarmed; the so-called 'sixth-sense' is lacking in most people and in many others, it is completely absent.

Millions of unfortunate people are and have been deceived by the Christian and Muslim programs; both of these whose sole intention is to destroy spiritual knowledge and replace it with lies for the destruction of humanity and every other living creature on this earth.

The Judeo/Christian bible warns its believers regarding the powers of the mind and of 'witchcraft' so that one is unable to see through the blatant lies that are right there every day.

The Jews who are parasites by nature have always used Gentiles as their spiritual hosts; to feed from...no different from the alien greys who use their collection of souls to feed from. Many of you are already familiar with 'Jewish Ritual Murder.' During the times of Jewish holidays, top rabbis will abduct Gentile children and use them in their ritual sacrifices to Jewhova. The child is taken to a secret back room of a synagogue, tied to a cross and then tortured to death with the blood drained from the four corners [hands and feet], while the child is still alive and aware, and then this blood is drunk ritually by the rabbis. This heinous act has been performed repeatedly for centuries and this is why the Jews have endured endless pogroms [where Gentiles have massacred entire villages of Jews], have been forcibly expelled from nearly every country of the world, except for the USA, and have been hated to an extreme by every Gentile race. This is just one...I could go on and on endlessly of the crimes that the Jews have committed ad nauseum, but the purpose of this sermon is how all of this ties into the christian mass/church service. For more about this practice, 2000 Years of Jewish Ritual Murder and Jewish Ritual Murder

There was a title of a book I noted on a shelf in the public library; written by a Jewish rabbi and the title was 'Thou Shalt Prosper.' This is also in the Bible. This title was in reference to the Jews. Nearly everyone is aware of the unbelievable material wealth, success, and power this race has had for centuries. This directly results from their abuse of occult power, and all of this ties directly into Christianity.

As I mentioned many times before, the Judeo/Christian Bible is a book of Jewish witchcraft. The verses, their numbers, and so forth. In order to know this, one must know how witchcraft, words of power, and most of all, the subliminal and the powers of the mind work to bring the operator's intentions to manifest in reality.

As with so much of the Jewish workings, the subliminal is used to make the necessary subconscious connection to establish an energy link. One must know about witchcraft and the powers of the mind to know this. This is why the Bible warns and works to frighten Gentiles away from anything really spiritual...'thou shalt not suffer a witch to live' and other crap about 'burning in a lake of fire' etc. In addition, I noted early on that there were curses involved in one using one's powers of the mind to prevent this and to frighten those who scare easily away from this sort of thing.

"Eat me...Drink me."
The entire theme of the Christian mass/church service is that of a simulation of a human sacrifice. Most people cannot see this, nor are they aware of it due to their minds being walled up. The nazarene with every mass/service is crucified in a blood sacrifice to Jewhova. I remember very well the endless repeated phrases used by the priest so that a connection is established 'This is the body of christ' and then that stupid little communion wafer...where the believer eats that 'body of christ.' Now we know the nazarene was nailed to that cross; the four corners, no different from the Gentile children that the Jews use in their sacrifices. This creates the necessary connection that fuels the energies for the Jewish ritual murders, bringing success to the Jewish race, especially that of vast material wealth.

Each and every catholic mass for one [and with protestants, the theme is the same], these same verses are DRUMMED into the minds of the congregation, over and over and over and over and over:

"On the night he was betrayed, he took bread and gave you thanks and praise. He broke the bread, gave it to his disciples, and said:
Take this, all of you, and eat it: this is my body which will be given up for you."

"When supper was ended, he took the cup. Again he gave you thanks and praise, gave the cup to his disciples, and said:
Take this, all of you, and drink from it: this is the cup of my blood."

SEE THE CONNECTION??? THIS IS BLATANTLY A HUMAN SACRIFICE!!

People cannot see this because they have been spiritually blinded. I can see all kinds of things as I have knocked down walls in my mind and I remember just four of weeks ago, when hearing religious xmas songs blasting over the speakers in the store I was in, it was very blatant to me how these deluded Christian fools were singing for their damnation.

To create the necessary distraction and to confuse their victims, the Jews have always pretended to be persecuted by Christians. They pretend to be at odds with Christianity. If one's walls are knocked down, one can see what is there right in front of us every day. The entire Bible has either the word 'Jew' 'Jews' 'Israel' and related written on every page and with all of these, the Jewish people, and their patriarches are honored and exalted. The Bible follows a subliminal theme in that Gentiles are conquered repeatedly in the old testament by the Jews and their god Jewhova. After all of this conquering and enslaving, the nazarene, the long awaited Jewish messiah comes on the scene. Jewish from birth to death; for more on this see Jewish Nazarene.

The Jewish nazarene character was invented from a concept, that of the serpentine witchpower. To read a full article about this, click here. Again, for a working to succeed in many cases, there must be some sort of connection in the mind of the victim. Most Christians cannot see that Jewhova was a 'murderer and a liar' from the beginning. The New Testament goes on with the nazarene then becoming a human sacrifice...murdered and sacrificed to Jewhova, the murderous, bloodthirsty, and sadistic 'father.' In its own twisted way, this translates into the murder of children. Because the mind of a child is in many cases a blank slate in the way of limited personal experiences that shape attitudes and color the personality, children are prime victims. Christianity is notorious for preying upon children as are angels and of course, the filthy kikes. They know they can use the energy of children quite freely, as there is little or no spiritual resistance.

Then, the final cap with all of this is the 'second coming of christ' which is in truth another hoax designed to channel Gentile spiritual energies and beliefs through the mass mind into making the coming of the Jewish messiah into a reality.

Quote from the Jewish Talmud:
Simeon Haddarsen, fol. 56-D: "When the Messiah comes every Jew will have 2800 slaves."

Most people are totally unaware of the above and cannot see this. I already wrote in another sermon concerning how the Jews use occult power:
JoSNewsletter/message/385
Here is an excerpt:

The video below [which I highly recommend everyone sees] is nothing new and blatantly exposes the Jews and how they abuse occult power, the power of suggestion and the subliminal to make the subconscious connection to manifest their workings in reality. The shootings were for the purpose of instituting gun control. Many people such as the author of the video linked below have no idea of the Jewish power, feeding off of and directing the energy that the deluded follwers of the Christian program provide for their Jewish masters, is behind all of this and can only make misguided guesses:
Sandy Hook and Batman shootings announced in Movie Batman and Dark Knight Rise

The Jewish abuse of occult powers has its roots in their gematria. The 911 was another one...very blatant. A co-worker, some years ago, showed me how a $20.00 bill could be folded a certain way so that on the rear of it, the twin towers going up in smoke would appear. Look on the internet for this, I don't have the time to search out the websites that have this. All of a sudden, after the 911 incident, the older version of the $20.00 bills where you could fold it that way, was taken out of circulation. They fed the public the bullshit story that "they were too easy to counterfeit." Well, they disappeared real fast, as too many people knew the deal on how to fold them. The 20 is the most common currency used and circulated in the USA.

Others include presidential assassinations. I did some research on this a few years back. Note about Lincoln and the names, dates, and the numbers and how they all come together in a very creepy way, indicating the use of their version of witchcraft. 911 is another blatant one- the date, the flights, the numbers, such as 'New York City' 11 letters; just do your own research on this.

In closing, the suicidal doctrines and teachings that poverty is a virtue, and the rejection of material wealth, work to ensure that the Jews prosper and that all wealth and power is in their hands. These suicidal teachings are drummed into the minds of Gentiles from a very early age, making sure they take a roothold and will even last for future lifetimes, ensuring poverty.

Quotes from the Jewish talmud:

Seph. Jp., 92, 1: "God has given the Jews power over the possessions and blood of all nations."

Schulchan Aruch, Choszen Hamiszpat 348: "All property of other nations belongs to the Jewish nation, which, consequently, is entitled to seize upon it without any scruples."

Schulchan Aruch, Choszen Hamiszpat 156: "When a Jew has a Gentile in his clutches, another Jew may go to the same Gentile, lend him money and in turn deceive him, so that the Gentile shall be ruined. For the property of a Gentile, according to our law, belongs to no one, and the first Jew that passes has full right to seize it."

Behind it all, the Jews are the ones who push Christianity, though they try to deceive the world into believing otherwise. I see this all the time, as I am very aware of it. Even with small unimportant things as crossword puzzle books, most are authored by Jewish writers and there are endless references to Christianity and that filthy Bible, like everyone is supposed to know those filthy Jewish characters and archetypes by rote. Like this is supposed to be common everyday accepted knowledge.

About this capture

Human Sacrifice in the Bible

Deuteronomy 12:27
And thou shalt offer thy burnt offerings, the flesh and the blood, upon the altar of the LORD thy God: and the blood of thy sacrifices shall be poured out upon the altar of the LORD thy God, and thou shalt eat the flesh.

The Judeo/Christian bible is chock full of blood sacrifice- HUMAN blood sacrifice. Most xians rely on what their preacher has to say and/or are too lazy or mentally challenged to read and study for themselves. How many people bother to REALLY THINK?? In addition to the blatant human blood sacrifices for jehova, bloodbath after bloodbath took place under the direction and orders of this bloodthirsty entity in the form of numerous wars and other acts of inhumanity.

Gentile Holy texts and sacred writings have been replaced with this Jewish invented and written filth. There is nothing spiritual about it, just murder after murder, no different from the Jewish controlled Hollywood and its emphasis on violence, bloodshed, and murder to no end.

Exodus 22:29 “Thou shalt not delay to offer the first of thy ripe fruits, and of thy liquors: the firstborn of thy sons shalt thou give unto me.”

Ezekiel 20:25-26 “Wherefore I gave them also statutes that were not good and judgments whereby they should not live; “
20:26 “And I polluted them in their own gifts in that they caused to pass through the fire all that openeth the womb that I might make them desolate, to the end that they might know that I am the Lord.”

II Samuel 21 is another example of blood sacrifice to appease Jehova.
21:6 Let seven men of his sons be delivered unto us, and we will hang them up unto the Lord in Gib’e-ah of Saul, whom the Lord did choose.
21:9 And he delivered them into the hands of the Gib’e-on-ites, and they hanged them in the hill before the Lord: and they fell all seven together, and were put to death in the days of harvest, in the first days, in the beginning of barley harvest.
21:10 And Riz’pah the daughter of A-i’ah took sackcloth, and spread it for her upon the rock, from the beginning of harvest until water dropped upon them out of heaven, and suffered neither the birds of the air to rest on them by day, nor the beasts of the field by night.

When seven men are murdered in cold blood in order to appease Jehova in hopes that he will end a famine, it can only be called human blood sacrifice.

More Blood Sacrifice:

Numbers 31:25 And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying,
31:26 Take the sum of the prey that was taken, both of man and of beast, thou, and Eleazar the priest, and the chief fathers of the congregation:
31:27 And divide the prey into two parts; between them that took the war upon them, who went out to battle, and between all the congregation:
31:28 And levy a tribute unto the LORD of the men of war which went out to battle: one soul of five hundred, both of the persons, and of the beeves, and of the asses, and of the sheep:
31:29 Take it of their half, and give it unto Eleazar the priest, for an heave offering of the LORD.
31:30 And of the children of Israel's half, thou shalt take one portion of fifty, of the persons, of the beeves, of the asses, and of the flocks, of all manner of beasts, and give them unto the Levites, which keep the charge of the tabernacle of the LORD.
31:31 And Moses and Eleazar the priest did as the LORD commanded Moses.
31:32 And the booty, being the rest of the prey which the men of war had caught, was six hundred thousand and seventy thousand and five thousand sheep,
31:33 And threescore and twelve thousand beeves,
31:34 And threescore and one thousand asses,
31:35 And thirty and two thousand persons in all, of women that had not known man by lying with him.
31:36 And the half, which was the portion of them that went out to war, was in number three hundred thousand and seven and thirty thousand and five hundred sheep:
31:37 And the LORD'S tribute of the sheep was six hundred and threescore and fifteen.
31:38 And the beeves were thirty and six thousand; of which the LORD'S tribute was threescore and twelve.
31:39 And the asses were thirty thousand and five hundred; of which the LORD'S tribute was threescore and one.
31:40 And the persons were sixteen thousand; of which the LORD'S tribute was thirty and two persons.

This excerp was taken from "The Handbook of Jewish Knowledge" by Nathan Ausubel ©1964; pages 302-303

"Jephthah, one of the ruler judges following the conquest of Canaan, had sacrificed his only daughter to the God of Israel in a celebration of a military victory against the Ammonites; Samuel "the seer" had hacked in a sacrificial manner the body of Agag before God; David, the sensitive poet king had handed the seven sons of Saul to the Gibeonites "to hang them up unto God."

An example of this can be seen below, how the verse was changed in Judges 11:39. In the others, the human has been replaced with a "lamb."

Judges 11:34
And Jephthah came to Mizpeh unto his house, and, behold, his daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and with dances: and she was his only child; beside her he had neither son nor daughter.

11:35
And it came to pass, when he saw her, that he rent his clothes, and said, Alas, my daughter! thou hast brought me very low, and thou art one of them that trouble me: for I have opened my mouth unto the LORD, and I cannot go back.
11:36
And she said unto him, My father, if thou hast opened thy mouth unto the LORD, do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth; forasmuch as the LORD hath taken vengeance for thee of thine enemies, even of the children of Ammon.
11:37
And she said unto her father, Let this thing be done for me: let me alone two months, that I may go up and down upon the mountains, and bewail my virginity, I and my fellows.
11:38
And he said, Go. And he sent her away for two months: and she went with her companions, and bewailed her virginity upon the mountains.
11:39
And it came to pass at the end of two months, that she returned unto her father, who did with her according to his vow which he had vowed: and she knew no man. And it was a custom in Israel, 11:40
That the daughters of Israel went yearly to lament the daughter of Jephthah the Gileadite four days in a year.

Just how obvious can this get? In Judges 11:35; Jephthah "rents" his clothes. For those of you who are unfamilair with this term, it is a hebrew and also ancient custom to rent (tear/rip) one's clothes upon the death of a loved one.
"for I have opened my mouth unto the LORD, and I cannot go back." He has made a promise to sacrifice his only daughter to jehova. It is also glaringly apparent jehova demanded this act in exchange for his victory over his enemies and "the children of Ammon" as he stated "I cannot go back."

In Judges 11:37; His daughter states "Let this thing be done for me: let me alone two months, that I may go up and down upon the mountains, and bewail my virginity" "This thing be done for me" and "bewail my virginity" Here it is obvious jehova demanded the sacrifice of a virgin.

Judges 11:39; When she returned to her father "who did with her according to his vow which he had vowed: and she knew no man." and Judges 11:40; "the daughters of Israel went yearly to lament the daughter of Jephthah" This is so obvious, he sacrificed his only virgin daughter to jehova who DEMANDED this act in exchange for his securing a victory for Jephthah.

CANNIBALISM:

Deuteronomy 28:53
And thou shalt eat the fruit of thine own body, the flesh of thy sons and of thy daughters, which the LORD thy God hath given thee, in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee:
28:54
So that the man that is tender among you, and very delicate, his eye shall be evil toward his brother, and toward the wife of his bosom, and toward the remnant of his children which he shall leave:
28:55
So that he will not give to any of them of the flesh of his children whom he shall eat: because he hath nothing left him in the siege, and in the straitness, wherewith thine enemies shall distress thee in all thy gates.
28:56
The tender and delicate woman among you, which would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground for delicateness and tenderness, her eye shall be evil toward the husband of her bosom, and toward her son, and toward her daughter, 28:57
And toward her young one that cometh out from between her feet, and toward her children which she shall bear: for she shall eat them for want of all things secretly in the siege and straitness, wherewith thine enemy shall distress thee in thy gates.
28:58
If thou wilt not observe to do all the words of this law that are written in this book, that thou mayest fear this glorious and fearful name, THE LORD THY GOD;

HUMAN BLOOD WAS NOT ENOUGH, JEHOVA GAVE CLEAR INSTRUCTIONS FOR THE RITUAL SLAUGHTER OF ANIMALS AS WELL:

Exodus 20:24
An altar of earth thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt offerings, and thy peace offerings, thy sheep, and thine oxen: in all places where I record my name I will come unto thee, and I will bless thee.

Exodus 24:4
And Moses wrote all the words of the LORD, and rose up early in the morning, and builded an altar under the hill, and twelve pillars, according to the twelve tribes of Israel.
24:5
And he sent young men of the children of Israel, which offered burnt offerings, and sacrificed peace offerings of oxen unto the LORD.
24:6
And Moses took half of the blood, and put it in basons; and half of the blood he sprinkled on the altar.
24:7
And he took the book of the covenant, and read in the audience of the people: and they said, All that the LORD hath said will we do, and be obedient.
24:8

And Moses took the blood, and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold the blood of the covenant, which the LORD hath made with you concerning all these words.

More instructions from Jehova for blood sacrifice:
Exodus 23:18
Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; neither shall the fat of my sacrifice remain until the morning.

Exodus 29:10 And thou shalt cause a bullock to be brought before the tabernacle of the congregation: and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the bullock.
29:11
And thou shalt kill the bullock before the LORD, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.
29:12
And thou shalt take of the blood of the bullock, and put it upon the horns of the altar with thy finger, and pour all the blood beside the bottom of the altar.
29:13
And thou shalt take all the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul that is above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and burn them upon the altar.
29:14
But the flesh of the bullock, and his skin, and his dung, shalt thou burn with fire without the camp: it is a sin offering.
29:15
Thou shalt also take one ram; and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram.
29:16
And thou shalt slay the ram, and thou shalt take his blood, and sprinkle it round about upon the altar.
29:17
And thou shalt cut the ram in pieces, and wash the inwards of him, and his legs, and put them unto his pieces, and unto his head.
29:18
And thou shalt burn the whole ram upon the altar: it is a burnt offering unto the LORD: it is a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.
29:19
And thou shalt take the other ram; and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram.
29:20
Then shalt thou kill the ram, and take of his blood, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot, and sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.
29:21
And thou shalt take of the blood that is upon the altar, and of the anointing oil, and sprinkle it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon the garments of his sons with him: and he shall be hallowed, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.

29:22
Also thou shalt take of the ram the fat and the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and the right shoulder; for it is a ram of consecration:
29:23
And one loaf of bread, and one cake of oiled bread, and one wafer out of the basket of the unleavened bread that is before the LORD:
29:24
And thou shalt put all in the hands of Aaron, and in the hands of his sons; and shalt wave them for a wave offering before the LORD.
29:25
And thou shalt receive them of their hands, and burn them upon the altar for a burnt offering, for a sweet savour before the LORD: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.
29:26
And thou shalt take the breast of the ram of Aaron's consecration, and wave it for a wave offering before the LORD: and it shall be thy part.
29:27
And thou shalt sanctify the breast of the wave offering, and the shoulder of the heave offering, which is waved, and which is heaved up, of the ram of the consecration, even of that which is for Aaron, and of that which is for his sons:
29:28
And it shall be Aaron's and his sons' by a statute for ever from the children of Israel: for it is an heave offering: and it shall be an heave offering from the children of Israel of the sacrifice of their peace offerings, even their heave offering unto the LORD.
29:29
And the holy garments of Aaron shall be his sons' after him, to be anointed therein, and to be consecrated in them.
29:30
And that son that is priest in his stead shall put them on seven days, when he cometh into the tabernacle of the congregation to minister in the holy place.
29:31
And thou shalt take the ram of the consecration, and seethe his flesh in the holy place.

Leviticus Chapter 1
1:1
And the LORD called unto Moses, and spake unto him out of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying,
1:2
Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, If any man of you bring an offering unto the LORD, ye shall bring your offering of the cattle, even of the herd, and of the flock.

1:3
If his offering be a burnt sacrifice of the herd, let him offer a male without blemish: he shall offer it of his own voluntary will at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD.
1:4
And he shall put his hand upon the head of the burnt offering; and it shall be accepted for him to make atonement for him.
1:5
And he shall kill the bullock before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall bring the blood, and sprinkle the blood round about upon the altar that is by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.
1:6
And he shall flay the burnt offering, and cut it into his pieces.
1:7
And the sons of Aaron the priest shall put fire upon the altar, and lay the wood in order upon the fire:
1:8
And the priests, Aaron's sons, shall lay the parts, the head, and the fat, in order upon the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar:
1:9
But his inwards and his legs shall he wash in water: and the priest shall burn all on the altar, to be a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of "a sweet savour unto the LORD".
1:10
And if his offering be of the flocks, namely, of the sheep, or of the goats, for a burnt sacrifice; he shall bring it a male without blemish.
1:11
And he shall kill it on the side of the altar northward before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall sprinkle his blood round about upon the altar.
1:12
And he shall cut it into his pieces, with his head and his fat: and the priest shall lay them in order on the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar:
1:13
But he shall wash the inwards and the legs with water: and the priest shall bring it all, and burn it upon the altar: it is a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.
1:14
And if the burnt sacrifice for his offering to the LORD be of fowls, then he shall bring his offering of turtledoves, or of young pigeons.
1:15
And the priest shall bring it unto the altar, and wring off his head, and burn it on the altar; and the blood thereof shall be wrung out at the side of the altar:
1:16
And he shall pluck away his crop with his feathers, and cast it beside the altar on the east part, by the place of the ashes:

1:17
And he shall cleave it with the wings thereof, but shall not divide it asunder: and the priest shall burn it upon the altar, upon the wood that is upon the fire: it is a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

Leviticus Chapter 7
7:1
Likewise this is the law of the trespass offering: it is most holy.
7:2
In the place where they kill the burnt offering shall they kill the trespass offering: and the blood thereof shall he sprinkle round about upon the altar.
7:3
And he shall offer of it all the fat thereof; the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards,
7:4
And the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, which is by the flanks, and the caul that is above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away:
7:5
And the priest shall burn them upon the altar for an offering made by fire unto the LORD: it is a trespass offering.

Leviticus 7:14
And of it he shall offer one out of the whole oblation for an heave offering unto the LORD, and it shall be the priest's that sprinkleth the blood of the peace offerings.

THE "LORD" NEEDS EVERY DROP OF THAT BLOOD FROM THE BLOOD SACRIFICE:
Leviticus 7:27
Whatsoever soul it be that eateth any manner of blood, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

Here, more blood sacrifice is needed to remove the curse of leprosy jehova has inflicted:
Leviticus 14:34

When ye be come into the land of Canaan, which I give to you for a possession, and I put the plague of leprosy in a house of the land of your possession;
14:49
And he shall take to cleanse the house two birds, and cedar wood, and scarlet, and hyssop:
14:50
And he shall kill the one of the birds in an earthen vessel over running water:
14:51
And he shall take the cedar wood, and the hyssop, and the scarlet, and the living bird, and dip them in the blood of the slain bird, and in the running water, and sprinkle the house seven times:
14:52

And he shall cleanse the house with the blood of the bird, and with the running water, and with the living bird, and with the cedar wood, and with the hyssop, and with the scarlet:
14:53
But he shall let go the living bird out of the city into the open fields, and make an atonement for the house: and it shall be clean.
14:54
This is the law for all manner of plague of leprosy, and scall, 14:55
And for the leprosy of a garment, and of a house,
14:56
And for a rising, and for a scab, and for a bright spot:
14:57
To teach when it is unclean, and when it is clean: this is the law of leprosy.

More examples of blood sacrifices to Jehova:
Leviticus 8:14- 32
Leviticus 9:1- 24
Leviticus 14:1- 5
Leviticus 14:12-28
Leviticus 23:12-21
Numbers 19:1- 7
Joshua Chapter 10- Nothing but mass murder
Judges 1:1- 18 More bloodbaths and mass murder
Judges 3:27- 31

This goes on and on and on. Repeats of endless mass murder and bloodshed. The word "BLOOD" is used over and over again. You would think this would all be so obvious.

We all must bear in mind, the Nazarene was the ultimate human sacrifice; also "eat his body and drink his blood" is repeatedly recited during nearly every Christian mass/service around the world.

The article above and this article Jehova: "A Murderer and a Liar from the Beginning" reveal bloodbath after bloodbath, and the conquering and genocide of Gentiles at the hands of the Jews.

YHVH: The Truth About "Yaweh" "Jehova"
Taking the Mask Off of Christianity

The Judeo/Christian Bible has always used extreme fear as a tool to keep people away from the occult, sorcery, "witchcraft," and workings of the mind. In the article below, the reasons are obvious. In order for a spell to succeed, the victim must lack the necessary knowledge, be a good sheep, and just "believe."

Exodus 22:18 Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live.

"YHVH" aka "Yaweh" "Jehova" is nothing more than a system of Jewish magick. "YHVH" known as the "tetragammaton" represents the four corners and elements, as does "INRI" along with the four gospels; these represent the four corners of magick and the four elements that are so important in any magickal working. "YHVH" is used extensively in (Jewish) magick. The Jews stole the Kabalah from the Egyptians and corrupted it. It is mainly chanted- "Yod Heh Vau Heh" in different combinations.

The Gentile people have been force fed Christianity in order to strip us of all knowledge and power. Those at the top play both sides against the middle. What this means is the enemy works from within both sides- each side bashing the other while they both move ahead. This is analogous to a cop who is heavily involved in an open and public anti-drug crusade and secretly sells and pushes drugs unbeknownst to his family and community.

Following the Roman sacking of the Temple of Solomon 70 CE, Christianity was invented by the Jews the best known is (Paul aka "Saul of Tarsus) so they could control the world using the ancient known powers of the mind and the soul. The Jews themselves know the Nazarene is a fictitious character based upon some 20 crucified heroes from Pagan pantheons. With the centuries of devout belief in this entity and the psychic energy poured into him through prayer, he has taken on a life of his own. See Thoughtforms. For example, Odin hung from a tree, Set was crucified on a furka, Buddha sat beneath the Bo (Boa- again the serpent) tree for enlightenment; the list goes on. Most of the character of the Nazarene was stolen from the Persian God "Mithra." In working a spell, it is always important a connection be made.

In the case of Christianity, all of the former Pagan (Gentile) Gods were bound and replaced with fictitious Jewish deities. The Hebrew Virgin Mary replaced Astaroth, the Hebrew Moses legend was stolen from Sargon (both were born in secrecy, left in a reed basket to float down the river and adopted by royalty), Hebrew Abraham was stolen from Hindu Brahma. "Brahma in Sanskrit means "many." The endless list goes on and on. See Exposing Christianity There isn't anything in the Christian religion that hasn't been stolen from Pagan religions pre-dating it from hundreds to thousands of years. The Pagan Gods, being a powerful racial memory in the minds of Gentiles were replaced with Hebrew characters to be slavishly obeyed and worshipped. This set the stage for immense power and control.

Christianity has always been nothing more than a tool to remove spiritual knowledge and power from the Gentile population and to keep us from our Gods, namely our True Creator God given the name Satan, which means "adversary/enemy" in Hebrew . Those Gentiles who were priests and leaders were tortured and put to death. The others who did not follow suffered the same lot and any Gentile even suspected of having ties to the old religions was labeled as a "heretic" and put to death. Of course, the Jews rant and holler concerning the Christian Church's persecution of their small communities during the Middle Ages, but this is the age old playing both sides against the middle and those Jews at the top could care less how many of their own they have to use. Tomás de Torquemada, First Grand Inquisitor of Spain was a Jew.

The Jews have had full control of the Catholic Church (original Christian Church) from the beginning. Most of the Catholic popes were of Jewish origins, such as the late John Paul II who was born of a Jewish mother (Katz) and recognized as a Jew by the Jewish orthodox. Through the Catholic sacrament of confession, the Catholic clergy had everyone, namely the Gentile leaders and nobility over a barrel. They knew their deepest and darkest secrets.

The Catholic Church is the bulwark of Christianity. Since the Protestant reformation, the Jews have also gained control of these sects. The "World Council of Churches" is another example.

The Jews have had a vast pool of psychic energy from which to draw from. The Jews appointed themselves as "The Chosen of God," the star character of Christianity, the Nazarene is a Jew (and a powerful thoughtform), the Virgin Mary and her husband Joseph are Jews, the 12 apostles of the Nazarene (13 makes a coven- again stolen from the Ancient Pagan religions)- all Jews. In addition, all of the characters of the Old and New Testament were stolen from Gentile characters and replaced as the "Chosen" Jews.

So the average Christian Gentile, ignorant to the clandestine workings of the Jews and the occult, pours more and more psychic energy through devotion and prayer into this Jewish energy vortex and people wonder how this minority has most of the world's wealth and power. The Gentiles, namely the Christians have been under a very powerful spell for centuries.

They cut us off from our Gods, our traditions and our spiritual and religious heritage through mass murder, replacing our history with nothing but lies and through fear of the unknown since all Gentile knowledge was taken out of circulation.

Their angelic filth- most have names with the classic seven letters: Gabriel, Raphael, etc. These seven represent the seven chakras and were used to bind the Gentile Gods and make slaves of them using the "Goetia." The Goetic black books or "grimoires" all originated with the Jews, such as "The Key of Solomon," and "The Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage" and many more, (these can easily be found online, by typing their titles into a search engine) all originally written in Hebrew as most Gentiles cannot read Hebrew. All use the Hebrew symbols and chants and direct intense blasphemy against the Gentile Gods who have been turned into devils, demons and hideous monsters to be degraded. The Gentile Gods are no longer bound and some of those complacent prophesies slipped such as "Azazel being bound until the end of time." I can assure you he is now totally free.

Christianity goes in steps. Because it is fictitious, it is spiritually unreliable. Certain Christians have at times tapped into this energy vortex and obtained results. Prayer groups and such put forth psychic energy. Deluded Christians are told to "have faith." Having faith is necessary for any spell or directed working of the mind to succeed. With Christianity, it is hit and mostly misses. The few and far in-between hits keep the deluded believing, unknowing this is not any "miracle" but only the power of the mind. The end objective is atheism. The atheist believes in nothing and disregards anything "supernatural" or of the occult. He/she is a sitting duck just waiting to be manipulated by those who possess occult knowledge and power.

About this capture

Jehova: "A Murderer and a Liar from the Beginning"

Exodus 15:3
The LORD is a man of war: the LORD is his name.

The real truth appears in the "Holy Bible" where for one, crimes against children are rampant; the most notable being the evil "God" Jehova making a living blood sacrifice of his son, [child murder] which is the entire theme of the Christian mass/service; a simulated living blood sacrifice, proving who he really is. For more detailed information, see The Christian Mass/Service: a Simulation of a Human Blood Sacrifice

Deuteronomy 2:33
And the LORD our God delivered him before us; and we smote him, and his sons, and all his people.
2:34
And we took all his cities at that time, and utterly destroyed the men, and the women, and the little ones, of every city, we left none to remain.

Deuteronomy 7:23
But the LORD thy God shall deliver them unto thee, and shall destroy them with a mighty destruction, until they be destroyed.
7:24
And he shall deliver their kings into thine hand, and thou shalt destroy their name from under heaven: there shall no man be able to stand before thee, until thou have destroyed them.

Exodus 23:18
Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; neither shall the fat of my sacrifice remain until the morning.

"A MURDERER AND A LIAR FROM THE BEGINNING"

Numbers 25:16
And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
25:17

Vex the Midianites, and smite them

Numbers 31: 17-18
17 Now therefore kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man by lying with him.
18 But all the women children, that have not known a man by lying with him, keep alive for yourselves.

Psalms 137:9 Happy shall he be, that taketh and dasheth thy little ones against the stones.

I Samuel 15:3 Now go and smite Amalek, and utterly destroy all that they have, and spare them not; but slay both man and woman, infant and suckling, ox and sheep, camel and ass.

IT IS NO WONDER THAT THOSE WHO TIE INTO THE HUMAN HATING, MURDEROUS ENERGY OF CHRISTIANITY COMMIT THESE CRIMES.

THOU SHALT NOT KILL????
Luke 19:27
But those mine enemies, which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither, and slay them before me.
- Jesus of Nazareth, ordering others to commit murder.

HONOR THY FATHER AND THY MOTHER????
Matthew 10: 34-36
34 Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.
35 For I am come to set a man at variance against his father and the daughter against her mother and the daughter in law against her mother in law.
36 And a man's foes shall be they of his own household.
- Jesus of Nazareth

WHO DID SATAN EVER MURDER?

There is nothing at all spiritual about the Bible or Christianity. There are endless contradictions and opposing verses in the Bible. These are to ensure that the Bible will adapt to all time periods and situations, in order to perpetuate the program of Christianity. Some interpolations were secretly slipped in by various ancient writers crying for help; no different from UFO's in ancient art [type this into Google or some other search engine]. For more about hidden messages, please click here.

The above is only a very small sample of the endless murder, torture, butchery of children and infants, and other abominable crimes committed on the orders of Jehova, and YES, Jesus the Nazarene. This, along with endless suicidal advice is the theme of the Bible. Do not be fooled or deceived at the Christian attempts to confuse you.

"SATAN" means "TRUTH" in Sanskrit. Satan does not contradict himself. Even an attorney in court proves guilt by the contradicitons of the defendant. A REAL LIAR AND DECEIVER CONTRADICTS HIM/HERSELF!

"We Shall Destroy God" - The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion.

"Satan" means "enemy" in Hebrew.

Rabbi Yaacov Perrin says, "One million Arabs are not worth a Jewish fingernail." (NY Daily News, Feb. 28, 1994, p.6).

MASS MURDER OF GENTILES:
Exodus 15:3
The LORD is a man of war: the LORD is his name.

Exodus 17:13
And Joshua discomfited Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword.
17:14
And the LORD said unto Moses, Write this for a memorial in a book, and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua: for I will utterly put out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven.
17:15
And Moses built an altar, and called the name of it Jehovahnissi:
17:16
For he said, Because the LORD hath sworn that the LORD will have war with Amalek from generation to generation.

"JEHOVA COMMITS MORE MURDER:
Exodus 23:27
I will send my fear before thee, and will destroy all the people to whom thou shalt come, and I will make all thine enemies turn their backs unto thee.

Rabbi Yitzhak Ginsburg declared, "We have to recognize that Jewish blood and the blood of a goy are not the same thing." (NY Times, June 6, 1989, p.5).
("goy" or "goyim" - plural, are Jewish derogatory words for "Gentile/s" the root "goeti" is the root word of "Devil." Satan is the God of the Gentiles and our True Creator God. "Satan" means "enemy" in Hebrew.

"JEHOVA" ORDERS THE MASS MURDER OF THOUSANDS OF GENTILES:
Exodus 32:27

And he said unto them, Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Put every man his sword by his side, and go in and out from gate to gate throughout the camp, and slay every man his brother, and every man his companion, and every man his neighbour.
32:28
And the children of Levi did according to the word of Moses: and there fell of the people that day about three thousand men.

"JEHOVA" ORDERS HIS PEOPLE TO COMMIT MORE MURDER OF GENTILES:
Leviticus 26:7
And ye shall chase your enemies, and they shall fall before you by the sword.
26:8
And five of you shall chase an hundred, and an hundred of you shall put ten thousand to flight: and your enemies shall fall before you by the sword.

Univ. of Jerusalem Prof. Ehud Sprinzak described Kahane and Goldstein's philosophy: "They believe it's God's will that they commit violence against 'goyim,' a Hebrew term for non-Jews." (NY Daily News, Feb. 26, 1994, p. 5).

MORE MASS MURDER OF THE GENTILE CANAANITES:"
Numbers 21:3
And the LORD hearkened to the voice of Israel, and delivered up the Canaanites; and they utterly destroyed them and their cities: and he called the name of the place Hormah.

HERE IS CANNIBALISM- EATING DEAD GENTILES:
Numbers 23-24:
Behold, the people shall rise up as a great lion, and lift up himself as a young lion: he shall not lie down until he eat of the prey, and drink the blood of the slain.

QUOTE FROM THE JEWISH TALMUD: Sanhedrin 59a: "Murdering Goyim is like killing a wild animal."

GENOCIDE OF THE GENTILE MIDIANITES:
Numbers 25:16
And the LORD spake unto Moses, saying,
25:17
Vex the Midianites, and smite them:

Numbers 31:7
And they warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses; and they slew all the males.

QUOTE FROM THE JEWISH TALMUD:
18. Tosefta. Aboda Zara B, 5: "If a goy kills a goy or a Jew, he is responsible; but if a Jew kills a goy, he is NOT responsible."
31:8
And they slew the kings of Midian, beside the rest of them that were slain; namely, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five kings of Midian: Balaam also the son of Beor they slew with the sword.

QUOTES FROM THE JEWISH TALMUD: Yebhamoth 11b: "Sexual intercourse with a little girl is permitted if she is three years of age."
Nidrasch Talpioth, p. 225-L: "Jehovah created the non-Jew in human form so that the Jew would not have to be served by beasts. The non-Jew is consequently an animal in human form, and condemned to serve the Jew day and night."

MAKING SLAVES OF THE GENTILE WOMEN AND CHILDREN:
31:9
And the children of Israel took all the women of Midian captives, and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods.
31:10
And they burnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire.
31:11
And they took all the spoil, and all the prey, both of men and of beasts.

QUOTE FROM THE JEWISH TALMUD:
Schulchan Aruch, Choszen Hamiszpat 348: "All property of other nations belongs to the Jewish nation, which, consequently, is entitled to seize upon it without any scruples."

MORE MASS MURDER AND GENOCIDE OF GENTILES. THE TAKING OF ALL GENTILE PROPERTY IS A BLATANT EXAMPLE OF WHAT WAS DONE TO MODERN DAY PALESTINE (DESCENDED FROM THE PHILISTINES) BY THE BANDIT STATE OF ISRAEL:
Deuteronomy 2:20
(That also was accounted a land of giants: giants dwelt therein in old time; and the Ammonites call them Zamzummims;
2:21
A people great, and many, and tall, as the Anakims; but the LORD destroyed them before them; and they succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead:
2:22
As he did to the children of Esau, which dwelt in Seir, when he destroyed the Horims from before them; and they succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead even unto this day:
2:23
And the Avims which dwelt in Hazerim, even unto Azzah, the Caphtorims, which came forth out of Caphtor, destroyed them, and dwelt in their stead.)

QUOTE FROM THE JEWISH TALMUD: Hilkkoth Akum X1: "Show no mercy to the Goyim."
2:30
But Sihon king of Heshbon would not let us pass by him: for the LORD thy God hardened his spirit, and made his heart obstinate, that he might deliver him into thy hand, as appeareth this day.
2:31
And the LORD said unto me, Behold, I have begun to give Sihon and his land before thee: begin to possess, that thou mayest inherit his land.
2:32
Then Sihon came out against us, he and all his people, to fight at Jahaz.
2:33
And the LORD our God delivered him before us; and we smote him, and his sons, and all his people.
2:34
And we took all his cities at that time, and utterly destroyed the men, and the women, and the little ones, of every city, we left none to remain:

QUOTE FROM THE JEWISH TALMUD:
Seph. Jp., 92, 1: "God has given the Jews power over the possessions and blood of all nations."
2:35
Only the cattle we took for a prey unto ourselves, and the spoil of the cities which we took.

QUOTE FROM THE JEWISH TALMUD:
Sanhedrin 57a. "When a Jew murders a Gentile ("Cuthean"), there will be no death penalty. What a Jew steals from a Gentile he may keep."
Baba Kamma 37b. Gentiles are outside the protection of the law and God has "exposed their money to Israel."

2:36
From Aroer, which is by the brink of the river of Arnon, and from the city that is by the river, even unto Gilead, there was not one city too strong for us: the LORD our God delivered all unto us:
2:37
Only unto the land of the children of Ammon thou camest not, nor unto any place of the river Jabbok, nor unto the cities in the mountains, nor unto whatsoever the LORD our God forbad us.

THE HITTITES, THE GIRGASHITES, THE AMORITES, THE CANAANITES, THE PERIZZITES, THE HIVITES, AND THE JESUBITES ARE ALL GENTILE NATIONS.

Deuteronomy 7:1
When the LORD thy God shall bring thee into the land whither thou goest to possess it, and hath cast out many nations before thee, the Hittites, and the Girgashites, and the Amorites, and the Canaanites, and the Perizzites, and the Hivites, and the Jebusites, seven nations greater and mightier than thou;
7:2
And when the LORD thy God shall deliver them before thee; thou shalt smite them, and utterly destroy them; thou shalt make no covenant with them, nor shew mercy unto them:
7:3
Neither shalt thou make marriages with them; thy daughter thou shalt not give unto his son, nor his daughter shalt thou take unto thy son.
7:4
For they will turn away thy son from following me, that they may serve other gods: so will the anger of the LORD be kindled against you, and destroy thee suddenly.

HERE IS WHERE THE JEWS ARE BLATANT ABOUT DESTROYING THE GENTILE GODS:
7:5
But thus shall ye deal with them; ye shall destroy their altars, and break down their images, and cut down their groves, and burn their graven images with fire.
7:6
For thou art an holy people unto the LORD thy God: the LORD thy God hath chosen thee to be a special people unto himself, above all people that are upon the face of the earth.

Deuteronomy 7:21
Thou shalt not be affrighted at them: for the LORD thy God is among you, a mighty God and terrible.
7:22
And the LORD thy God will put out those nations before thee by little and little: thou mayest not consume them at once, lest the beasts of the field increase upon thee.
7:23
But the LORD thy God shall deliver them unto thee, and shall destroy them with a mighty destruction, until they be destroyed.
7:24
And he shall deliver their kings into thine hand, and thou shalt destroy their name from under heaven: there shall no man be able to stand before thee, until thou have destroyed them.

The Gentiles have been indoctrinated with Jewish lies. We have been disconnected from our gods and our culture. These have been replaced with fictitious Jewish characters for Gentiles to slavishly worship, which creates a powerful subliminal connection. This sort of thing is responsible for how Gentiles are always fighting wars for the Jews and not even thinking of what they are really doing. What has happened in Iraq is a perfect example.

Deuteronomy 7:25
The graven images of their gods shall ye burn with fire: thou shalt not desire the silver or gold that is on them, nor take it unto thee, lest thou be snared therin: for it is an abomination to the LORD thy God.
7:26
Neither shalt thou bring an abomination into thine house, lest thou be a cursed thing like it: but thou shalt utterly detest it, and thou shalt utterly abhor it; for it is a cursed thing.

Deuteronomy 12:27
And thou shalt offer thy burnt offerings, the flesh and the blood, upon the altar of the LORD thy God: and the blood of thy sacrifices shall be poured out upon the altar of the LORD thy God, and thou shalt eat the flesh.
12:28
Observe and hear all these words which I command thee, that it may go well with thee, and with thy children after thee for ever, when thou doest that which is good and right in the sight of the LORD thy God.
12:29
When the LORD thy God shall cut off the nations from before thee, whither thou goest to possess them, and thou succeedest them, and dwellest in their land;
12:30
Take heed to thyself that thou be not snared by following them, after that they be destroyed from before thee; and that thou enquire not after their gods, saying, How did these nations serve their gods? even so will I do likewise.

Human energy is not enough, there had to be animal blood sacrifices as well:
Exodus 20:24
An altar of earth thou shalt make unto me, and shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt offerings, and thy peace offerings, thy sheep, and thine oxen: in all places where I record my name I will come unto thee, and I will bless thee.

Exodus 24:4
And Moses wrote all the words of the LORD, and rose up early in the morning, and builded an altar under the hill, and twelve pillars, according to the twelve tribes of Israel.
24:5
And he sent young men of the children of Israel, which offered burnt offerings, and sacrificed peace offerings of oxen unto the LORD.
24:6
And Moses took half of the blood, and put it in basons; and half of the blood he sprinkled on the altar.
24:7

And he took the book of the covenant, and read in the audience of the people: and they said, All that the LORD hath said will we do, and be obedient.
24:8
And Moses took the blood, and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold the blood of the covenant, which the LORD hath made with you concerning all these words.

More instructions from jehova for blood sacrifice:
Exodus 23:18
Thou shalt not offer the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread; neither shall the fat of my sacrifice remain until the morning.

Exodus 29:10 And thou shalt cause a bullock to be brought before the tabernacle of the congregation: and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the bullock.
29:11
And thou shalt kill the bullock before the LORD, by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.
29:12
And thou shalt take of the blood of the bullock, and put it upon the horns of the altar with thy finger, and pour all the blood beside the bottom of the altar.
29:13
And thou shalt take all the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul that is above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and burn them upon the altar.
29:14
But the flesh of the bullock, and his skin, and his dung, shalt thou burn with fire without the camp: it is a sin offering.
29:15
Thou shalt also take one ram; and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram.
29:16
And thou shalt slay the ram, and thou shalt take his blood, and sprinkle it round about upon the altar.
29:17
And thou shalt cut the ram in pieces, and wash the inwards of him, and his legs, and put them unto his pieces, and unto his head.
29:18
And thou shalt burn the whole ram upon the altar: it is a burnt offering unto the LORD: it is a sweet savour, an offering made by fire unto the LORD.
29:19
And thou shalt take the other ram; and Aaron and his sons shall put their hands upon the head of the ram.
29:20
Then shalt thou kill the ram, and take of his blood, and put it upon the tip of the right ear of Aaron, and upon the tip of the right ear of his sons, and upon the thumb of their right hand, and upon the great toe of their right foot, and sprinkle the blood upon the altar round about.

29:21
And thou shalt take of the blood that is upon the altar, and of the anointing oil, and sprinkle it upon Aaron, and upon his garments, and upon his sons, and upon the garments of his sons with him: and he shall be hallowed, and his garments, and his sons, and his sons' garments with him.
29:22
Also thou shalt take of the ram the fat and the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards, and the caul above the liver, and the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, and the right shoulder; for it is a ram of consecration:
29:23
And one loaf of bread, and one cake of oiled bread, and one wafer out of the basket of the unleavened bread that is before the LORD:
29:24
And thou shalt put all in the hands of Aaron, and in the hands of his sons; and shalt wave them for a wave offering before the LORD.
29:25
And thou shalt receive them of their hands, and burn them upon the altar for a burnt offering, for a sweet savour before the LORD: it is an offering made by fire unto the LORD.
29:26
And thou shalt take the breast of the ram of Aaron's consecration, and wave it for a wave offering before the LORD: and it shall be thy part.
29:27
And thou shalt sanctify the breast of the wave offering, and the shoulder of the heave offering, which is waved, and which is heaved up, of the ram of the consecration, even of that which is for Aaron, and of that which is for his sons:
29:28
And it shall be Aaron's and his sons' by a statute for ever from the children of Israel: for it is an heave offering: and it shall be an heave offering from the children of Israel of the sacrifice of their peace offerings, even their heave offering unto the LORD.
29:29
And the holy garments of Aaron shall be his sons' after him, to be anointed therein, and to be consecrated in them.
29:30
And that son that is priest in his stead shall put them on seven days, when he cometh into the tabernacle of the congregation to minister in the holy place.
29:31
And thou shalt take the ram of the consecration, and seethe his flesh in the holy place.

Leviticus Chapter 1
1:1
And the LORD called unto Moses, and spake unto him out of the tabernacle of the congregation, saying,
1:2

Speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, If any man of you bring an offering unto the LORD, ye shall bring your offering of the cattle, even of the herd, and of the flock.
1:3
If his offering be a burnt sacrifice of the herd, let him offer a male without blemish: he shall offer it of his own voluntary will at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the LORD.
1:4
And he shall put his hand upon the head of the burnt offering; and it shall be accepted for him to make atonement for him.
1:5
And he shall kill the bullock before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall bring the blood, and sprinkle the blood round about upon the altar that is by the door of the tabernacle of the congregation.
1:6
And he shall flay the burnt offering, and cut it into his pieces.
1:7
And the sons of Aaron the priest shall put fire upon the altar, and lay the wood in order upon the fire:
1:8
And the priests, Aaron's sons, shall lay the parts, the head, and the fat, in order upon the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar:
1:9
But his inwards and his legs shall he wash in water: and the priest shall burn all on the altar, to be a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of "a sweet savour unto the LORD".
1:10
And if his offering be of the flocks, namely, of the sheep, or of the goats, for a burnt sacrifice; he shall bring it a male without blemish.
1:11
And he shall kill it on the side of the altar northward before the LORD: and the priests, Aaron's sons, shall sprinkle his blood round about upon the altar.
1:12
And he shall cut it into his pieces, with his head and his fat: and the priest shall lay them in order on the wood that is on the fire which is upon the altar:
1:13
But he shall wash the inwards and the legs with water: and the priest shall bring it all, and burn it upon the altar: it is a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.
1:14
And if the burnt sacrifice for his offering to the LORD be of fowls, then he shall bring his offering of turtledoves, or of young pigeons.
1:15
And the priest shall bring it unto the altar, and wring off his head, and burn it on the altar; and the blood thereof shall be wrung out at the side of the altar:

1:16
And he shall pluck away his crop with his feathers, and cast it beside the altar on the east part, by the place of the ashes:
1:17
And he shall cleave it with the wings thereof, but shall not divide it asunder: and the priest shall burn it upon the altar, upon the wood that is upon the fire: it is a burnt sacrifice, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savour unto the LORD.

Leviticus Chapter 7
7:1
Likewise this is the law of the trespass offering: it is most holy.
7:2
In the place where they kill the burnt offering shall they kill the trespass offering: and the blood thereof shall he sprinkle round about upon the altar.
7:3
And he shall offer of it all the fat thereof; the rump, and the fat that covereth the inwards,
7:4
And the two kidneys, and the fat that is on them, which is by the flanks, and the caul that is above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away:
7:5
And the priest shall burn them upon the altar for an offering made by fire unto the LORD: it is a trespass offering.

Leviticus 7:14
And of it he shall offer one out of the whole oblation for an heave offering unto the LORD, and it shall be the priest's that sprinkleth the blood of the peace offerings.

THE "LORD" NEEDS EVERY DROP OF THAT BLOOD FROM THE BLOOD SACRIFICE:
Leviticus 7:27
Whatsoever soul it be that eateth any manner of blood, even that soul shall be cut off from his people.

Here, more blood sacrifice is needed to remove the curse of leprosy jehova has inflicted:
Leviticus 14:34

When ye be come into the land of Canaan, which I give to you for a possession, and I put the plague of leprosy in a house of the land of your possession;
14:49
And he shall take to cleanse the house two birds, and cedar wood, and scarlet, and hyssop:
14:50
And he shall kill the one of the birds in an earthen vessel over running water:
14:51
And he shall take the cedar wood, and the hyssop, and the scarlet, and the living bird, and dip them in the blood of the slain bird, and in the running water, and sprinkle the house seven times:

14:52
And he shall cleanse the house with the blood of the bird, and with the running water, and with the living bird, and with the cedar wood, and with the hyssop, and with the scarlet:
14:53
But he shall let go the living bird out of the city into the open fields, and make an atonement for the house: and it shall be clean.
14:54
This is the law for all manner of plague of leprosy, and scall, 14:55
And for the leprosy of a garment, and of a house,
14:56
And for a rising, and for a scab, and for a bright spot:
14:57
To teach when it is unclean, and when it is clean: this is the law of leprosy.

The Torah and Living Blood Sacrifice

I am writing this article because I am so fed up with the endless stream of idiots who make YouTube videos and websites that expose Jewish ritual murder on the one hand and with the other, support Christianity, the Bible, the Nazarene and blame all of this on Satan. Some of these authors are actually Jewish and know what they are doing in regards to trying to blame it all on Satan and the Pagan [Gentile] Gods, while others [mostly Christians] are total idiots.

Most of these idiots who obviously have IQs in the double-digits [nearly always a Christian] are either too lazy, not motivated or of course who lack the necessary intelligence to really read the Jewish Torah for what it is, the Old Testament. The entire Torah is chock full of the Jewish God's instructions on how to properly perform living blood sacrifices, and for the Christian double-digit IQ idiots who try to make excuses in regards to the New Testament and "Jesus," "Jesus" IS a human blood child sacrifice.

In addition to this profound stupidity [the level of Christian intelligence is so low it is unbelievable], it never seems to occur to these bible-thumping morons that whine about Jewish ritual murder, and quote the Talmud, that the Talmud is in fact a rabbinical commentary on the Torah. And what is the Torah? The Torah is the first five books of the Old Testament of the Bible that these Christians with shit for brains promote. That's right- THE OLD TESTAMENT. The same old toxic filth that their priests and preachers spout off in their Christian churches every Sunday. Like I already stated the extent of the stupidity is beyond shocking. Also, these buzzard-brained Christians would be at a total loss to show exactly where in their Bible, Satan ever even mentioned, let alone demanded, ANY sacrifices at all, let alone a living blood sacrifice! Yet they accuse him of this incessantly, as this creates a diversion and a distraction from the real evil, which is the Judeo/Christian Bible. As I keep repeating, every ugly act and attribute that is of the Judeo/Christian "God" is blamed on Satan, yet few can see beyond this. Most people are deceived by this. Hardly anyone stops to think.

Another thing I want to add here is how Christians and other related idiots twist everything. One glaring example is I came across was a statement regarding how the names of Pagan Gods such as Baal were used by Jews, such as Hasidim founder Ba'al Shem Tov. This title means "master of the good name" for one. This has to do with occult powers. It has nothing to do with the Pagan God Baal.

"In Hebrew, the word ba'al means "husband" or "owner," and is related to a verb meaning to take possession of, for a man, to consummate a marriage. The word "ba'al" is also used in many Hebrew phrases, denoting both concrete ownership as well as possession of different qualities in one's personality." [1]

Baal also as I mentioned in the above means "master," so this word really has a very broad term. Given the extreme blasphemy and denigration against the Pagan God Baal in the Goetia [The Lesser Key of Solomon], it is common sense that the Hebrews wouldn't be giving any sort of devotion to this Pagan God, or any other Pagan Gods for that matter. Any references that try to claim the Hebrews worshipped any Pagan Gods are to confuse the readers. With our own research, we have found that Baal is another name for the Philistine God Beelzebub. The endless Jewish blasphemy against Beelzebub should make a statement in itself regarding just how hated this Pagan God is by the Jews.

The quote directly below is from “Bible Hub” website, article on Baal: “4 with attributive: בַּעַל בְּרִית Lord of convenant Judges 8:33; Judges 9:4 (compare אל ברית Judges 9:46; NöZMG 1888, 478); זְבוּב ׳ב Lord of flies 2 Kings 1:2,3,6,16, Philistine god, 5 Βααλ μυῖαν (Beelzebub, Matthew 12:24) compare Bael. “ [2]

I would also like to comment on the extreme similarity between the name “Moloch” and the Hebrew word “Melek,” which means “King.” “King” is another real loose term. [3]

So… what does the Jewish Torah have to say regarding living blood sacrifice? For those of you who have any doubts, I strongly encourage you to do your own research, as there are numerous copies of the Jewish Torah here online.

The story of the Jewish character Abraham about to sacrifice his son Isaac, as ordered by that alien god of theirs, is a blatant example that his mere willingness, without question, as the story goes, indicates this was nothing out of the norm, nor was this an unusual request. Given his unquestioning readiness, this reveals this act of human child sacrifice was commonplace.

In addition to the above, here are some very interesting and very revealing quotes taken from the Jewish website
"Come and Hear, An Educational Forum For the Examination of Religious Truth and Religious Tolerance: Blood Ritual 3: Human Sacrifice, the Talmud, and the Moloch Problem" "LORD God Accepts Human Sacrifice"

Quotes from the above linked website:
“Blood Ritual: — Blood ritual is fundamental to Judaism. Some blood sanctifies, some blood defiles. Let's see what the Talmud doctrines are.”

“The Babylonian Talmud, however, still permits Jews to sacrifice children to Moloch — under certain conditions.”
“LORD God Accepts Human Sacrifice”
“First, let's get perspective. Some mistakenly believe human sacrifice is forbidden in the Old Testament. Certainly, some of the prophets railed against it. But in at least one book, LORD God accepts human sacrifice. And in another book, LORD God is appeased by human sacrifice.”

“In the following account from the Book of Judges, the Israelite warrior Jephthah is about to set off to make war on the Ammonites. In payment for victory, Jephthah promises LORD God he will sacrifice the first "whatsoever" that comes from his house to greet him upon his return. Unless Jephthah keeps oxen, sheep, goats, or chickens in his living room, he must expect the promised victim will be a human being. Notice that Jephthah does not promise to sacrifice "an ox" or "a goat," etc.”

30. And Jephthah vowed a vow unto the LORD, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hands,
31. Then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of my house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the LORD's, and I will offer it up for a burnt offering.
— Judges 11:30-31 (KJV)

The first to pass through the doors of Jephthah's house upon his return is his only child, his beloved daughter.

34. And Jephthah came to Mizpeh unto his house, and, behold, his daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and with dances: and she was his only child; beside her he had neither son nor daughter.
35. And it came to pass, when he saw her, that he rent his clothes, and said, Alas, my daughter! thou hast brought me very low, and thou art one of them that trouble me: for I have opened my mouth unto the LORD, and I cannot go back.
— Judges 11:34-35 (KJV)

Let us reflect for a moment. We know Jephthah vowed to LORD God to sacrifice "whatsoever" first came out of the door of his house. We suspect Jephthah plans to sacrifice one of his servants. But when the "whatsoever" turned out to be Jephthah's daughter, Jephthah is surprised. Notice his daughter's reaction:

36. And she said unto him, My father, if thou hast opened thy mouth unto the LORD, do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth; forasmuch as the LORD hath taken vengeance for thee of thine enemies, even of the children of Ammon.
— Judges 11:36 (KJV)

“She expresses no surprise that LORD God would accept a human sacrifice, nor does she protest; she does not say, "Father, let's use some common sense.”
None but perfect animals are permitted to be ritually sacrificed in Judaism. Notice that Jephthah's daughter, too, is a perfect sacrifice — she is a virgin. Notice that LORD God does not stop this human sacrifice, as he stopped the sacrifice of Abraham's son.

The Old Testament does not specify how Jephthah sacrifices his daughter, but following the correct methods for animal sacrifice, he would slit her throat first and drain her blood into a Temple service vessel; cut off her arms, legs, and head; cut the torso in sections, remove her entrails and wash them; pour, sprinkle, and smear her blood at prescribed points around the altar; and burn the flesh. Or of course, a priest might do this for him.” [4]

“LORD God is Appeased by Human Sacrifice” [5]

“As two separate offences, proving that giving one's seed to Molech is not idolatry. The differences [sic] is, that if one sacrificed to Molech, or caused his son to pass through the fire to some other deity, he is not punished.”
—Rabbi Dr. Freedman

“Following the Mishnah, Sanhedrin 64a and 64b contain a rousing debate between the Sages concerning:

• the circumstances under which worshipping an idol is idolatry,
• which idols may be worshipped without indulging in idolatry,
• which parts of child sacrifice in what combination are punishable, and
• how children may be sacrificed without violating Leviticus.

“Of late, numerous attempts have been made to prove that in sacrificing their children to Moloch the Israelites simply thought that they were offering them in holocaust to Yahweh. In other words, the Melech to whom child-sacrifices were offered was Yahweh under another name. “[6]

The article goes on and tries to claim otherwise, but any fool can readily see when reading the biblical book of Leviticus for example, that the above statement speaks for itself.

Here is more from the “Come and Hear” Jewish website:
“It is indeed unfortunate that the Jewish religion has not repudiated the doctrine that children may be sacrificed to Moloch. That doctrine, along with prayers in the Jewish liturgy calling for the return of ritual blood sacrifice (see Animal Sacrifice and the Third Temple), surely adds credence to charges that Jews engage in the ritual blood sacrifice of children.”
“Repudiating the Talmud doctrines that approve of ritually sacrificing children (under certain conditions) would go a long way to creating good will between Judaism and people of other religious faiths.” [7]

The Book of Leviticus is chock full of specific instructions [how to] and demands for living blood sacrifices.

Below are direct quotes taken from the Jewish Torah. Given the extensive and horrendous treatment of innocent animals, it is no wonder that the Jews invented industrial farming. This sort of thing is in their nature.

(LEV 1:1) The LORD called to Moshe, and spoke to him out of the Tent of Meeting, saying, (LEV 1:2) "Speak to the children of Yisra'el, and tell them, 'When anyone of you offers an offering to the LORD, you shall offer your offering of the cattle, from the herd and from the flock.

(LEV 1:3) "'If his offering is a burnt offering from the herd, he shall offer a male without blemish. He shall offer it at the door of the Tent of Meeting, that he may be accepted before the LORD.

(LEV 1:5) He shall kill the bull before the LORD. Aharon's sons, the kohanim {priests}, shall present the blood and sprinkle the blood around on the altar that is at the door of the Tent of Meeting.

(LEV 1:10) "'If his offering is from the flock, from the sheep, or from the goats, for a burnt offering, he shall offer a male without blemish.
(LEV 1:11) He shall kill it on the north side of the altar before the LORD. Aharon's sons, the kohanim {priests}, shall sprinkle its blood around on the altar.

(LEV 1:14) "'If his offering to the LORD is a burnt offering of birds, then he shall offer his offering of turtledoves, or of young pigeons.
(LEV 1:15) The kohen {priest} shall bring it to the altar, and wring off its head, and burn it on the altar; and its blood shall be drained out on the side of the altar;
(LEV 1:16) and he shall take away its crop with its filth, and cast it beside the altar on the east part, in the place of the ashes.
(LEV 1:17) He shall tear it by its wings, but shall not divide it apart. The kohen {priest} shall burn it on the altar, on the wood that is on the fire. It is a burnt offering, an offering made by fire, of a sweet savor to the LORD.

(LEV 3:1) "'If his offering is a sacrifice of shalom offerings; if he offers it from the herd, whether male or female, he shall offer it without blemish before the LORD.
(LEV 3:2) He shall lay his hand on the head of his offering, and kill it at the door of the tent of meeting: and Aharon's sons the kohanim {priests} shall sprinkle the blood on the altar round about.

(LEV 3:7) If he offers a lamb for his offering, then he shall offer it before the LORD;
(LEV 3:8) and he shall lay his hand on the head of his offering, and kill it before the tent of meeting: and Aharon's sons shall sprinkle its blood on the altar round about.

(LEV 3:12) "'If his offering is a goat, then he shall offer it before the LORD:
(LEV 3:13) and he shall lay his hand on its head, and kill it before the tent of meeting; and the sons of Aharon shall sprinkle its blood on the altar round about.

(LEV 4:4) He shall bring the bull to the door of the Tent of Meeting before the LORD; and he shall lay his hand on the head of the bull, and kill the bull before the LORD.
(LEV 4:5) The anointed kohen {priest} shall take some of the blood of the bull, and bring it to the Tent of Meeting.
(LEV 4:6) The kohen {priest} shall dip his finger in the blood, and sprinkle some of the blood seven times before the LORD, before the veil of the sanctuary.
(LEV 4:7) The kohen {priest} shall put some of the blood on the horns of the altar of sweet incense before the LORD, which is in the tent of meeting; and he shall pour out all the blood of the bull out at the base of the altar of burnt offering, which is at the door of the Tent of Meeting.

(LEV 4:11) The bull's skin, all its flesh, with its head, and with its legs, its innards, and its dung, (LEV 4:12) even the whole bull shall he carry forth outside the camp to a clean place, where the ashes are poured out, and burn it on wood with fire. Where the ashes are poured out it shall be burned.

(LEV 4:16) The anointed kohen {priest} shall bring of the blood of the bull to the Tent of Meeting:
(LEV 4:17) and the kohen {priest} shall dip his finger in the blood, and sprinkle it seven times before the LORD, before the veil.
(LEV 4:18) He shall put some of the blood on the horns of the altar which is before the LORD, that is in the Tent of Meeting; and the rest of the blood he shall pour out at the base of the altar of burnt offering, which is at the door of the Tent of Meeting.

(LEV 4:24) He shall lay his hand on the head of the goat, and kill it in the place where they kill the burnt offering before the LORD. It is a sin offering.
(LEV 4:25) The kohen {priest} shall take some of the blood of the sin offering with his finger, and put it on the horns of the altar of burnt offering. He shall pour out the rest of its blood at the base of the altar of burnt offering.

(LEV 5:7) "'If he can't afford a lamb, then he shall bring his trespass offering for that in which he has sinned, two turtledoves, or two young pigeons, to the LORD; one for a sin offering, and the other for a burnt offering.
(LEV 5:8) He shall bring them to the kohen {priest}, who shall first offer the one which is for the sin offering, and wring off its head from its neck, but shall not sever it completely.
(LEV 5:9) He shall sprinkle some of the blood of the sin offering on the side of the altar; and the rest of the blood shall be drained out at the base of the altar. It is a sin offering.

(LEV 7:2) In the place where they kill the burnt offering, he shall kill the trespass offering; and its blood he shall sprinkle on the altar round about.

(LEV 8:18) He presented the ram of the burnt offering: and Aharon and his sons laid their hands on the head of the ram.

(LEV 8:19) He killed it; and Moshe sprinkled the blood on the altar round about.

(LEV 8:22) He presented the other ram, the ram of consecration: and Aharon and his sons laid their hands on the head of the ram.
(LEV 8:23) He killed it; and Moshe took some of its blood, and put it on the tip of Aharon's right ear, and on the thumb of his right hand, and on the great toe of his right foot.
(LEV 8:24) He brought Aharon's sons; and Moshe put some of the blood on the tip of their right ear, and on the thumb of their right hand, and on the great toe of their right foot; and Moshe sprinkled the blood on the altar round about.

(LEV 9:12) He killed the burnt offering; and Aharon's sons delivered the blood to him, and he sprinkled it on the altar round about.

(LEV 9:18) He also killed the ox and the ram, the sacrifice of shalom offerings, which was for the people: and Aharon's sons delivered to him the blood, which he sprinkled on the altar round about (LEV 16:14) He shall take some of the blood of the bull, and sprinkle it with his finger on the mercy seat on the east; and before the mercy seat he shall sprinkle some of the blood with his finger seven times.

(LEV 16:15) "Then he shall kill the goat of the sin offering, that is for the people, and bring his blood within the veil, and do with his blood as he did with the blood of the bull, and sprinkle it on the mercy seat, and before the mercy seat

(LEV 16:18) "He shall go out to the altar that is before the LORD and make atonement for it, and shall take some of the bull's blood, and some of the goat's blood, and put it on the horns of the altar round about.
(LEV 16:19) He shall sprinkle some of the blood on it with his finger seven times, and cleanse it, and make it holy from the uncleanness of the children of Yisra'el.

(LEV 17:11) For the life of the flesh is in the blood; and I have given it to you on the altar to make atonement for your souls: for it is the blood that makes atonement by reason of the life.

(LEV 22:29) "When you sacrifice a sacrifice of thanksgiving to the LORD, you shall sacrifice it so that you may be accepted.

(LEV 22:19) that you may be accepted, you shall offer a male without blemish, of the bulls, of the sheep, or of the goats.
(LEV 22:20) But whatever has a blemish, that you shall not offer: for it shall not be acceptable for you.
(LEV 22:21) Whoever offers a sacrifice of shalom offerings to the LORD to accomplish a vow, or for a freewill offering, of the herd or of the flock, it shall be perfect to be accepted; there shall be no blemish therein.
(LEV 22:22) Blind, injured, maimed, having a wart, festering, or having a running sore, you shall not offer these to the LORD, nor make an offering by fire of them on the altar to the LORD.
(LEV 22:23) Either a bull or a lamb that has any deformity or lacking in his parts, that you may offer for a freewill offering; but for a vow it shall not be accepted.
(LEV 22:24) That which has its testicles bruised, crushed, broken, or cut, you shall not offer to the LORD; neither shall you do thus in your land.
(LEV 22:25) Neither from the hand of a foreigner shall you offer the bread of your God of any of these; because their corruption is in them. There is a blemish in them. They shall not be accepted for you.'"

(LEV 22:26) The LORD spoke to Moshe, saying,
(LEV 22:27) "When a bull, or a sheep, or a goat, is born, then it shall remain seven days with its mother; and from the eighth day and thenceforth it shall be accepted for the offering of an offering made by fire to the LORD.
(LEV 22:29) "When you sacrifice a sacrifice of thanksgiving to the LORD, you shall sacrifice it so that you may be accepted

(LEV 23:19) You shall offer one male goat for a sin offering, and two male lambs a year old for a sacrifice of shalom offerings

(NUM 7:41) and for the sacrifice of shalom offerings, two oxen, five rams, five male goats, and five male lambs a year old: this was the offering of Shelumi'el the son of Tzurishaddai.

(DEU 12:11) then it shall happen that to the place which the LORD your God shall choose, to cause his name to dwell there, there shall you bring all that I command you: your burnt offerings, and your sacrifices, your tithes, and the heave-offering of your hand, and all your choice vows which you vow to the LORD.

About this capture

Exposing the Old Testament

Most Christians and many others believe the Judeo/Christian Bible to be the word of "God." In truth, nearly everything within the Bible was stolen and corrupted from Pagan religions that predated Judeo/Christianity from hundreds to thousands of years, from all around the world, and in particular, the Far East.

"We shall destroy God" - quote from the Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion.

The Hebrew written "Five Books of Moses" also known as the "Pentateuch", along with the "Torah" were STOLEN and CORRUPTED from the Egyptian "TAROT." Note- "Torah" is an anagram of "Tarot." The most noted example of the Tarot is the 78 card pack sold in many stores now-a-days and used for fortune telling. The Tarot consists of five suits [where the five was stolen and corrupted from]: the wands/rods of fire, the swords of air, the cups of water, the pentacles of earth, and the trump of quintessence/ether. The trump suit was omitted from the standard deck of playing cards, and all that remains of the trump is the Fool card, which was kept as the Joker. All of these are elements [fire, earth, air, water and ether] of the human soul and the message of the Tarot aside from its divination capabilities is the Magnum Opus, which leads to physical and spiritual perfection and immortality. All of this was stolen and corrupted into a fictitious history of the Jews, which has nothing whatsoever to do with spirituality.

The Jewish Talmud instructs the Jewish people to destroy Gentiles and enslave them, as "YHVH" in reality is the Jewish people.

Quote from the Talmud:
Sanhedrin 58b. If a heathen [Gentile] hits a Jew, the Gentile must be killed. Hitting a Jew is the same as hitting God.

The fictitious Jewish "God" "Yaweh/Jehova's" name was inserted, replacing the names of many Gentile/Pagan Gods. The entity "Jehova" is fictitious. The name "Jehova" was stolen from the Roman God "Jove" for one.
"The pious Dr. Parkhurst. . . proves, from the authority of Diodorus Siculus, Varro, St. Augustine, etc., that the Iao, Jehova, or ieue, or ie of the Jews was the Jove of the Latins and Etruscans..." "YHWH/IEUE was additionally the Egyptian Sun God Ra: Ra was the father in heaven, who has the title of 'Huhi' the eternal, from which the Hebrews derived the name 'Ihuh.'" "Jewish mystical tradition viewed the original Jehova as an androgyne, his/her name compounded as Jah [jod] and the pre-hebraic name of Eve, Havah, or Hawah, rendered he-vau-he in Hebrew letters. The four letters together made the sacred Tetragrammaton, YHWH, the secret name of God..." We can also see where the antagonistic story of Zeus [Jove] and Prometheus was used to promote the concept of a rebellious God who was condemned and ostracized for bringing knowledge to humanity." 1 Humanity's original religion was polytheistic [having many different Gods]. In the original Hebrew Bible, the word "Elohim" is used. "In spite of the monotheistic endeavors of the compilers and editors of the book of Genesis, struggling to proclaim faith in a sole deity in a world that in those days believed in many gods, there remain numerous slip-ups where the biblical narrative speaks of gods in the plural. The very term for 'deity,' [when the Lord is not specifically named as Yaweh], is not the singular El but the plural Elohim. 2

The dual aspect of Christianity was stolen from the duality of Zoroastrianism, which preceded the Christian religion by centuries. 3 Yaweh/Jehova replaced Ahura Mazda, and the Old Gods who were the Original Gods [Ahriman, which is Aryan and means "noble" in Sanskrit] were labeled as "evil" in order to establish the supreme monotheism of Yaweh/Jehova. The Original Gods were turned into Demons and monsters which represented evil.4 Most wound up in the "Goetia." Note the similarity of the root "Goet" meaning "Devil" and the derogatory Jewish word for Gentile, which is "Goy" or plural, "Goyim."

This excerpt quote from the Catholic Encyclopedia is very revealing:
In the same way the Greeks and Romans may have worshipped their divinities, fondly believing them to be good. But the Christian Scriptures declare that all the gods of the Gentiles are demons.
Catholic Encyclopedia: Devil Worship

DEMONS ARE THE GODS OF THE GENTILES!!!!

Mithra, the celestial intermediary between Ahura Mazda and Angra Manyu [Ahriman], has numerous striking parallels with the Nazarene "Jesus Christ." Mithra was a savior, who like the Nazarene was announced by prophets, whose birth took place in a cave [many accounts of the birth of the Nazarene claim that he also was born in a cave], and the appearance of an exceptional star. Mithra would later supplant Vishnu, who in pre-Zoroastrianism Vedism had been the world's savior.5

The following is proof of the many different and diverse sources of which the authors of the Judeo/Christian Bible stole from:

THE CREATION/GENESIS:
The Enuma Elish predated the bible by a minimum of 1,000 years, and is presumed to be much older. The tablets are now in the British Museum.
The Atrahasis Story predates the biblical Genesis account by over 1,000 years or more.
Both of these creation accounts predate Christianity and the Judeo/Christian Bible by centuries. Both reveal there were "GODS" not "One God." This is where the Jews made mistakes, along with the many contradictory scriptures. It is glaringly obvious the Judeo/Christian Bible is not the word of "God." The foolish bible thumping idiots rant and rave how "God is perfect." Right there is another contradiction. For a long list of endless contradictions, click here
Both of these creation accounts predate Christianity and the Judeo/Christian Bible by centuries. Both reveal there were "GODS" not "One God."

Genesis Chapter 1, verse 26 reads: "And God said "let us make man in our image, after our likeness...."
This right here debunks the Jewish monotheistic Yaweh myth.
The extra-terrestrial God, known as Ea [Satan] created human beings through genetic engineering, and several other Gods/Goddesses were involved in the creation. See the image of the Sumerian Creation below. This was originally carved in rock, thousands of years old; predating Judeo/Christianity.

THE FLOOD
The Flood Story from Gilgamesh predates the Christian account by well over 1,000 years or more.
The Judeo/Christian Bible claims that "Yaweh" incited the flood. In truth, "Enlil" allowed the flood to take place. Tracing Enlil's origins here on earth, we have found he is also known as "Bel" which evolved into the name "Baal" and eventually "Beelzebub" who was God of the Philistines.

The "Flood" is another ancient ALLEGORY that was STOLEN and corrupted from the original Pagan religions and has to do with the flood of energy during the working of the Magnum Opus, after which there are visions of colors indicating an important stage has passed. The allegory of the colors is where the Jewish scriptwriters got the "rainbow" and "Jacob's coat of colors" [the aura]. Allegories and CONCEPTS were STOLEN and corrupted into unsavory Jewish characters for Gentiles to slavishly worship. Sacred religious teachings intended for humanity to evolve spiritually were desecrated and replaced with Jewish literary trash. These FICTITIOUS Jewish characters have NOTHING whatsoever to do with spirituality or advancing one's soul.

"Noah" built an ark

EA warned "ZIUSUDRA" aka "UTNAPISHTIM," not "Noah" about the impending flood and instructed him on building an ark. The legend is Sumerian and Akkadian/Babylonian in origin. The "Atrahasis Epic" is the Akkadian/Babylonian account of the Great Flood.

A "dove" returned to the ark with an olive branch signifying the flood was over and the waters receded. In the original Sumerian account, a RAVEN, instead of a "dove" finds dry land. 6

THE TOWER OF BABEL

AGAIN, more than one God is involved. Also, the Gods departed from the Earth during the flood. Note "GODS."

The Bible claims that "Yaweh" confused the languages of the people's constructing the Tower of Babel. This is not so. AGAIN, the Jewish authors of the Judeo/Christian Bible screw up and evidence of more than one God is plain to see:

Genesis Chapter 11; verse 7:

"Let us go down and there confound their language that they may not understand one another's speech." AGAIN, more than one God is involved. Note the "us."

The "Tower of Babel" is another ALLEGORY. In ancient times, humans could communicate telepathically, without words. This was taken from us, but is now becoming a reality again as many of us are experiencing this through the opening of the mind and soul through power meditation.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

Many of the Old Testament laws, along with the Ten Commandments were stolen from:

The Code of Hammurabi

Below is a photo of the basalt stele showing the Sumerian Sun God Shamash giving Hammurabi the tablet listing the laws. "Shamash" is also known as "Azazel," the leader of the so-called "Fallen Angels," the "Igigi" Nordic extra-terrestrials who took human wives.

Example: Exodus 20:

16 Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.

Stolen from the Code of Hammurabi, 3: "If a seignior came forward with false testimony in a case, and has not proved the word which he spoke, if that case was a case involving a life, that seignior shall be put to death."

More stolen from the Code of Hammurabi:
Exodus 21:24 Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot,

Hammurabi 196: "If a seignior has destroyed the eye of a member of the aristocracy, they shall destroy his eye."
Hammurabi 200: "if a seignior has knocked out a tooth of a seignior of his own rank, they shall knock out his tooth."

The Sumerian Code
The Ur-Nammu Code is the oldest Ancient Near Eastern law code recovered by archeologists. The Sumerian Code from 1800 BCE belongs to this oldest enduring legal tradition.
The Hittite Code
While Hittite law was similar in many ways to the Hammurabi law codes the “Hittite Code” containing two hundred paragraphs of regulations demonstrates a tolerance for sexual immorality with a strong emphasis upon financial concerns. The Hittites cultivated barley and wheat, brewed a barley beer. Silver pieces were circulated as currency.
The Middle Assyrian Code Decreed by Tiglath-Pileser I, Emperor of Assyria from 1115-1077 BCE. Originally a legal code emphasizing the social concerns and interests of the Assyrian Government. Discovered in 1903 at Ashur in Iraq. Written in Cuneiform on 15 baked clay tablets. Numerous laws in the biblical books of Exodus, Deuteronomy and Leviticus have been stolen from The Assyrian Code.
The Neo-Babylonian Code
The writings in the biblical book of PROVERBS were STOLEN from numerous sources:
The Words of Ahiqar
Ahiqar was an advisor to Sennacherib, king of Assyria from 704-681 BCE. In 1906 German archaeologists excavated a copy of his teachings, inscribed upon eleven sheets of palimpsest papyrus, from the debris of Elephantine which is today part of the city of Aswan in Southern Egypt.

Parallels:

Whoso curseth his father or his mother, his lamp shall be put out in obscure darkness. Prov.20:20

STOLEN from:
"Whosoever takes no pride in the names of his father and mother, may the sun not shine upon him." Ahiqar 9:137

He who spares the rod hates his son, but he who loves him is careful to discipline him;

Prov. 13:24

STOLEN from:
"With-hold not thy son from the rod, else thou wilt not be able to save him from wickedness." Ahiqar 6:81

Through patience a ruler can be persuaded, and a gentle tongue can break a bone.
Prov. 25:15

STOLEN from:
Soft is the utterance of a king; yet it is sharper and stronger than a two-edged knife."
Ahiqar 7:105
The Teachings of Amen-em-opet
Amen-em-opet, son of Ka-nakht, taught in Egypt between 1200 - 1000 BCE. The text is found in British Museum Papyrus 10474 and a portion on a writing tablet in Turin, Italy. The papyrus is said to have come from Thebes and is speculated to be of the 10th and 6th centuries BCE.

Parallels:

Pay attention and listen to the sayings of the wise; apply your heart to what I teach, for it is pleasing when you keep them in your heart and have all of them ready on your lips.
Prov. 17-18

STOLEN from:
Give they ears, hear what is said,
Give they heart to understand them
Let them rest in the casket of thy belly
That they may be a key in they heart."
Amen-em-opet 3:10

Do not exploit the poor because they are poor and do not crush the needy in court.
Prov. 22:22

STOLEN from:
"Guard thyself against robbing the oppressed
And against overbearing the disabled."
Amen-em-opet 2:1

If your enemy is hungry, give him food to eat; if he is thirsty give him water to drink. In doing this, you will heap burning coals on his head and the Lord will reward you.
Prov. 25:21-22

STOLEN from:
"Leave him in the arms of the god;
Fill his belly with bread of thine
So that he may be sated and may be ashamed."
Amen-em-opet 5:8

Do not move and ancient boundry stone or encroach on the fields of the fatherless, for their Defender is strong; he will take up their case against you.
Prov. 23:10-11

STOLEN from:
"Do not carry off the landmark at the boundaries of the arable land
Nor disturb the position of the measuring cord
Be not greedy after a cubit of land
Nor encroach upon the boundaries of a widow."
Amen-em-opet 7:12-15

Better a little with the fear of the Lord than great wealth with turmoil
Prov. 15:16
Better a little with righteousness than much gain with injustice.
Prov. 16:8

STOLEN from:
Better is a measure that the god gives thee,
Than five thousand taken illegally."
Amen-em-opet 8:19
[This one also smacks of the Nazarene feeding the "five thousand."]

Better a meal of vegetables where there is love than a fattened calf with hatred. Prov. 15:17
Better a dry crust with peace and quiet than a house full of feasting, with strife. Prov. 17:1

STOLEN from:
"Better is bread when the heart is happy

Than riches with sorrow."
Amen-em-opet 9:9

Do not make friends with a hot-tempered man, do not associate with one easily angered, or you may learn his ways and get yourself ensnared, Prov. 22:24-25

STOLEN from:
"Do not greet thy heated in thy violence
Nor hurt thy own heart thereby"
Amen-em-opet 13:8

You will vomit up the little you have eaten and will have wasted your compliments.
Prov. 23:8

STOLEN from:
"The mouthful of bread too great thou swallowest and vomitest up."
Amen-em-opet 14:13

Do not boast about tomorrow, for you do not know what a day may bring forth.
Prov. 27:1

STOLEN from:
"Do not spend the night fearful of the morrow
At daybreak what is the morrow like?
Man knows not what the morrow is like."
Amen-eo-opet 19:11

Many are the plans in a man's heart, but it is the Lord's purpose that prevails. Prov. 19:21
In his heart a man plans his course, but the Lord determines his steps.
Prov. 16:9

STOLEN from:
"One thing are the words which men say Another is that which God does."
Amen-em-opet 19:15

Have I not written thirty sayings for you, sayings of counsel and knowledge.
Prov. 22:20

STOLEN from:
"See thou these thirty chapters
They entertain; they instruct
They are the foremost of all books."
Amen-em-opet 27:5

The Teachings of Ptah-Hotep
Ptah-Hotep taught around 2450 BCE, during the 5th Dynasty of The Old Kingdom of Egypt. His teachings were preserved on both clay tablets and papyrus sheets and are presently at the Bibliothéque Nationale in Paris. In addition to the book of Proverbs, many of the writings in the books of Ecclesiastes and Sirach were also stolen from the Teachings of Ptah-Hotep.
Egyptian Love Songs
The Egyptian Love Songs are 1,000+ years older than those in the Song of Solomon. The parallels are unmistakable. The Papyrus Harris 500 was discovered at Thebes in the Ramesseum Complex in the Karnak Temple.
The Visions of Nefertiti
Both the biblical books of "Kings" and "Daniel" echo the scenario of entertaining a king along with the prediction of his downfall. The theme of the slave who would be king is repeated in "The Story of Hagar [Genesis chapters 16 and 21]. The Visions of Nefertiti dates back to the reign of the Pharaoh Snefru [2680- 2565 BCE]. He calls for Nefertiti to entertain him. Nefertiti predicts the downfall of the Old Kingdom and the establishment of a new Dynasty by Amen-em-het I [1991- 1786 BCE].
Also, most of what was written in the biblical books of Exodus, Leviticus and Deuteronomy was taken from the above- NOT from "Yaweh." There are xians who are stupid enough to believe their "Yaweh" is the only god. "No Gods before me."

MORE STOLEN:

The Story of Joseph and Potipher's wife; Genesis Chapter 39. STOLEN from The Story of Anubis and Bata [Egyptian in origin].

PARALLELS TO THE MOSES STORY:
The birth of Sargon
The birth of Horus

1. The secrecy factor surrounding the birth
2. The placing in a reed basket, covered with bitumen
3. The setting in a river

4. The recovery and adoption Much of the biblical book of PSALMS was stolen from:
The Hymn to the Aton
The Hymn to the Aton can be found in the Tomb of Eye. 1365- 1348 BCE.
The Stories of Ba'al and Anat
Inscribed upon six clay tablets, in the Ugaritic Language; cuneiform script. Circa 1400 BCE.
The Lament for Ur
Many of the writings in the biblical book of Joshua were stolen from:

The El Amarna Letters
The Stele of Merneptah
More stolen writings in the biblical book of Judges:

The Story of Aqhat
The Diary of Wen-Amon
The Gezer Almanac
The biblical books of Samuel and Kings also contain much stolen material from:

The Mari Prophecies
The Stele of Mesha
The Karatepe Inscription
The Annals of Shalmaneser III
The Black Obelisk of Shalmaneser III
The Annals of Tiglath-Pileser III
The Annals of Sargon II
The Siloam Inscription
The Yavne-Yam Inscription
The Lachlish Letters
The Arad Ostraca
The Annals of Sennacherib
The Annals of Nebuchadnezzar II
More stolen material in the biblical books of Ezra and Nehemiah from:

The Cylinder of Cyrus
More stolen stories and writings in the biblical books of Job and Ecclesiastes:

The Story of Keret
Here is the original story of Job, written in the Ugaritic language [Cuneiform Script], composed circa 1400 BCE by "Ilimilku The Scribe." This epic involves "Keret" and the God "El." NOT Job and jehova. Keret's family tradgedies and illness are comparable with the story of Job. In the original tale, "Satan" never even entered into the picture.
The Sufferer and the Soul
The Farmer and the Courts
The Sufferer and the Friend
As we can see from the above, the Christian "religion" is based upon stolen material that has been twisted, warped and distorted to manipulate, confuse and incite fear into humanity. It has taken the ORIGINAL GOD AND CREATOR OF HUMANITY EA/ENKI aka SATAN/LUCIFER and turned him into an assumed enemy of humanity. "We shall destroy God" -- The Protocols of the Learned Elders of Zion. Christianity has been used to blaspheme, ridicule and malign the Old Gods, create estrangement and enmity from legitimate dieties of which it replaced with the false god "Yaweh/Jehova." In addition, this monstrous program is used as a tool to create a defenseless mentality; that of a slave, to psychologically disarm the Gentile populace into accepting communism, another Jewish brotherhood program.

It is often said that the true evil cannot create anything. Everything of the true evil is artificial. In truth, "God" and the "Devil" are backwards. This foul religion's entire foundation is composed of stolen material. In addition, it is anti-life and suicidal. There is nothing at all spiritual about it. The purpose of all of this is to completely cut humanity off from the true Creator God who is Satan. In doing so, the reptilian aliens and those who are working for them will achieve the goal of enslaving the human race through the Jewish program of communism. Satan gives us knowledge and power. Without him, humanity has nothing. The true evil is also known as the master of lies and deception. What greater deception is there for followers of these religious scams to curse and blaspheme their own Creator? Many of the ancient Pagan religions such as the Greeks and the Romans shared legends and pantheons. This is entirely different from Christianity, that has worked relentlessly and brutally to destroy any and all other religions, claiming it to be the only true one.

About this capture

Exposing Christianity

Because of being steeped in, believing in, and living a lie, in the advanced stages of Christianity, the Christian takes on an artificial appearance and begins to look like the lie:
The well-known pasty look with the smiley mask. The lie emerges in the physical self.

Christians incessantly claim that "The Devil Deceives" "The Devil Deceives..." What they fail to see is that everything they accuse the Devil of is really the God that they worship, known as Yaweh/Jehova.
Everything that the Christians accuse the "Devil" of, is really of their own God. This is proven in the Biblical scriptures:
"A Murderer and a Liar from the Beginning"
"Human Hating"
"He Deceiveth all of the Nations"

It has been stated that "In the end, the truth will come out and many will want to join on at the last minute, but it will be too late for them..."

Concerning the Powers of the Mass Mind:
"The power of the united thought of a number of people is always far more than the sum of their separate thoughts: it would be more nearly represented by their product"

The following articles provide proof that everything in the Christian religion and in the bible has been STOLEN from other religions that predated it from all around the world. Christianity is a tool for removing spiritual/occult knowledge from the populace so this power can be kept in the hands of a few to manipulate and enslave the masses.

To really understand the Bible and see the truth, one must be very well educated in the occult. The mass mind is very powerful. When one studies long enough and acquires advanced knowledge of the occult, the truth is utterly shocking. The entire Judeo/Christian Bible is a hoax of catastrophic proportions with a very clear objective using subliminal means and the channeled psychic energy of believers.

Whenever Christianity or its cohorts took control of a country or region, the ancient spiritual texts and records were removed and/or destroyed and those who had spiritual knowledge were mass murdered by the Inquisition. This took out of circulation the very knowledge those in power have used and still use to manipulate the ignorant population using spiritual/occult power. The Bible is one of the most powerful subliminal tools used by a select few to enslave the masses. Most people are unaware of this because they lack knowledge regarding the occult, thought power, and psychic energy. The powers that be work to reinforce the belief that the occult, powers of the mind and spirit are nonsense or just plain bunk.

Destroying the ancient records allowed an alternative invented "history" to be written which has disconnected humanity from its true origins. Controlling history is important because if one manipulates how people see what we call the past, this influences the present and the future.

The entire Bible is an extremely powerful subliminal tool full of occult numbers, messages, allegories, and stolen material, which has been corrupted from ancient religions. In addition, this book has been infused with psychic energy and power to instill fear and to make it believable. When one's eyes are opened and one has the necessary knowledge, the spell will no longer be effective. The entire underlying theme of the Judeo/Christian Bible is the establishment of the fictitious history of the Jewish people in the mass mind. What the mass mind believes has power and the energy to make manifest in reality as thoughts are energy

There are vacuum-sealed vaults in the Vatican library containing thousands upon thousands of ancient esoteric books from around the world that have been stolen and hoarded over the years and kept out of public circulation. The Catholic Church, which is the root of the Christian religion, is controlled by a secret society that has abused occult power to enslave the masses. The end goal is the total enslavement of humanity, which they have worked towards relentlessly and ruthlessly.

All of this has directly affected each and every one of us. Humanity has suffered unnecessarily because of the denial of this knowledge. People have been coerced over the centuries into paying for their own damnation to the tune of billions and billions of dollars to keep this lie prospering and continuing strong. The survival and prosperity of this vicious hoax on humanity requires only ONE thing- A LACK OF KNOWLEDGE!

Contrary to what most people have been indoctrinated with, Judaism, Christianity and Islam are relatively new religions. Humanity goes back tens of thousands of years. These three have worked relentlessly to keep us from spiritual/occult knowledge and using this power, of which all of us have.

These so-called "religions" are built upon murder, torture, and lies and the only way any lie of this magnitude can survive is to create more and more lies and destroy the peoples who know the truth. Christianity is nothing more than a program. There is nothing religious or spiritual about it. Millions of people suffer depression, hopelessness, and confusion about life. The soul needs light and very few know this or actively practice the power meditation that will literally "save" their own souls. Because of a lack of knowledge and ignorance of the occult, Humanity as a whole has been placed under a powerful spell using occult power and indoctrinated not to question, concerning these three so-called "religions." This has been reinforced by centuries of Christians being duped into supplying their psychic energy and souls to be channeled into perpetuating this lie, which in the end, will only benefit a select few.

Everything that the Christians accuse the "Devil" of, is really of their own God.

The Jewish people have succeeded in deceiving the Gentile people into cursing and blaspheming our True Creator God for centuries. The word "Satan" means "enemy" and "adversary" in Hebrew. Everything in the Judeo/Christian Bible has been stolen from Gentile Pagan religions predating Judaism from hundreds to thousands of years. The Jews cannot create. They have successfully and forcefully removed occult/spiritual knowledge and power from the Gentiles using the Christian Church as their primary tool.

Christianity from its very inception was and is nothing more than a program. The agenda of this program is for the destruction of Aryan peoples (descended from the God known as "Satan") using occult powers, and for the eventual enslavement of all remaining races with the top Jews in total control. The Jews have been using black magick against the Gentiles who have been powerless to fight back, for centuries. This knowledge was forcefully and systematically removed from Aryan peoples by the "Inquisition" where Aryan priests and spiritual leaders such as the Druids and many others were tortured to death and murdered en masse. The White race suffered the most with the "witch trials" where entire villages were nearly wiped out in Europe, namely Germany.

*Any Gentile who erroneously believes or even argues that the Jews are not a race, needs a serious reality check. The Jewish reptilian genes are passed onto Jewish offspring from a Jewish mother. Orthodox Jews only recognize Jews being born of a Jewish mother as legitimate Jews. We have heard of "half Jews" "quarter jews" "part jews" but one does not state "I am a half Catholic" or how about a quarter Lutheran, or maybe "part Muslim" "or that there is some 'Buddhist blood' in the family. Also, as

George Lincoln Rockwell once stated- "You can draw a picture of a Jew, but you can't draw a picture of a Catholic or a Protestant."

The Jews add insult to injury. They have had our own people screw themselves for centuries and do their destructive work against our race for them. Christianity has been one of their biggest and most lethal programs and tools to accomplish these ends. Look around you- Christianity is promoted at every turn. Trillions upon trillions of dollars, psychic energy and effort have gone into pushing this lie on the public with no opposition whatsoever. The truth has been vehemently suppressed and kept financially broke. The only information available about "Satanism" must conform to Jewish standards; i.e. the bible, the kabalah (which the Jews stole from the Egyptians and desecrated and perverted), the qlippoth and the general teachings that Satan (our original Creator God and his Demons [the Old Gentile Gods]) are monstrous enemies of humanity. In truth, they are enemies of the Jewish people and this is why the Jews have put forth every effort to keep us from them. By cutting us off from our Gods and removing all knowledge, especially that concerning the soul, the mind, and psychic power from the Gentiles, the Jews have had us over a barrel for centuries and unless we empower ourselves NOW, our imminent destruction is near. Heinrich Himmler knew this and along with Adolf Hitler and other Third Reich leaders, he worked relentlessly to eradicate the Jewish program of Christianity from Germany.

THE JEWS CAN ONLY BE DEFEATED THROUGH THEIR AGE OLD NEMESIS, SATAN!! "Satan" is the Hebrew word for "Enemy." Satan wants occult knowledge and power back in the hands of the Gentiles.

One can argue the average Jew on the street is just as ignorant concerning this as are most Gentiles; the truth is- the Elders of Zion, the controlling Jewish families, and of course the Hasidic ultra-orthodox Jewish religious movement know all about this and keep it secret, even from most of their own people. They know when they drop the veil and obtain total control, their own will only be too happy to join them.

What the Jewish program of Christianity has done:

Removed all spiritual and occult knowledge from the Gentile populace of wherever it took root, placing the Gentiles at the mercy of powerful spiritual powers directed by the Jews; namely "Black Magick." The Jews have been using black magick against the Gentiles who have been powerless to fight back, for centuries.
A false history was invented and lies were forced on the Gentile populace in whatever regions it took hold.

The Vatican removed the ancient texts of Gentile peoples and replaced them with the Christian religion- a false Jewish messiah, a false Jewish “god,” and Jewish angels. With the Jewish goal of world dominance, this comes when their messiah appears. The psychic energy of Christians in fervent prayer to their pseudo-savior the Nazarene who, like the Jewish messiah is supposed to “come again” is channeled into making the Jewish messiah a reality. Rewriting of history is also prevalent in the schools these days.

Gentile religious leaders were savagely tortured and murdered. Those who had any knowledge were hunted down as “witches” and murdered by the Inquisition.

The Gentile Gods and namely the True creator God Ea (The one known as "Satan") were cursed and labeled as Demons and “evil”; monsters. In today’s Jewish run media, our Aryan Gods are ridiculed and defamed as spooks and ghouls, and made to look like buffoons, red with horns or hideous looking; out to “possess” people’s souls at the mere thought of them and take control of their minds.

Gentile celebrations and practices are labeled as “evil,” anything that has to do with gentile culture, namely Aryan Culture. The Feast of Beltane, which originally was celebrated on the eve of May 1, was further blasphemed by the May Day celebrations of Jewish communism (which is outlined and implemented in the Judeo/Christian bible from beginning to end). May 1st is a powerful date as the earth is aligned to specific energies where certain rituals and actions have more power. This has been a tactic of the Jewish people- to add blasphemy against our Gods by instituting their death dealing programs and celebrating them on traditional Pagan holidays, no different than the Catholic Church replacing Pagan holidays with their false and stolen twisted garbage. This date was maligned as “evil” again, and like our Samhain, of “the Devil” to keep the deluded Christian masses as far from their religious roots as possible, again, using fear to control the human mind and blasphemous denigration against our Gods.
The Christian Church, especially the fundies have been working overtime to weed out Pagan practices such as Yule trees and Rabbits and eggs. Halloween has also come under intense attack. Unbeknownst to most of the public, the fundamentalist xians have received millions and millions of dollars in government grants. The Jews control all of the world's money and only programs that are to their benefit get the most funding. Those they deem as harmful are kept financially destitute. The Christian religion works overtime to remove every last trace of Gentile holiday celebrations, Gentile culture and above all, the Gentile Gods from the populace and to push their Jewish filth to replace it. Few realize just how Jewish our culture has become.

Programs which work to hook our people up with Jewish angels in addition to their “God” are heavily financed and funded. Modern Freemasonry, the Illuminati, the Golden Dawn, the Rosicrucians and even Jehova’s Witnesses receive much from Rockefeller and others who run the tri-lateral commission (trinity). (The name "Rockefeller" has its roots in “Rockenfelder” typically Jewish, though few Jews ever admit their Jewishness as they are ashamed). It is more than obvious the forementioned brotherhoods are not in any way really of Satan. The Christians are forever hyping about the underground so-called "Satanist conspiracy" which is what the Jews want as this is a distraction and bait; playing both sides against the middle. Given the large amounts of wealth and power freemasonry, the illuminati and others possess, they have done little to advance Satanism. They only give more credence to the Christian allegations that keep misinformation and discrimination against Satanists at an all time high and maintain Christianity and its related ilk as legitimate religions. These groups have been infiltrated and taken over by Jews who see to it nothing in the way of really advancing Satanism is accomplished. The perverted Jewish version of the kabalah which was stolen from the Gentiles has been instituted in nearly every prominent occult society. Through this, their fictitious “God” and foul angels are elevated to the tree of life while the Gentile Gods comprise the Qlippoth of death and filth.

The entire underlying theme of the Judeo/Christian Bible is the establishment of the fictitious history of the Jewish people in the mass mind. What the mass mind believes has power and the energy to make manifest in reality as thoughts are energy.
The theme of the Bible is as follows:

1. The Jews claim themselves the "Chosen People" who are given rights by a "God" to invade Gentile lands, slaughter the inhabitants and seize the land for themselves.

2. The Jewish people invade and mass murder Gentiles of all different nations, defile and desecrate their Gods and religious teachings.

3. Gentile peoples are than conquered by the Jews. The Gentile men mass murdered and their women and children raped and sold into slavery.

Leviticus 26:7 And ye shall chase your enemies, and they shall fall before you by the sword.

Numbers 21:34 And the LORD said unto Moses, Fear him not: for I have delivered him into thy hand, and all his people, and his land; and thou shalt do to him as thou didst unto Sihon king of the Amorites, which dwelt at Heshbon.
Numbers 21:35 So they smote him, and his sons, and all his people, until there was none left him alive: and they possessed his land.

Numbers 31:7 And they warred against the Midianites, as the LORD commanded Moses; and they slew all the males.
31:8 And they slew the kings of Midian, beside the rest of them that were slain; namely, Evi, and Rekem, and Zur, and Hur, and Reba, five kings of Midian: Balaam also the son of Beor they slew with the sword.
31:9 And the children of Israel took all the women of Midian captives, and their little ones, and took the spoil of all their cattle, and all their flocks, and all their goods.
31:10 And they burnt all their cities wherein they dwelt, and all their goodly castles, with fire.
31:14 And Moses was wroth with the officers of the host, with the captains over thousands, and captains over hundreds, which came from the battle.
31:15 And Moses said unto them, Have ye saved all the women alive?
31:17 Now therefore kill every male among the little ones, and kill every woman that hath known man by lying with him.
31:18 But all the women children, that have not known a man by lying with him, keep alive for yourselves.

FOR THOSE OF YOU WHO HAVE BEEN BRAINWASHED INTO "CHRISTIAN IDENTITY" THE ABOVE PEOPLES SUCH AS THE "MIDIANITES" HAPPEN TO BE GENTILE!!

4. Enter the Jewish "messiah" in the form of "Jesus."
The nazarene is nothing more than a fictitious character stolen from some 18 Gentile Pagan Gods such as Odin who hung from a tree. The mass mind has been forcefully indoctrinated with this "Second coming of Christ" which is just enough to bring about the Jewish messiah who will unite the Jewish people (they seized Palestine because it is a very important center for their three religions of Judaism, Christianity and Islam and located upon powerful ley lines), enslave the Gentile world, and place the Jews as rulers of the earth.

Quote from the Jewish Talmud:
Simeon Haddarsen, fol. 56-D: "When the Messiah comes every Jew will have 2800 slaves."

Another VERY revealing quote from the Catholic Encyclopedia:
"In the same way the Greeks and Romans may have worshipped their divinities, fondly believing them to be good. But the Christian Scriptures declare that all the gods of the Gentiles are demons."

Hell is Christianity.

Christian priests invented sin to give them power over you. They set themselves up as those who could remove the disease they had infected you with. Remove the priests and you remove the sin.

Christians ludicrously claim that Jesus Christ gave up his life for us. Er, no he didn't. Fact 1) "God" can't die. Fact 2) It was Jesus Christ (the Christian God) who claimed that humanity was guilty of Original Sin, and who sentenced all of us to hell. To "save us", all he had to do was love us and remove his psychotic decree that all human beings were going to hell because some primitive couple (Adam and Eve) ate some fruit! Fact 3) God ordered Abraham to sacrifice his son to test Abraham's faith - how sick can you get? God later sacrificed his own son, Jesus. Therefore, this is incontestably a Satanic "God" of human sacrifice, and even divine sacrifice.

Only mentally ill people with no moral compass, no conception of the difference between good and evil, would worship this cosmic monster, a clear and present enemy of the human race.

Wake up, Christians. Stop worshiping the Devil and calling him God. How evil are you people? There is no universe in which a morally perfect being would order a father to murder his son, and no universe in which a morally perfect being would demand the sacrifice of his OWN son (who also happens to be himself if we take seriously the crazy notion of the Christian Trinity). Not only are Christians evil, they are also retarded. For shame.

If a Nazi ordered a Jewish father to kill his son, he would be branded a monster and the Jew would fight him to the death. If “God” gives exactly the same order, the Jewish father falls on his knees and worships him. WTF! The order is equally evil in both cases. Would the Nazi claim he was only "testing the Jew's faith"? Is that an excuse? Seriously?!

If we purge the world of Christianity, we purge the world of sin, evil, Devil worship, stupidity, and the lust for human sacrifice.

Christians are monsters. They are without exception psychopaths who would murder their own children if their God ordered it. If they would do that to their own children, what would they do to YOUR children?!!!

The demon that possessed the poor girl in "The Exorcist" was, in truth, none other than the Christian God. Who will exorcise the world of Christianity? The Christian God sucks cocks in hell!

High Priests of Hell (The Anti-Christian Series Book 1) by [Weishaupt, Adam]
High Priests of Hell (The Anti-Christian Series Book 1)

You may think you are familiar with three of the most important Biblical figures: Abraham, Moses and St Paul. You may have a Hollywood image in your head of noble, heroic men, inspired by God and doing his holy work. Think again. It's time to discover the sordid truth.

Abraham was the world's first recorded psychopath, willing to slaughter his own son as a human sacrifice to his "God". Moses was a prince of Egypt, and one of the followers of the heretic Pharaoh Akhenaten. The Hebrews loathed him and wanted to kill him, eventually succeeding at the foot of Mount Sinai, the Mountain of "God", during the massacre of the "golden calf".

St Paul was a high priest of the cult of Mithras who had the audacity to blend it with Judaic Messianism, giving birth to the bizarre religion of Christianity.

Jesus, Prince of Hell (The Anti-Christian Series Book 2) by [Weishaupt, Adam]
Jesus, Prince of Hell (The Anti-Christian Series Book 2)

You many think you know everything you need to know about the historical figure "Jesus Christ", but every cherished belief you have about him is false. Jesus Christ is a fake and a fraud. For a start, his name wasn't Jesus Christ but Yehoshua ben Yosef ("Joshua son of Joseph"). And, just as his name is a fiction designed to disguise the truth, so is everything else about him.

We will demonstrate the following:

1) The central promise of Christianity - the resurrection of the dead - is utterly wrong. As we shall show, the Christian Gospels demonstrate conclusively that Jesus Christ was reincarnated, not resurrected.

2) Jesus Christ was the central figure in one of the most audacious plots in history.

3) He was head of an Elite Family that wished to rule the world. The Family exists to this day, and their conspiracy is unchanged.

4) Jesus Christ was the leader of an army that sought to overthrow Roman rule in Judea. He was executed as a violent revolutionary attempting to set himself up as a king.

5) Judas, the infamous traitor, was the brother of Jesus Christ.

The greatest lie and fraud in history has endured too long.

Is God Evil? (The Anti-Christian Series Book 3) by [Weishaupt, Adam]
Is God Evil? (The Anti-Christian Series Book 3)

It's the ultimate question. Is the God of the Jews, Christians and Muslims evil? Is he at the core of the malignancy in the human condition? Does his malevolent will touch every corner of the earth, spreading discord, division, conflict and hate?

Three thousand years of the history of the "People of the Book" provide a tale of unparalleled savagery and intolerance, all in the name of an alleged God of justice, forgiveness, love, peace, mercy and compassion.

The ancient secret society known as the Illuminati are advocates of the Gnostic religion that defines the Biblical Creator as none other than Satan.

The serpent, a symbol of wisdom, tried to enlighten the human race via the fabled Tree of Knowledge in the Garden of Eve, but humanity chose faith over knowledge and thus became the pawns of the Prince of Darkness, the Lord of the Flies.

Is earth actually hell?

Christianity: The Devil's Greatest Trick (The Anti-Christian Series Book 4) by [Weishaupt, Adam]
Christianity: The Devil's Greatest Trick (The Anti-Christian Series Book 4)

"One wanders to the left, another to the right. Both are equally in error, but, are seduced by different delusions." - Horace

It's a simple fact that most Christians know next to nothing about Christianity. How many people are aware of the many heresies that were stamped out by the early Church? Had any of these heresies triumphed, the world would be a very different, and much saner place.

Find out about the monstrous St Augustine and his doctrines of grace, Original Sin, Predestination and the Total Depravity of the human race. This "saint" was happy to send to hell unbaptised babies that died in infancy. His great enemy was the humane and rational Celtic monk Pelagius. The great tragedy of Christianity is that it listened to Augustine rather than Pelagius.

What was the Donatist heresy and what does it tell us about the dangers of modern Islam? How does the rivalry between Celtic and Rangers football clubs in Scotland reflect much of Western world history?

Are the 12 Steps of Alcoholics' Anonymous tantamount to cult indoctrination? Were Freud and Augustine both obsessed with their parents? What is Hieros Gamos? Should it be a regular feature of the modern world?

Were many people in the ancient world known, like Jesus Christ, as the "Son of God"? Are the Christian concepts of the Holy Trinity and the incarnation of God in man the most logically incoherent doctrines ever devised?

Who was the heretic Nestorious and why was he so significant? Why is reincarnation much more logical than resurrection? Why is it that so few Christians understand the concept of resurrection?

Why should the story of the Garden of Eden be completely reinterpreted for the contemporary world? What is the difference between consciousness and bicameralism? Are Jews, Christians and Muslims actually bicameral, i.e. belonging to an earlier and more stupid stage of human mental evolution?

Were the Jews advocates of temple prostitution, even within the confines of Solomon's holy temple to Yahweh?

Can the tales of Abraham, Jephtha and the Garden of Eden prove conclusively that the Jews, Christians and Muslims worship the Devil?

Did the sacred Jewish Covenant with Yahweh result in all Jews going to hell according to the Christian doctrine of Original Sin? Is everyone mentioned in the Old Testament even now in hell?

Anyone well-versed in the study of Judaism, Christianity and Islam cannot fail to conclude that the God of these religions must be considered to be identical with Satan, i.e. Abrahamists are under the power of the Devil, hence why they have committed so many evil acts throughout history.

By the time you have finished this book, you will be able to demonstrate that anyone who does not repudiate Abraham's God is evil.

Do not read this book if you are a closed-minded Abrahamist. The material in this book is provided by the Pythagorean Illuminati, the oldest secret society in the world, and is not for petty, cheap, narrow-minded religious fanatics.

Abraham: The World's First Psychopath (The Anti-Christian Series Book 5) by [Weishaupt, Adam]
Abraham: The World's First Psychopath (The Anti-Christian Series Book 5)

If you consider it impossible that the True God of moral perfection would ever order a father to make a human sacrifice of his innocent son for no reason other than to demonstrate absolute, mindless obedience, then the God of Abraham is not God.

So who is he? The ancient Gnostics had the obvious answer - he's Satan. Does that not immediately explain the horrific history of the Abrahamic religions and their grotesque propensity for violence and terrorism?

Abrahamism is a terrorist religion, led by a terrorist God who demands unwavering obedience even when it contradicts morality.

The Jews, Christians and Muslims who trace their common ancestry to Abraham are thus revealed as evil Devil worshippers.

This book provides a theological and philosophical dissection of the tale of Abraham from the Jewish, Christian and Muslim perspectives.

It reveals Abraham as one of the most evil men in history and unquestionably the world's first psychopath. Like the Nazis, he placed obedience to a tyrannical monster above human life, even that of his own son.

In the Islamic telling of the tale, "Satan" three times pleads for Ishmael's life, and Abraham violently drives him away by pelting him with stones.

When "God" orders the murder of the innocent and "Satan" begs for the innocent to be saved, which is truly "God"? Abrahamism is the logical inversion of good and evil. It has elevated Satan to the throne of God.

Do not read this book if you are a closed-minded Abrahamist or a conspiracy theorist. The material provided by the Pythagorean Illuminati is not for petty, cheap, narrow-minded religious fanatics and those who believe in Reptilians.

Resurrection: The Origin of a Religious Fallacy (The Anti-Christian Series Book 6) by [Weishaupt, Adam]
Resurrection: The Origin of a Religious Fallacy

(The Anti-Christian Series Book 6)

Most people who believe in resurrection have no idea what this concept truly entails. It is in fact the product of Jewish Messianic theory which says that a Jewish priest-king will one day establish an earthly paradise, and all the righteous Jews who died before the establishment of "the Kingdom" will be raised from the dead to enjoy the rewards of remaining faithful to Jehovah. Since they are coming back to this earth, they need their body back, i.e. they need to undergo bodily resurrection.

The problem with the Messianic theory of the soul is that it is incompatible with the God theory of the soul that talks of an immaterial heaven and immaterial soul. What possible meaning could physical resurrection have in a non-physical afterlife?

This book by the Pythagorean Illuminati, the oldest secret society in the world, traces the extraordinary story of how the materialistic theory of resurrection became hopelessly confused with the Platonic theory of the immaterial soul, leading to insanely illogical religions such as Christianity.

The Jehovah's Witnesses claim that 144,000 souls will enjoy an immaterial existence in heaven with God, while the rest of the Jehovah's Witnesses will have to settle for a material terrestrial paradise. This reveals the extent to which radically different views of the soul have been combined in crazy combinations.

The Jehovah's Witnesses also claim that all non Witnesses will be annihilated. How is it possible for an immortal soul to cease to exist?

We will explore the endless confusion that surrounds resurrection theory and show that Catholicism, the main Christian religion, actually has much more in common with Platonic reincarnation theory, and, logically, ought to reject resurrection.

The book explores the links between the Jewish concept of Sheol and the ancient Greek Hades, and investigates why Judaism has so little doctrinal interest in the afterlife. It also probes the mystical Jewish ideas of Kabbalah that advocate reincarnation over resurrection.

Do not read this book if you are an Abrahamist. This book is only for rational, intelligent, open-minded people.

The religion of the Illuminati is called Illumination and belongs to the Gnostic tradition of enlightenment. It is opposed to religions of faith. It endorses Platonist reincarnation.

The Disproof of Christianity (The Anti-Christian Series Book 7) by [Weishaupt, Adam]
The Disproof of Christianity (The Anti-Christian Series Book 7)

This incendiary book constitutes a formal theological disproof of the central tenets of Christianity - the Trinity and the Incarnation. Christianity is a staggeringly false religion. It's so wrong it's almost comical. The reason why most Christians continue to believe is that a) they have been relentlessly brainwashed by their parents, schools, communities and governments, and b) they don't actually know anything about Christianity.

The astounding absurdities of Christianity can be understood only by examining the many heresies that sprang up in the early centuries of the Church, challenging every aspect of orthodox Christian thinking. These heresies have boxed in Christianity so much that all that's left is a statement of what Christianity ISN'T rather than what it is. Any Christian theologian who attempts to meaningfully explain the Trinity and Incarnation instantly succumbs to one heresy or another. It's only possible to be a Trinitarian Christian by stating the empty formula "three persons in one God" over and over again, without ever daring to specify what, exactly, "person" means. The mantra is devoid of meaning and any attempt to assign meaning slips into heresy. Similarly, Christians mouth the hollow formula of the Incarnation: "two natures, human and divine, in one person" without having any idea of what "nature" actually means. Is nature consciousness, personality, will, intelligence? Does Christ have a human soul, a divine soul, or both? Is he a God-man mutant, a hybrid? In what way can he be said to have any genuine connection with humanity at all? How does the Incarnation fit with the Trinity?

Is the human nature of Jesus Christ now part of the Trinity? If not, where did it go? Was Jesus Christ simply a super-angel? If he was "begotten" of God then he can't BE God since there must have been a time before he was begat when he didn't exist. A non-existent God is an impossibility therefore the Son of God can't be God. This is the basis of the famous Arian heresy, which came perilously close to becoming Christian orthodoxy. Who is Jesus Christ's father? Shouldn't it be God the Son since God the Son and Jesus Christ (the Son of God) are supposed to be one and the same being? Yet the "infallible" scriptures clearly identify the Holy Spirit, and not God the Son, as Jesus' father. Jesus has the WRONG father. Christianity should, logically, be all about the HOLY SPIRIT since he provides Jesus' divine element. Christianity is so dumb it couldn't even rationally work out who Jesus' father must be in order for it to make any sense.

Theologically, Christianity is a joke. Its myriad errors are simply ignored. No Christian cares about the truth content of what they believe. Christians have no relationship whatsoever with the truth.

Ponder the science of divine conception. How does the process work scientifically? Could you write 1,000 words on the subject? If you can't, of what value is your Christian faith? You'll believe anything, won't you, whether or not you understand it.

Other topics included in this book are: 1) the three-stage degeneration of the rich, 2) do truth genes exist? 3) the mysteries of Jewish toilet paper, 4) do Muslims believe in a flat earth and semi-circular planetary orbits (and planets that are "hiding", waiting to be activated by the Will of Allah, when they are out of sight?), 5) do Muslims believe in seven flat earths in a stack beneath seven heavens? 6) is the Church of England on the verge of extinction? 7) the trials, tribulations and treachery of "The Movement".

This is a book by the Pythagorean Illuminati. We are the sworn enemies of Abrahamism, privileged elites, libertarianism, and the infantile legions of conspiracy theorists. Don't read our books if you are a stupid, cheap and petty person. Only seekers of true enlightenment will profit from reading our work.

Jehovah: The First Nazi (The Anti-Christian Series Book 8) by [Weishaupt, Adam]
Jehovah: The First Nazi (The Anti-Christian Series Book 8)

This may be the most controversial book ever published. It does the unthinkable: it puts Jehovah on trial for his life for conspiracy against the human race, war crimes, and crimes against humanity. All of the charges that were brought against the Nazis at the Nuremberg Trials could equally be leveled against Jehovah. All of the atrocities of the Holocaust are prefigured in the Jewish Bible, meaning that, morally, Judaism must be put in the dock just as Nazism was.

The evidence against Jehovah, furnished by direct quotations from the Bible, is overwhelming and unarguable. His guilt can be established beyond any reasonable doubt. This monster attempted to exterminate the entire human race in the event known as The Flood. He allowed eight chosen people to survive: Noah and his family. So, given that the survivors were hand-picked by him, why has humanity again fallen into total evil? This time it was nothing to do with Adam and Eve. This time it was entirely Jehovah's responsibility and choice.

The answer to the riddle is that Jehovah himself is irredeemably evil. The ancient Gnostics long ago concluded that the God of the Old Testament was the Devil. Why has the rest of the world been so slow on the uptake?

The Pythagorean Illuminati, the oldest secret society on earth, are Gnostics and here they present the prosecution case against the most evil being in history: Jehovah, the Torture God, the Terror God, Satan himself.

Do not read this book if you are an Abrahamist. This book is only for rational, intelligent, open-minded people prepared to accept facts. The "facts" are those presented in the Bible and believed by billions. They show that for thousands of years, humanity has been worshiping not God but the Devil.

This book is written in polemical style, in keeping with the need for humanity to be shocked into waking up to the dreadful truth at the heart of our world. Evil is everywhere because all Abrahamists are Devil-worshipers. You don't believe us? Read the case for the prosecution. Change your life. Turn to the light of the True God - Abraxas.

Evangelical Protestants: Mad, Bad and Dangerous to Know (The Anti-Christian Series Book 9) by [Weishaupt, Adam] Evangelical Protestants: Mad, Bad and Dangerous to Know

(The Anti-Christian Series Book 9)

It's a striking feature of Protestantism that so few Protestants know anything about the founder of their religion. Martin Luther, the prophet of Protestant irrationalism, is one of the most pathological figures in religious history. Would any sane, rational person wish to subscribe to a religion whose founder declared, "Reason is the Devil's greatest whore; by nature and in manner of being she is a noxious whore; she is a prostitute, the Devil's appointed whore; whore eaten by scab and leprosy who ought to be trodden under foot and destroyed, she and her wisdom... Throw dung in her face to make her ugly. She is and she ought to be drowned in baptism... She would deserve, the wretch, to be banished to the filthiest place in the house, the toilet."

Protestantism is the gospel of unreason, and attracts only the irrational. It's difficult to imagine that the reformation of Catholicism could produce something even worse, but Luther managed it. Protestantism is practically deranged, reflecting the deeply disturbed mind of its founder.

Making extensive use of Luther's own words, the Pythagorean Illuminati, the oldest secret society in the world, have produced an incendiary, polemical attack on the religion that has come to be most closely identified with the evils of Western capitalism. Protestantism is the religion of Mammon. It is an anti-religion. It is for people who do not want to relinquish belief in God, but have no interest in expressing any authentic spirituality and love for their fellow man.

Do not read this book if you are an Abrahamist. This book is only for rational, intelligent, open-minded people.

The religion of the Illuminati is called Illumination and belongs to the Gnostic tradition of enlightenment. It promotes reason and knowledge and is totally opposed to religions of faith.

Year Zero

The following article is very revealing regarding the true purpose of Christianity and how it directly ties into Jewish communism.

It is important to know how the "Year Zero" used with the communist take-over of a country was also used with the B.C. and the A.D. in history [history has been extensively corrupted by the Jews to conform to and to advance their agenda with enslaving the world]. The B.C. stands for "Before Christ" and the A.D. which means "Anno Domini."

"The term Anno Domini is Medieval Latin, translated as In the year of the Lord, or in the Year of Our Lord. It is occasionally set out more fully as Anno Domini Nostri Iesu (or Jesu) Christi ("In the Year of Our Lord Jesus Christ")."1

The supposed birth of the fictitious Nazarene was the "Year Zero."

"The idea behind Year Zero is that all culture and traditions within a society must be completely destroyed or discarded and a new revolutionary culture [my note Jewish Communism] must replace it, starting from scratch. All history of a nation or people before Year Zero is deemed largely irrelevant, as it will ideally be purged and replaced from the ground up.

In Cambodia, teachers, artists, and intellectuals were especially singled out and executed during the purges accompanying Year Zero."

"Some call it Marxism ' I call it Judaism."
' Rabbi S. Wise, The American Bulletin, May 5, 1935

"The Communist soul is the soul of Judaism. Hence it follows, that, just as in the Russian revolution the triumph of Communism was the triumph of Judaism...."
(A Program for the Jews and Humanity, Rabbi Harry Waton, p. 143-144).

Year Zero the doctrine of Communist Cambodia, which was called the perfect Communist revolution and was supported and put into power by the International Jews via their strong hold of Communist China:
https://josministries.prophpbb.com/topic2027.html

It was the literal sweeping away of all civilization, the destruction of the family unit; the family unit was to come to an end forever, the abolishment of all progress, music, money, hospitals, learning, books, and reading, and the total liquidation of the educated and professional classes through mass-murder. Even love between humans was banned, with people being murdered for even smiling at each other in the slave camps. Even the word sleep was banned. People were worked from 3 am in the morning to 11 pm at night on a bowl of rice. If they failed to work or if they didn't work fast enough because of extreme exhaustion, they where killed on the spot. They were forced to live in barns without walls between them and where not allowed to speak to each other. They were reduced to animals. The point of life was to work and die. The entire population was forced into this, and all of their culture was exterminated along with the people, and replaced by a slave society of Jewish Communism.

All of the books within the great library of the capital were confiscated and destroyed by the communists. The cities were emptied and one third of the population was slaughtered. Any educated person was tortured to death after being arrested and taken to the infamous prisons and politically declared as a "sub person." Their pictures were taken upon arrest and the pictures of their murdered and tortured corpses were taken again after being killed. Their throats were slit and their bodies were mutilated and carved open by the Communist executioners. The majority of towns were all leveled into the ground and the populations marched into a real life Orwellian Animal Farm. Entire families where slaughtered. Women were even killed for the crime of "being too beautiful." People were put to death for being able to read.

The start of Year Zero was the end of life in now Communist Cambodia. This was the perfect and total implementation of Jewish Communism. This is exactly what we saw with the programs of Jewish Christianity and Islam. Jewish Christianity also started the calendar at year Zero, AD, and did to entire societies what the Communists did to Cambodia. The libraries where destroyed, the spiritual and thus educated classes where slaughtered and tortured, the cities destroyed, all knowledge destroyed, art destroyed, music banned, and even bathing was banned as "Pagan practice," with being able to read made a capital punishment by the Church. The Church Commissars bragged they had wiped away the entire civilization and culture, and in its place was the slave society of Primal Communism, run by the Party in the form of the Church. Year Zero.

As the Communist Advisor to Putin, Alexander Dugin stated in an interview: https://www.counter-currents.com/2012/07/interview-with-alexander-dugin/

This fits well with the orthodox critique of western Christianity. It is easy to see that the secularization of western Christianity gives us liberalism. The secularization of the orthodox religion gives us Communism' Communism is the final Perfection of Christianity.

"The world revolution which we will experience will be exclusively our affair and will rest in our hands. This revolution will tighten the Jewish domination over all other people." 'Le Peuple Juif, February 8, 1919.

"The idea behind Year Zero is that all culture and traditions within a society must be completely destroyed or discarded and a new revolutionary culture [my note Jewish

Communism] must replace it, starting from scratch. All history of a nation or people before Year Zero is deemed largely irrelevant, as it will ideally be purged and replaced from the ground up.

In Cambodia, teachers, artists, and intellectuals were especially singled out and executed during the purges accompanying Year Zero."

If you think it is over just remember' Communism is the Jewish Messianic Movement created and directed by the Elders of Zion such as the Rothschilds. They are still around and still working relentlessly to turn the whole world into Year Zero, which is the final goal of Judaism. Zionism is Judaism: https://josministries.prophpbb.com/topic8274.html Zionism is Judaism "In the time of the Messiah the Jews will exterminate all the peoples of the earth."

Excerpt from 'The Elephant Walk Cookbook' by Longteine De Monteiro and Katherine Neudstadt ' 1998:
'The country was deeply embroiled in a civil war between the U.S. 'backed government of Lon Nol, who had replaced King Norodom Sihanouk following a coup in 1970, and the communist insurgent revolutionaries, the Khmer Rouge, who were thought to be close to victory.

Three weeks earlier I had flown to Phnom Penh to try to persuade members of Ken's family and my own to come to Taiwan (as my parents had done earlier that year), where they could wait out the end of the war in safety. Ken had already lost relatives in the fighting, and the capital was under intense fire the whole time I was there. I was able to get only three nephews and one of my younger sisters to leave Phnom Penh with me. My mother, who had come back to be with her mother, was too old to travel, refused to leave.

Later in the afternoon of April 17th, Ken and I listened to a radio report announcing that Cambodia had fallen to the Khmer Rouge and that the rebel troops were already marching into Phnom Penh as victors. And then there was silence. Days went by, then weeks and months, with no other official report or word of what was happening, except for the rumors and unbelievable first-person accounts of people who had somehow managed to escape: stories of savage cruelty and violence, of sanctioned executions and random murders at the hands of the Khmer Rouge. We heard of the immediate, massive evacuation of millions from the capital over the course of a single day, but we could not believe it, nor could we imagine that the stories of resettlement into forced labor camps around the countryside ' part of the revolution's plan to return Cambodia to a wholly peasant society were true.

Ken was trying desperately to make contact with the new government, to get news of our families and to get permission to return home, where he hoped to offer his diplomatic skills. When we finally did get some official word, it came from the CIA, informing us that my older sister's husband, the Chief of the Cambodian Navy, was believed to have died at the hands of the Khmer Rouge on that first day of the takeover. It was assumed that my other relatives who held similar government positions ' including my oldest brother, who had been the Minister of Commerce ' had also died.

Suddenly all possibility of returning to Cambodia vanished completely, and at the same time that Ken's job in Taiwan was becoming increasingly untenable ' how could he be a representative if there was no country to represent? For Ken, this meant the dramatic and untimely end to his career. For the family, it meant that we were forced into exile.

In the months stretching into years that followed, we eventually found asylum in France and ended up in B'ziers, a small Spanish-influenced town in the southwest, not far from the Mediterranean, where the surviving members of my family were reconvening. My two brothers-in-law and my brother were presumed dead, and there continued to be no word of my mother or grandmother, my younger sister or any of Ken's family. Of these, only my sister survived. As our savings dwindled and it became unmistakably clear that there would be no future diplomatic positions for Ken, we faced a financial crisis.'

'With the fracturing of the Khmer society in recent years, like many of its cultural treasures, the finest of the traditional cuisine of Cambodia ' both simple and elaborate ' stands to be lost forever. Most of the people who cared deeply about food have been killed, have fled the country, or have died of old age. At this point, I wouldn't know where to begin to look for the old women who used to guard the secrets of the best spices for curry, preserving them for future generations to enjoy. I assume that these women are all gone.'

"YEAR ZERO': THE CIVIL WAR'
"in April 1975, the communists finally took control of the country. Under Pol Pot and a cadre of close advisors, the new revolutionary government set about to create overnight, a quasi-Marxist-Leninist peasant society by returning Cambodia to what they called Year Zero: a society, as one historian characterized it, without 'money, markets, formal education, Buddhism, books, private property'and freedom of movement' and ' needless to say ' without cuisine.

The impact of this era, the time of 'the killing fields' can hardly be overstated. Less than four years later, in 1979, the Khmer Rouge were driven out by Vietnamese forces in retaliation for their attack on Vietnam, but their policies and practices had resulted in the deaths of more than a million Cambodians from starvation, overwork, disease and torture. Decades later, the country still struggles to rebuild.'

In ‘Eisenhower’s Death Camps’: A U.S. Prison Guard Remembers
By Martin Brech

In October 1944, at age eighteen, I was drafted into the U.S. army. Largely because of the “Battle of the Bulge,” my training was cut short, my furlough was halved, and I was sent overseas immediately. Upon arrival in Le Havre, France, we were quickly loaded into box cars and shipped to the front. When we got there, I was suffering increasingly severe symptoms of mononucleosis, and was sent to a hospital in Belgium. Since mononucleosis was then known as the “kissing disease,” I mailed a letter of thanks to my girlfriend.

By the time I left the hospital, the outfit I had trained with in Spartanburg, South Carolina, was deep inside Germany, so, despite my protests, I was placed in a “repo depot” (replacement depot). I lost interest in the units to which I was assigned, and don’t recall all of them: non-combat units were ridiculed at that time. My separation qualification record states I was mostly with Company C, 14th Infantry Regiment, during my seventeen-month stay in Germany, but I remember being transferred to other outfits also.

In late March or early April 1945, I was sent to guard a POW camp near Andernach along the Rhine. I had four years of high school German, so I was able to talk to the prisoners, although this was forbidden. Gradually, however, I was used as an interpreter and asked to ferret out members of the S.S. (I found none.)

In Andernach about 50,000 prisoners of all ages were held in an open field surrounded by barbed wire. The women were kept in a separate enclosure that I did not see until later. The men I guarded had no shelter and no blankets. Many had no coats. They slept in the mud, wet and cold, with inadequate slit trenches for excrement. It was a cold, wet spring, and their misery from exposure alone was evident.

Even more shocking was to see the prisoners throwing grass and weeds into a tin can containing a thin soup. They told me they did this to help ease their hunger pains. Quickly they grew emaciated. Dysentery raged, and soon they were sleeping in their own excrement, too weak and crowded to reach the slit trenches. Many were begging for food, sickening and dying before our eyes. We had ample food and supplies, but did nothing to help them, including no medical assistance.

Outraged, I protested to my officers and was met with hostility or bland indifference. When pressed, they explained they were under strict orders from “higher up.” No officer would dare do this to 50,000 men if he felt that it was “out of line,” leaving him open to charges. Realizing my protests were useless, I asked a friend working in the kitchen if he could slip me some extra food for the prisoners. He too said they were under strict orders to severely ration the prisoners’ food, and that these orders came from “higher up.” But he said they had more food than they knew what to do with, and would sneak me some.

When I threw this food over the barbed wire to the prisoners, I was caught and threatened with imprisonment. I repeated the “offense,” and one officer angrily threatened to shoot me. I assumed this was a bluff until I encountered a captain on a hill above the Rhine shooting down at a group of German civilian women with his .45 caliber pistol. When I asked, “Why?,” he mumbled, “Target practice,” and fired until his pistol was empty. I saw the women running for cover, but, at that distance, couldn’t tell if any had been hit.

This is when I realized I was dealing with cold-blooded killers filled with moralistic hatred. They considered the Germans subhuman and worthy of extermination; another expression of the downward spiral of racism. Articles in the G.I. newspaper, Stars and Stripes, played up the German concentration camps, complete with photos of emaciated bodies. This amplified our self-righteous cruelty, and made it easier to imitate behavior we were supposed to oppose. Also, I think, soldiers not exposed to combat were trying to prove how tough they were by taking it out on the prisoners and civilians.

These prisoners, I found out, were mostly farmers and workingmen, as simple and ignorant as many of our own troops. As time went on, more of them lapsed into a zombie-like state of listlessness, while others tried to escape in a demented or suicidal fashion, running through open fields in broad daylight towards the Rhine to quench their thirst. They were mowed down.

Some prisoners were as eager for cigarettes as for food, saying they took the edge off their hunger. Accordingly, enterprising G.I. “Yankee traders” were acquiring hordes of watches and rings in exchange for handfuls of cigarettes or less. When I began throwing cartons of cigarettes to the prisoners to ruin this trade, I was threatened by rank-and-file G.I.s too.

The only bright spot in this gloomy picture came one night when. I was put on the “graveyard shift,” from two to four a.m. Actually, there was a graveyard on the uphill side of this enclosure, not many yards away. My superiors had forgotten to give me a flashlight and I hadn’t bothered to ask for one, disgusted as I was with the whole situation by that time. It was a fairly bright night and I soon became aware of a prisoner crawling under the wires towards the graveyard. We were supposed to shoot escapees on sight, so I started to get up from the ground to warn him to get back. Suddenly I noticed another prisoner crawling from the graveyard back to the enclosure. They were risking their lives to get to the graveyard for something. I had to investigate.

When I entered the gloom of this shrubby, tree-shaded cemetery, I felt completely vulnerable, but somehow curiosity kept me moving. Despite my caution, I tripped over the legs of someone in a prone position. Whipping my rifle around while stumbling and trying to regain composure of mind and body, I soon was relieved I hadn’t reflexively fired. The figure sat up. Gradually, I could see the beautiful but terror-stricken face of a woman with a picnic basket nearby. German civilians were not allowed to feed, nor even come near the prisoners, so I quickly assured her I approved of what she was doing, not to be afraid, and that I would leave the graveyard to get out of the way.

I did so immediately and sat down, leaning against a tree at the edge of the cemetery to be inconspicuous and not frighten the prisoners. I imagined then, and still do now, what it would be like to meet a beautiful woman with a picnic basket under those conditions as a prisoner. I have never forgotten her face.

Eventually, more prisoners crawled back to the enclosure. I saw they were dragging food to their comrades, and could only admire their courage and devotion.

On May 8, V.E. Day [1945], I decided to celebrate with some prisoners I was guarding who were baking bread the other prisoners occasionally received. This group had all the bread they could eat, and shared the jovial mood generated by the end of the war. We all thought we were going home soon, a pathetic hope on their part. We were in what was to become the French zone [of occupation], where I soon would witness the brutality of the French soldiers when we transferred our prisoners to them for their slave labor camps.

On this day, however, we were happy.

As a gesture of friendliness, I emptied my rifle and stood it in the corner, even allowing them to play with it at their request. This thoroughly “broke the ice,” and soon we were singing songs we taught each other, or that I had learned in high school German class (“Du, du, liegst mir im Herzen”). Out of gratitude, they baked me a special small loaf of sweet bread, the only possible present they had left to offer. I stuffed it in my “Eisenhower jacket,” and snuck it back to my barracks, eating it when I had privacy. I have never tasted more delicious bread, nor felt a deeper sense of communion while eating it. I believe a cosmic sense of Christ (the Oneness of all Being) revealed its normally hidden presence to me on that occasion, influencing my later decision to major in philosophy and religion.

Shortly afterwards, some of our weak and sickly prisoners were marched off by French soldiers to their camp. We were riding on a truck behind this column. Temporarily, it slowed down and dropped back, perhaps because the driver was as shocked as I was. Whenever a German prisoner staggered or dropped back, he was hit on the head with a club and killed. The bodies were rolled to the side of the road to be picked up by another truck. For many, this quick death might have been preferable to slow starvation in our “killing fields.”

When I finally saw the German women held in a separate enclosure, I asked why we were holding them prisoner. I was told they were “camp followers,” selected as breeding stock for the S.S. to create a super-race. I spoke to some, and must say I never met a more spirited or attractive group of women. I certainly didn’t think they deserved imprisonment.

More and more I was used as an interpreter, and was able to prevent some particularly unfortunate arrests. One somewhat amusing incident involved an old farmer who was being dragged away by several M.P.s. I was told he had a “fancy Nazi medal,” which they showed me. Fortunately, I had a chart identifying such medals. He’d been awarded it for having five children! Perhaps his wife was somewhat relieved to get him “off her back,” but I didn’t think one of our death camps was a fair punishment for his contribution to Germany. The M.P.s agreed and released him to continue his “dirty work.”

Famine began to spread among the German civilians also. It was a common sight to see German women up to their elbows in our garbage cans looking for something edible — that is, if they weren’t chased away.

When I interviewed mayors of small towns and villages, I was told that their supply of food had been taken away by “displaced persons” (foreigners who had worked in Germany), who packed the food on trucks and drove away. When I reported this, the response was a shrug. I never saw any Red Cross at the camp or helping civilians, although their coffee and doughnut stands were available everywhere else for us. In the meantime, the Germans had to rely on the sharing of hidden stores until the next harvest.

Hunger made German women more “available,” but despite this, rape was prevalent and often accompanied by additional violence. In particular I remember an eighteen-year old woman who had the side of her faced smashed with a rifle butt, and was then raped by two G.I.s. Even the French complained that the rapes, looting and drunken destructiveness on the part of our troops was excessive. In Le Havre, we’d been given booklets warning us that the German soldiers had maintained a high standard of behavior with French civilians who were peaceful, and that we should do the same. In this we failed miserably.

“So what?” some would say. “The enemy’s atrocities were worse than ours.” It is true that I experienced only the end of the war, when we were already the victors. The German opportunity for atrocities had faded, while ours was at hand. But two wrongs don’t make a right. Rather than copying our enemy’s crimes, we should aim once and for all to break the cycle of hatred and vengeance that has plagued and distorted human history. This is why I am speaking out now, 45 years after the crime. We can never prevent individual war crimes, but we can, if enough of us speak out, influence government policy. We can reject government propaganda that depicts our enemies as subhuman and encourages the kind of outrages I witnessed. We can protest the bombing of civilian targets, which still goes on today. And we can refuse ever to condone our government’s murder of unarmed and defeated prisoners of war.

I realize it’s difficult for the average citizen to admit witnessing a crime of this magnitude, especially if implicated himself. Even G.I.s sympathetic to the victims were afraid to complain and get into trouble, they told me. And the danger has not ceased. Since I spoke out a few weeks ago, I have received threatening calls and had my mailbox smashed. But its been worth it. Writing about these atrocities has been a catharsis of feelings suppressed too long, a liberation, that perhaps will remind other witnesses that “the truth will make us free, have no fear.” We may even learn a supreme lesson from all this: only love can conquer all.

This website passes on the knowledge of how we stopped the Abomination of Desolation, why and how our approach worked, and instructs Catholics on how they can stop the New World Order. All of our research is backed up by authoritative texts that are difficult to find. These sources are available for download in our Digital Library in order to expedite your conversion. So if you're done being a follower and want to go on the offensive against the State, Vatican II, the Novus Ordo and all that goes along with it, you're in the right place.

Above Left: The God of Heaven (Our Lady) appears to three children in Fatima, Portugal and gives them instructions for stopping World War I, among other things.
Above Right: the God of Hell (the burning bush Lord) appears to Congress in America and urges them to start World War III.

"...and in the prayers of simple people everywhere, simple people like the Children of Fatima, there resides more power than in all the great armies and statesmen of the world." - U.S. President Ronald Reagan, 1985
In 1917, God appeared to three children in Fatima, Portugal, giving them instructions on how to stop World War I. Our Lady of Fatima gave these instructions in a series of Divine Apparitions that lasted from 1917 to 1944 (above left). To prove Herself, "The Miracle of the Sun" was granted in front of 70,000 onlookers on October 13, 1917.

This website is designed to get straight to the point. We aim to save you from wasting years of reading thousands of pages of heretical garbage written by an army of Satanic Jewish Freemasons posing as holy religious figures. Our objective is to pull you out of the Apocalyptic brainwashing deception that is occurring right before your eyes, engineered and built by those who have a contract with the Devil for fame and fortune. We show you where the secrets of the Novus Ordo revolution can be found, and teach you how to hold your own against an army of heretical subversion artists posing as traditional Catholic Priests.

In the end, your choice will be clear. We're here to give you the secrets you won't find anywhere else. Welcome to the knowledge revolution. Welcome to OurLadyisGod.com.

Shown below is a link to THE WHOLE TRUTH ABOUT FATIMA VOLUME II: The Secret and The Church (page 464): THE ONLY PRINTED BOOK THAT CONTAINS ST. LUCIA'S ACCOUNT OF THE TRINITARIAN THEOPHANY. THIS IS THE BOOK WHICH REVEALS OUR LADY IS GOD THE MOTHER OF THE HOLY TRINITY. St. Lucia was replaced with an actress by Vatican operatives in 1958 or 1959. THE CORRECT ROSARY PRAYER IN LATIN

"Ave Deam Matronam nostrae, gratia plena.
Deum Patrum Spiritum Sanctum tecum.
Sanctam Tuam in mulieribus.
Deam Matronam Nostrae, Matram Deum Jesum Christum, ora pro nobis peccatoribus nunc, et en hora mortis nostrae."

Our Lady appeared to St. Jacinta of the Fatima Appartitions three more times (October 13, 1917 to August 6, 1918), to teach her how to say the Rosary:

Our Ladys Rosary Instructions to St Jacinta
Above: "Jacinta affirms that Our Lady appeared to her another three times... At that time Our Lady taught her how to say the Rosary."

WE HAVE THE REAL THIRD SECRET OF FÁTIMA
THE THIRD SECRET OF FÁTIMA

The Third Secret of Fatima
Translation into English:

January 4, 1944:

Now I will reveal the third part of the secret;

This part is the apostasy in the Church! (1)
Our Lady showed us a vision of someone who I describe as the 'Pope', standing in front of a praising multitude.
But there was a difference with a real Pope, the evil look, this one had eyes of evil. (2)
Then after a few moments we saw the same Pope entering a church, but this church was like the church of hell, there is no way to describe the ugliness of this place, it seemed like a fortress made of gray cement, with broken angles and windows like eyes, there was a beak on top of the building. (3)
We then looked up at Our Lady who said to us:
you have seen the apostasy in the Church, this message can be opened by The Holy Father, but must be announced after Pius XII and before 1960. (4)
During the kingdom of John Paul II the cornerstone from Peter's tomb must be removed and transferred to Fátima.
Because the Dogma of faith is not preserved in Rome, her authority will be removed and given to Portugal. (5)
The cathedral of Rome must be destroyed and a new one built in Fátima. (6)
If 69 weeks after this command is announced Rome continues its abomination, the city will be destroyed. (7)
Our Lady told us this is written, Daniel 9 24-25 and Mathew 21 42-44. (8)

The Corrected Mass Project

We have the Original and Complete 1582-1610 Douai-Rheims Bible

These first and second English translations (1582 and 1635) of the New Testament were very dangerous books for Catholics to own. Many Catholic clergy were tortured in England for distributing these books because they contain the key requirement for a valid baptism (below right). On page 585 (below left), you can find a warning to Catholics about "the Lord" and other heretical phrases.

For proper Catholic Baptism requirements, see this link.

Douai Rheims secrets

“Hell and destruction are before the Lord.” - Proverbs 15:11

"Woe to you that desire the day of the LORD! To what end is it for you? The day of the LORD is darkness, and not light." - Amos, 5:18-19

“For our god is a consuming fire.” - Hebrews 12:29 explaining the fire lord of the Jews' Bible

“...the Lord will deliver him in the evil day.” - Psalm 40:2

“And he said: I will go forth, and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the Lord said: Thou shalt deceive him, and shalt prevail: go forth, and do so.” - 3 Kings 22:22

“And the Lord said: Thou shalt deceive, and shalt prevail: go out, and do so.” - 2 Paralipomenom 18:21

“The LORD has mingled a perverse spirit in her midst” - Isaiah 19:14

“And the king made of the almug wood supports for the house of the LORD, and for the king's house, lyres also and harps for the singers... Now the weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred and sixty-six talents of gold...” - 1 Kings 10:12-14

Morals and Dogma page 321

Above: Freemasonry's books are available for download now. Of note is page 321 of the infamous Masonic Manual "Morals & Dogma," which proves Lucifer is their god. Doubt it not. Above right: rare photograph of the initiation ceremony into Freemasonry (a Jewish cult) which runs all nations, central banks, etc. Initiated in their Catholic heretic outfits, Freemasons promote this "Lord is God" heresy to damn to Hell as many as possible.

Above left: EXACTLY ONE YEAR to the day after the release of this Real Third Secret of Fatima, God Our Lady appears clothed in the sun in Africa, the only known recorded apparition in world history. Above right: EXACTLY SEVENTY WEEKS to the day after the release of this Real Third Secret of Fatima, God Our Lady answers our prayers and shatters the Capitol of the New World Order.

The Illuminati and Freemasonry are the organized and ancient enemy of the Catholic Church. Click on the images below to read what the 1907-1913 Catholic Encyclopedia had to say about them....

The 1883 Catholic Haydock version of the Bible reveals the DaVinci Code, a fake Jesus who has confused theologians for centuries. We have scanned the entire book and have it available for download. Click on the image below...

"...his name was changed into Jehoshuah or Jesus by Moses...In this Josue was to be the chief actor." - 1883 Haydock Douay Rheims, II. THE HISTORICAL BOOKS: THE BOOK OF JOSUE, Scan #0058/1903.

The actor Josue works with Moses to impersonate God Jesus Christ

The Illuminati created the Bible to deceive all nations into believing in Satan

Many miracles are attributed to this website including stopping Freemasonry's Third World War, the destruction of the Washington Monument (the world's largest Illuminati monument) and the U.S. Capitol Dome in 2011, the destruction of Mecca in Saudi Arabia on Sept. 11, 2015, the halting of the planned economic collapse in 2009, the interruption of Superbowl XLVII's Illuminati halftime show, and of course, stopping of the end of the world. Saving the Catholic religion from its demise by Jewish Freemasonry generated so much discussion in occultic circles that it generated one of the internet's longest running thread topics before being shut down in 2014.

The solution for stopping the Apocalypse is simple. Stop saying prayers to the Lord of the Bible. Why? The reason is because the Lord of the Bible is actually Satan, the God of Hell. At the end of the world, humanity is deceived into worshipping this talking fire as their god, and pays the ultimate price.

It doesn't really matter which version of the Bible you use to learn that the Lord is Satan. All Bible versions are Satanic in nature, originally penned by the Jews who murdered God on a cross. All Bible versions purposely deny the Divinity of the Christ, which is required to enter the Door to Heaven.

All Bible versions lead their believers to the God of the Gates of Hell, a deceiving (3 Kings 22:22), jealous (Deuteronomy 4:24), perverse spirit (Isaiah 19:14), who speaks through a burning bush fire (Hebrews 12:29) from his house which is adorned with 666 talents of gold (1 Kings 10:12-14). This is why the Novus Ordo Mass is Bible based, and why the Bible is so often promoted in the mainstream media as the answer to the world's problems.

Today in the West, two billion Protestants and Vatican II Catholics pray to this fire god. In the East, 2 billion Muslims pray to this Biblical Lord, calling him Allah (click for Koran source). At the end of the world, a Third and Final War called Armageddon is engineered by Jewish Freemasonry, setting these two monstrous Bible-based heretical Lord-based religions against each other. This end-times war was actually predicted by the "Pope" of Luciferian Freemasonry, Albert Pike in 1871.

”The Third World War must be fomented by taking advantage of the differences caused by the “agentur” of the “Illuminati” between the political Zionists and the leaders of Islamic World. The war must be conducted in such a way that Islam (the Moslem Arabic World) and political Zionism (the State of Israel) mutually destroy each other. Meanwhile the other nations, once more divided on this issue will be constrained to fight to the point of complete physical, moral, spiritual and economical exhaustionWe shall unleash the Nihilists and the atheists, and we shall provoke a formidable social cataclysm which in all its horror will show clearly to the nations the effect of absolute atheism, origin of savagery and of the most bloody turmoil. Then everywhere, the citizens, obliged to defend themselves against the world minority of revolutionaries, will exterminate those destroyers of civilization, and the multitude, disillusioned with Christianity, whose deistic spirits will from that moment be without compass or direction, anxious for an ideal, but without knowing where to render its adoration, will receive the true light through the universal manifestation of the pure doctrine of Lucifer, brought finally out in the public view. This manifestation will result from the general reactionary movement which will follow the destruction of Christianity and atheism, both conquered and exterminated at the same time.” - 33* Jewish Freemason Albert Pike, 1871.

What is the Blog of Baphomet?

We are magicians who want to create a space to describe our living experience of magick in a way that is informed by many traditions, but strives not to be limited to any one style of occultism. Like Baphomet, our representation of the underlying structure of the universe, we seek to dissolve and recombine. This work will be personal (at times like reading someones magickal diary), and global (exploring the magickal world view as it touches on fields such as technology, politics and social process). We will aim to include as many readers as possible but without dumbing-down and re-hashing. We hope to stimulate discussion and will value your comments.

I am enjoying your posts, and I like the uncluttered layout – the emphasis is on the quality of writing, not on ‘decorating’ the site with fancy flashing images, whistles and bells. This is what I am aiming for on my own blog, please check it over if you feel inclined, comment is always useful. Looking forward to reading more of your posts, I have added you to my google-reader. bright blessings Bella Basura

Deadly Ground Dugway - some background info

l Opaque Proposals:
In Utah, the US Army's Dugway Proving Ground wants a 200% increase in its biodefense activity, including BL3 lab upgrades and another aerosol chamber, a very controversial piece of testing equipment with many potential offensive uses. The Army has produced a huge draft environmental impact assessment (DEIS); but according to Steve Erickson of the Citizens Education Project in Salt Lake City, "The DEIS is 1000 pages long, but it's so vague that it’s impossible to fairly assess what the Army wants to do. They want to conduct many more in-lab and open-air tests, but won't say with what and when or under what conditions until future plans and studies are completed and rubber-stamped by the brass. There is no independent oversight of this facility, and given its penchant for secrecy and its track record of exposing civilians and contaminating the environment with its biological, chemical, and radiological tests, Dugway can’t be trusted with such blanket permission to expand programs and missions.
l credit: Citizens Education Project
Dugway Watchdog -Steve Erickson, Director

"Military watchdogs say it's been tough over the years getting a straight story out of the Army's Dugway Proving Grounds. The sprawling facility has been home to open air testing of the worst poisons known to man and nature....."
"Inside the secret labs at Dugway is a deep-freeze treasure trove of deadly agents, dubbed Pandora’s Icebox. Military watchdog Steve Erickson says: "Anthrax? Yes. Black plague? Yes, and many others. Fever. Lots of fever."

".....In the end, it's critical there be some independent oversight of facilities like this; they can't simply be allowed to operate in complete secrecy."

credit: George Knapp, I-Team Reporter
l FBI Investigating Anthrax, Utah Army Base Connection

(Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists: March/April 2001: Vol. 57, No. 2, pp. 57-61)
...Excerpt: "All U.S. field test sites were abandoned at the end of the war—with the exception of Dugway Proving Ground in Utah. From 1951 to 1969, hundreds, if not thousands, of open-air germ warfare tests were conducted at Dugway on human volunteers and animal test subjects.11 Many of the aerosol dispersal tests during the Cold War introduced non-indigenous diseases (or increased the geographic range of indigenous diseases) to Utah and surrounding states, including encephalomyelitis, Rocky Mountain spotted fever, psittacosis, Q fever, anthrax, brucellosis, plague, tularemia, and hydatid disease, all of which are now considered endemic among the native wildlife. In 1959 and 1960 an epidemic of Q fever was found among Utah desert wildlife, but it is not known whether the disease was a result of Dugway's human and animal field trials, which began in the early 1950s. The Utah Health Department has also reported cases of Q fever among humans—all subsequent to the 1955 human and animal field tests and releases at Dugway."

Little progress has been made to date in identifying, let alone containing or eliminating the contamination at Dugway, despite the requirement to do so established in the Defense Environmental Restoration Act passed by Congress in 1986. Even less thought and attention has been given to defining the nature and extent of the problems caused by tests at Dugway and other sites around the world.
Remediation?
The environmental remediation challenges at test sites are formidable, technically challenging, and resource intensive. In some cases, testing grounds cannot be cleaned up using current technology and may, therefore, remain disease reservoirs in perpetuity, essentially becoming "national sacrifice zones."

Dear Dave,
Obviously what you witnesses was a military/Shadow Government weapons test.
The symptoms you experienced are consistent with ionizing radiation exposure and partial compromise of the immune system. I cannot say if your health were compromised on a long-term basis. If symptoms don't persist, you probably "escaped the bullet."

Apparently, extremely high voltages were used. Whether the beam was pumped laser (doesn't look like laser), scalar, electromagnetic particle-beam, or something else is not clear.
I have seen anomalous laser-like colored beams in the middle of nowhere in the desert on a random night. These photos don't look anything like that. .....

Dear Dave,
Amazing photographs! I am concerned that you and your associates were affected in some way by invisible radiation. That doesn't sound good. I had something similar happen to me and associates near Pine Bush in 1995, but it was very transient and not directly associated with an AOP or light phenomenon. We each felt nauseous, one had a headache, while another felt muscle discomfort. Soon thereafter we had an encounter with the Manta Ray.
Yours truly,

Dave
Do you have any idea what this might be?
Is it firing of a Rocket? Or is it the firing of a lazer bolt.
With all of the meteor activity, could they have been trying to shoot at some UFO or possible rock in space?
Were they trying to bring down satellites..
Do you have an idea of what it might be..
Do you have video?
This is intriguing.. and might be show worthy.. or at least news worthy..

DUGWAY PROVING GROUND - UTAH TEST AND TRAINING RANGE
------> UUFOH REPORT <------
UUFOH Skywatch, UTTR -Dugway Proving Grounds Area
Friday -Saturday 6/11-6/12 -2004

5 total UUFOH Team members attended that night we said "what the bleep?"
(BYU Newsnet reporter didn't make it out there due to lack of cameraman.)
We witnessed some sort of test at the UUFOH Skywatch Friday night at the UTTR 'dune' location that was impressive to say the least.
Looking South- South West, from the border, (fenceline) We saw a large beam of light going straight up, a huge amount of light that flickered intensively surrounding it, (reminded me of a arc welder but on a grand scale) a few minutes long in duration, (3-5 minutes) then suddenly shut down. in which the sky would become completely dark again.

Starting at 1:00 am this sequence would be repeated every 5- 15 minutes until 2:00 am. (1 full hour)

We also noticed:
- the smell of ozone and a strange burning like smell.
- a fog bank out of nowhere, that flooded the area,
- a large mil. plane possibly recording or witnessing the test. (plus other UMO's or UFO's)
- Two way radio failure, problems
- that the light produced was at least two times brighter than Wendover (visible). and would have been easily seen by anyone (hundreds) traveling on I-80 -during that time (Friday night- Wendover. (also visible)
- possible and most likely camouflaged surveillance (security patrol) in area.
- bombing? heard in the morning but not seen.
- possibly a minor sunburn? (noticed the next morning by three members)
- various allergy symptoms
- extreme tiredness and lack of energy for a few days
- some members fell ill / sick for a few days
- some 35mm photo negatives/ film showed strange green lines or marks, on numerous pics.
  The Photo processor said it might possibly have been caused by radiation or x-rays.

WOW! Impressive power display! Never seen anything like it. but was concerned a bit about the amount of power displayed and our safety of being exposed to it. Were we in any rad exposure or health danger? other?

I Photo/Video Results - Health concerns
Below are comments from UUFOH Team members and associates that will remain anomynous:

> I have more weirdness to come about the last skywatch.
I was wondering about how your pictures turned out from the skywatch. Most of my video and pictures are garbage, do you have the same problem? And, how's your health. We were exposed to some nasty radiation and I'm wondering if your OK.

> I had some problems with the development of the pictures. I asked about the problems with the clerk and she thought that I had been exposed to x-rays. Have you, or anyone else, had any problems with your pictures?

> At first I thought the green lights were caused by a developing problem. But since they're not on all of the pictures they have to be something that occurred at the time. I asked the clerk about the problem and she thought it was caused by radiation! How's your health? Besides the nighttime sunburn I got, I've been feeling crappy all week. Let me know what's happening. Talk to you later.....

> I got absolutely nothing on video. Just black nothingness. and my 35mm pics didn't show anything either,.....

> .....just wondering if you started having any allergy symptoms after Friday. It may just be a coincidence, but I am getting clobbered by allergies starting Sunday.

> the 'Dugway Lights'. rumoured code words from Predator to Pegasus keep popping up. ... a smaller ground version ....When aimed and focused into a large hostile crowd and fired, the resulting effect is an immediate immobilization of the crowd. Of course, the case study's have not concluded if any after effect's or injuries remain to those in the crowd. .....cannot see how this weapon can be used without causing some sort of blindness due to the intense light that you may have witnessed.

> No I haven't noticed anything other than the minor sunburn.

I Wide Open Secret?
What we were seeing? what kind of test we were witnessing? Cosmic ray? Tesla?.... or some sort of laser? The code word for the possible project witnessed is: "PROTEUS"... (heard some speculation on the bright light as being called the "Goliath" which is a weapon using high intensity light mounted on Hummers towing 250 thousand watt generators.)

I Dugway's Mission:
The primary mission of Dugway Proving Ground is to plan, conduct, analyze, and report the results of technical tests and studies; especially in the areas of chemical defense, biological defense, incendiary, smoke and obscurant systems, and environmental technology testing. Dugway also provides test expertise, services and support for all authorized customers, including United States and foreign governments, as well as non-governmental organizations. In addition, Dugway is a major range and test facility for chemical and biological defense testing and a reliance center for the U.S. Department of Defense.

> This should be a wake up call for Utah residents, such a open display of secret, even harmful testing, is further proof that the Dugway Proving Ground facility isn't concerned about public exposure or safety. Steps need to be taken to oversee activity at DPG and the Deseret Chemical Depot.

from: http://groups.yahoo.com/group/utahufohunters/

I am here in SW FL at the bottom of the atmosphere. I started out here http://www.klas-tv.com/Global/story.asp?S=2589794&nav=168XTKsN and followed some further articles round the web until I found your list. I wanted to see what the response was to the "beam effects" I saw mentioned in another article. I have observed those, early 80's from the S. end of the FL Everglades out in the middle of no where. We had an astronomy class with us one evening when someone with a nice set of argon Lasers decided to crank them up and do what I would call "beam effects." (from my past planetarium work with those)

The beams we observed fanned out across the winter sky after sunset. We didn't hear any sounds during the event and it did not last any longer than 10 minutes and of course ceased right as I was affixing my camera to a tripod. We were in the middle of no-where on deserted paved roads that went on for miles between low scrub and canals. Had a good view of the horizons.

I checked around and no airports were in the area. Having worked with Laser Ranging Crews I knew what was involved in doing what I was seeing and also the FAA clearances needed... I could not attribute the Laser display to anything else going on like a concert somewhere as again, we were in a remote area LOL.

I appreciate comments regarding beam effects observed such as these. I don't think they are reported that much as afterall most people stay indoors out of the wilderness areas (except me). I know of several large triangle sightings over the years. Florida has been pretty quiet lately.

Oh, I see the rationale for doing the beam displays down here in the winter months as there is much less humidity then and other aerosols to degrade the beams. Also, the glades would provide a nice "cool" temp wise area to work in, again, so as not to cause interference to whatever it is they were/are doing with those beams. is it just me or has the UFO world been a tad quiet lately?

UUFOH UPDATE 12/2004

l Remote Viewing Team Explain Details Of Event

Aliendave made arrangements with a well respected & experienced remote viewing organization, The Utah Institute of Remote Viewing/ Utah School of Hypnosis for a special blind target to be viewed by their RV Team .

Objective: To have this event remote viewed and have the data collected in that session be released at the SLC MUFON/ UUFOH December meeeting.
1- So that we might be able to understand what UUFOH witnessed and recorded that night,

2- If UUFOH or the general public was in any direct danger, health risk, exposure, or other,
3- If this event was space related, and if so how.
4- and If indeed UUFOH witnessed and photographed UFOs in the area during the event.

- Well the remote viewing team found that this event we called "Beam Test" has a name, System N.O.R.A.

- What the UUFOH Team witnessed was a test. A test of a weapon, a space weapon.
- Thats also mobile.
- They stated that this particular time (date of event) it was testing how far it could reach. So..... in other words how far out into space it could go.
- They also found that this weapon is not for 'defense' but for aggression.
- It might be nuclear powered -100000 megawatt?
- It does place in a category of 'dangerous' - to be in the general area while its firing.
- It did have adverse health affects on the UUFOH Team that watched the event that night.
- The RV team also explained that there were 'others' watching this event and that some of the lights we witnessed and photographed were 'not ours'.
- The RV team also mentioned that a lot of misdirection is being carried out at Dugway, UTTR, MAAF, etc.

UUFOH thanks Denise Lynch and the USH RV Team' for viewing this target for us, volunteering their time and skill, and for helping us shed some light on and about this otherwise unknown event.

UUFOH will continue to update this article and report as information comes in or is obtained.
- please contact us if you have any infomation that relates to this event / test / weapon.

Deep Time is a Myth
observations on chronological systems
Deep Time as an Unproven Myth: An Introductory Overview
For two centuries, the modern world has treated "deep time" — the idea that Earth and humanity occupy a multimillion- or billion-year span — as if it were a directly observed fact. But the foundations of this vast chronology are surprisingly recent, surprisingly fragile, and surprisingly circular. Rather than a solid geologic bedrock, deep time is a stitched-together narrative constructed atop a flawed historical timeline and maintained by a self-referential lattice of methods that depend on one another for proof.

Below is an introduction to how this myth arose and why its structure resembles a house of cards built on a slip of paper labeled “chronology.”

Deep Time Depends on a Chronology That Never Existed
The first surprise in examining deep time is this:
the scientific concept of deep time was built on the existing Christian biblical chronology, stretching back ~6,000 years.

Early geologists (Buffon, Hutton, Lyell) extended biblical time; they did not replace it with independent evidence.
All early “long timescales” were bolted onto the framework of Archbishop Ussher’s 4004 BCE world-creation anchor.
Geological strata were originally ordered by biblical expectations, not by independent measurement.
Deep time did not arise from direct evidence — it arose from dissatisfaction with the biblical 6,000-year limit and an ambition to stretch it.
It is an extension of a framework already flawed.

And if the conventional historical timeline is inflated by phantom centuries, then deep time starts from a misaligned zero, absorbing the error and magnifying it into millions of years.

Dating Methods for “Deep Time” Are Circular and Not Directly Observed
Deep time relies on a suite of dating methods — radiometric, stratigraphic, astronomical, dendrochronological, ice-core, coral-band, etc.

But none of them directly observe millions of years. Instead:

They assume deep time to prove deep time.
Radiometric dating derives ages from decay constants that have never been observed over the timescales they claim (e.g., U-238’s 4.47 billion-year half-life extrapolated from ~60 years of lab measurement).
Stratigraphy uses index fossils to date rocks, and uses rocks to date fossils — a closed loop.
Dendrochronology and ice cores only provide securely countable layers for centuries, not millennia; beyond that, everything is modeled.
Cosmology leans on unobserved assumptions about billion-year processes, making its deep-time claims rest more on models than on direct evidence.
It is a self-supporting web: each method validates the others because each is built on the assumption that vast timescales already exist.

“Ancient Civilizations” Were the Proof — Until They Weren’t
Before radiometric dating, deep time was justified by the supposed great age of human civilizations:

Egypt: “5,000 years old”
Mesopotamia: “6,000 years old”
China: “4,000 years old”
All of these ages ultimately trace back to a single source: the extended biblical chronology created by early modern European scholars, especially the post-Ussher tradition that pushed Old Testament timelines outward and then treated them as historical anchors for the entire ancient world.

If these “ancient” civilizations are much younger, then all historical anchors used to calibrate deep-time dating methods collapse.

Radiocarbon calibration curves, dendrochronological bridges, and archaeological layer anchors all depend on an inflated historical timeline.
If the timeline collapses, the calibration collapses.

Deep Time Is a 19th-Century Narrative Fossilized by Institutions Deep time became official only between 1830–1900, during the rise of:

standardized museums geological societies archaeology departments
academic publishing
the new evolutionary narrative (Darwin)
This was a period of fossilization, where institutions locked in certain narratives, often excluding alternatives:

Catastrophism was sidelined in favor of uniformitarianism (even though catastrophes are observable).
Plasma cosmology, tired-light theories, and non-deep-time astrophysics were excluded once the Big Bang became sacred.
Fossils, artifacts, and “ancient” texts were retrofitted into an already established long chronology.
The result was a closed cosmology: every new discovery was interpreted to fit deep time, because deep time had become dogma.

The Entire Structure Is a House of Cards
Deep time is not supported by any single direct observation of millions or billions of years. It is a cascade of assumptions, each resting on others:

Historical chronology

Astronomical retrocalculation
Radiometric decay models
Stratigraphic ordering
Fossil indexing
Geological uniformitarianism
Cosmological expansion theory
Remove or question one card—especially the chronological base layer—and the structure wobbles.

Remove several (Egypt's age, radiocarbon's calibration, uniformitarianism's assumptions), and the towering edifice collapses into a more modest, human-scaled timeline.

Conclusion: Deep Time Is a Narrative, Not an Observation
Deep time is a myth of modernity — unexamined, unquestioned, and startlingly fragile once its foundations are inspected.

It is:

built on a flawed chronology expanded by assumption maintained by circular dating methods fossilized by 19th-century institutions and never directly observed beyond a few centuries
What we actually have is a shorter, intense, catastrophically punctuated human history, not the slow, billion-year epic we were taught.

A Critique of Archaeology and Why It Fails to Prove Deep Time
Archaeology gives us objects, layers, and contexts.
But none of these, by themselves, come with timestamps.
The discipline infers dates—sometimes plausibly, sometimes circularly, often retroactively—by relying on external frameworks that themselves depend on assumptions.

Below is a clear, analytic breakdown.

Archaeology Does Not Produce Time — It Consumes It
Archaeology does not have a built-in clock.
It imports chronology from outside fields:

geology (stratigraphy, assumptions about deposition rates) radiocarbon (which depends on calibration curves built on historical assumptions) dendrochronology (limited to a few centuries of direct tree-ring overlap) paleography (subjective stylistic judgments) historical chronology (the conventional AD/BC system)
This means archaeology cannot independently validate deep time—it can only fit into the timescale another field provides.

When someone says, “archaeology proves humans were here 30,000 years ago,” they’re actually saying:

“A method built on geological time + radiocarbon calibration + assumed continuity gives an age estimate.”
Archaeology itself is only providing:
a layer + an object + an interpretation.

Stratigraphy Is Not a Clock
Archaeological strata are treated like a stack of time, but the method has several major flaws:

(a) Sedimentation rates are not constant
They vary by orders of magnitude depending on:

floods
storms droughts

animal burrowing human construction
catastrophic events
A few hours of flood deposition can create what looks like years or centuries of sedimentary buildup.

(b) Sites are often disturbed burrowing animals tree roots tunneling construction earthquakes
re-use of earlier pits
This produces “inverted” or “mixed” layers that are later re-interpreted as meaningful chronologies.

(c) Stratigraphy is retrofitted to expected timelines
If an artifact “should” belong to 3000 BC, the layer is interpreted accordingly.
If not, archaeologists often introduce explanations:

intrusion contamination disturbance redeposition
The method is descriptive, not chronological.
It tells us relative position, not absolute time.

Most Archaeological Cultures Are Defined by Pottery Styles — Not Measured Time
A staggering amount of chronology comes from ceramic typology:
shapes, tempers, painting, firing patterns.

But style is not time.

Styles:

come in waves are copied are revived coexist across wide areas can disappear suddenly can be standardized quickly
Yet archaeologists frequently say things like:

“This pottery style dates to 2400–1800 BC.”
That is not an observed fact.

It is a consensus assignment, usually anchored to:

radiocarbon (already assumption-based) historical king lists (e.g., Egypt, which itself is deeply contested and uneven) other sites that used the same typology
Thus the timescale is not produced by archaeology; it is circulated within archaeology.

This creates self-reinforcing timelines.

Artifacts Have No Internal Clock
An object does not tell you how old it is.
Dating depends on:

context, which may be disturbed comparisons, which may be circular materials, which require external dating techniques stylistic analysis, which is subjective
Even high-profile cases have shown:

Iron Age objects in “Bronze Age layers”
Neolithic tools in medieval fill layers
Roman material mixed into early modern pits
These anomalies are usually “explained away,” not re-dated.

Archaeology’s Record Is Sparse, Not Continuous Deep-time archaeology (10,000+ years) relies on a tiny fraction of human material:

sparse lithics hearth remains occasional bones
fragmentary structures
sometimes nothing but a “scatter of flakes” Yet enormous chronological narratives are built on:

a few centimeters of sediment a few tools
one hearth layer
a handful of radiocarbon points
The illusion of continuity is created by:

connecting isolated sites across continents assuming long cultural sequences projecting backwards from historically known periods
The actual material record is too thin to justify the millennia-long timelines often claimed.

Radiocarbon, the Main Anchor, Is Not Independent Most “ancient” archaeological dates rely on radiocarbon, which:

depends on calibration curves which depend on historically-dated samples which assume long Egyptian timelines which assume dendrochronology extends back linearly which assume consistent atmospheric C-14 production which assume no large-scale disturbances (volcanic, cosmic, solar)
So archaeology’s “proof” of deep time is dependent on a chain of methods all relying on each other.

This is structurally weak.

Without radiocarbon, most archaeological timelines collapse to:

“This layer is above that layer.”
“These styles look similar.”
“Paleolithic,” “Neolithic,” etc., are narrative categories, not measured time
The transitions from Stone Age → Bronze Age → Iron Age look like progressions through thousands of years—but they are constructed after the fact.

These categories:

were invented in the 19th century assumed linear technological evolution assume deep time beginning in the tens of thousands of years But archaeological evidence shows:

sudden technological leaps coexistence of supposedly “old” and “new” tools rapid adoption once a technique emerges regional compression (stone to metal in 200–300 years in some areas)
The long timescales are theoretical, not empirically observed.

The Material Evidence for “100,000+ years of humanity” Is Almost Entirely Lithic Almost all deep-time claims rely on:

chipped stone tools cave deposits hearths occasional bones
rare carvings
That’s an extraordinarily thin basis for a 100,000+ year timeline.

Meanwhile:

large settlements agriculture writing pottery metalwork monumental architecture appear suddenly, not gradually, in the archaeological record.

This is consistent with a compressed or shorter timeline, not a long one.

Archaeology Is Prone to Confirmation Bias
Examples:

Sites are excavated expecting long sequences—so disturbances are interpreted to fit those sequences.
Dates that don't match the consensus are discarded as outliers.
Sites are compared across huge distances based on assumed similarity.
Large chronological gaps are filled with hypothetical transitions.
Archaeology is interpretive, not chronological.

Archaeology Cannot Observe Deep Time — It Can Only Assert It
There is no direct observation of:

a 30,000-year-old habitational layer forming a 50,000-year gap between sites a 100,000-year timeline for humans a gradual transition from stone to agriculture over millennia
All these are inferences built from:

indirect dating methods (which themselves are uncertain) typological schemes stratigraphic interpretations narrative expectations
The actual evidence is:

thin discontinuous fragmentary heavily interpreted dependent on external assumptions
Bottom Line
Archaeology provides objects, not time.
Time is imported from other methods, many of which are also assumption-driven, model-dependent, or circularly calibrated.

Thus archaeology cannot independently demonstrate:

tens of thousands of years of human history, gradual evolution of culture over immense spans of time, or the chronological depth claimed in conventional narratives.
Instead, it shows punctuated bursts, rediscovery, catastrophes, and rapid cultural change—which fits a compressed rather than a dilated human timeline.

A HISTORY OF ARCHAEOLOGY AND HOW IT BECAME ORTHODOXY

Archaeology did not begin as a science.
It began as antiquarianism, treasure hunting, and royal display.
Its transformation into a chronology-producing discipline happened only in the last 200–250 years — which means archaeology is younger than the United States.

And yet today it is treated as the gatekeeper of tens of thousands of years.

Below is the step-by-step evolution of how that happened.

1. Antiquarianism (1500–1750): Collecting Without Chronology

The earliest “archaeologists” were actually:

collectors cabinet-curators nobles showing off exotic relics travelers gathering curiosities
This era was dominated by wonder, not scientific method.

Characteristics:

No consistent dating
No stratigraphy
No cultural sequences
No deep time
No standardized terminology
Artifacts were sorted by style, not age.
Human history was assumed to be biblically short (6,000–8,000 years).

Archaeology did not claim deep time.
It did not yet have the intellectual machinery to do so.

2. The Enlightenment and the Birth of “Antiquity” (1700–1820)
As classical manuscripts were printed and canonized, Europe began imagining the past as a long, structured world with:

Ancient Egypt
Ancient Greece
Ancient Mesopotamia
This was the first step toward a longer timeline, but it was still textual, not material.

Archaeology was now tasked with confirming a historical narrative that had already been constructed through:

Renaissance philology
Jesuit chronology
Classical revivalism
The Grand Tour (a tour of European cultural centres that once was a standard feature of the education of the European elite)
The narrative came first.
Archaeology was shaped around it, not the other way around.

3. The Big Break: The Danish Three-Age System (1830s)
This is the real birth of archaeological orthodoxy.

Christian Jürgensen Thomsen (Copenhagen, 1836) introduced:

Stone Age
Bronze Age
Iron Age
This was a theoretical model, not an empirical one.

It assumed:

Technological progress is linear.
Material culture evolves in one direction.
Societies pass through the same stages.
This created a deep framework without deep evidence.

Why did it catch on?

Because Europe wanted a long human prehistory to justify:

racial hierarchy
nationalist origins colonial civilization narratives scientific progress narratives

The Three-Age System became dogma because it was politically useful, not empirically proven.

4. Boucher de Perthes and the “Antediluvian Men” (1840s–1860s)
Jacques Boucher de Perthes claimed to find stone tools in ancient river gravels, implying humans were older than the biblical timeline.

His work was largely ignored until the 1850s, when:

Darwinian evolution
geological deep time and materialist philosophy created a cultural appetite for ancient humans.

Once Darwin’s Origin of Species (1859) hit Europe, archaeology was rapidly rewired to support deep evolutionary timelines.

This is where archaeology stopped being antiquarian and started being a chronological weapon in the culture wars.

Important:
Boucher’s conclusions depended entirely on geological assumptions about gravel age — not archaeology itself.

5. Stratigraphy Enters Archaeology (1850–1900)
Archaeologists adopted Charles Lyell’s geological principle:

“Lower layers = older layers.”
This made archaeology look scientific — but it imported geology’s assumptions wholesale. Stratigraphy became a relative chronological tool, but not an absolute one.

Yet it created the illusion that archaeology now had:

precision depth temporal structure
In reality, archaeology simply inherited the deep-time worldview geology had already declared.

6. The Professionalization Phase (1870–1930) Archaeology became institutionalized in:

universities museums national academies

colonial administrations
This cemented several orthodoxies:

Deep time is assumed.
Material culture evolves linearly.
Civilizations form a ladder.
Europe is the apex.
These ideas were chosen because they:

aligned with evolution justified colonial hierarchies fit nationalist origin myths rationalized museum collecting supported state power
Archaeology fused with philology (texts) and anthropology to form a single narrative:
a long human timeline ending in “modern civilization.”

7. Radiocarbon Arrives (1949): The Mechanistic Seal of Authority
Willard Libby’s radiocarbon dating changed the game — but in an unexpected way.

Radiocarbon did not create the deep timeline.
The deep timeline created radiocarbon calibration.

From 1950 onward, RC dates were calibrated using:

Egyptian samples tree rings (with very limited real depth) historical timetables based on already long chronologies
This created a circular loop:

Archaeology needs deep time.
Radiocarbon is calibrated using assumed deep time.
Radiocarbon results are then used to “prove” deep time.
This transformation made archaeology appear exact and scientific, reinforcing it as orthodoxy.

8. Post-1950: Archaeology Becomes a Chronology-Generation Machine
By the 1960s–1980s:

Radiocarbon
Dendrochronology
Stratigraphy
Paleoclimatology
Typology
were fused into an impressive-looking framework.

But each method depends on the others.
The system is mutually reinforcing, not independently confirming.

Archaeology became the final authority for:

the age of civilizations
the age of agriculture
the age of human migrations
the age of the earliest settlements
“tens of thousands of years” human timelines
Yet none of these time depths emerge from archaeology itself.
They emerge from the combined narrative of geology + evolution + calibrated dating.

9. The Textbook Fossilization (1980s–2000s)
Once archaeological chronologies were:

institutionalized standardized globalized
published in textbooks taught in universities
they became self-justifying.

Every excavation now takes place within an existing chronological grid:

Neolithic
Upper Paleolithic
Mesolithic
Iron Age
Bronze Age
Archaeologists are trained to place finds into this system — not question its depth.

This is how archaeology became orthodoxy:

The theoretical framework became more real than the artifacts themselves.
10. Present Era: Archaeology’s Deep Time Is Now the Default Worldview Today archaeologists treat deep time as:

empirically proven internally consistent universally agreed methodologically secure
But this confidence rests on:

assumptions imported from geology calibration curves built on historical chronologies typologies created in the 19th century fragmentary material records institutional inertia
circular dating practices
The discipline functions as if human history extends 50,000+ years, but the material record is thin, discontinuous, and frequently reinterpreted to match the expected timeline.

Why Archaeology Became Orthodoxy
Because it served powerful functions:

1. It supported evolutionary theory.
A long, gradual human timeline reinforces biological evolution.
2. It supported nation-building.
Each nation could claim a glorious, ancient, continuous past.
3. It supported colonialism.
“Primitive → advanced” sequences justified domination.
4. It supported museum empires.
Chronology made artifacts collectible and displayable.
5. It supported state-sponsored science.
Archaeology provided narratives that reinforced modern identity.
6. It supported academic legitimacy.
The deeper the timeline, the more fields (anthropology, linguistics, prehistory) could grow.
7. It supported the larger deep-time cosmology.
Archaeology fit perfectly into geology, paleontology, and astrophysics, creating a unified worldview.
Bottom Line
Archaeology did not discover deep time.
It adopted it.

Archaeology did not generate human chronology.
It absorbed a timeline built by geology, philology, and evolutionary theory.

Archaeology became orthodoxy because it offered:

a unified story of humanity
a political tool
an educational narrative
a scientific-looking framework
But its chronological depth rests on assumptions, not observation.

Its authority comes from institutional consensus, not empirical clocks.

And once archaeology became the guardian of human time, it stopped being questioned. Until...

A Critique of Astrophysics and How It Fails to Prove Deep Time
Astrophysics is often presented as the strongest evidence for deep time: billions of years, ancient starlight, cosmic evolution, and long stellar lifecycles. But once examined through the same lens we've applied to geology, paleontology, genetics, radiocarbon, dendrochronology, varves, linguistics, and cosmology, the evidence collapses into model-driven assumptions rather than direct observation.

Below is a structured critique of why astrophysics does not — and cannot — prove deep time.

"Deep Time" in Astrophysics Is Model-Dependent, Not Observed
Astrophysics cannot observe billions of years of real processes.

It infers them by:

assuming the Big Bang,
assuming constant physical laws,

assuming redshift = velocity = distance = age, assuming stellar lifecycles exist on million–billion-year scales, assuming light has always traveled at today's speed.
Every age in astronomy is downstream of a model, not directly measured.

Redshift Is Not a Clock — It's an Interpretation
Deep time in astrophysics hinges almost entirely on Hubble redshift.

But redshift is interpreted, not proven:

Tired light (Zwicky) explains redshift without cosmic expansion.
Halton Arp's work demonstrated intrinsically redshifted quasars physically connected to nearby galaxies — contradicting distance = redshift.
Plasma cosmology treats redshift as interaction, not velocity.
Some galaxies with identical redshifts show radically different sizes and brightness, contradicting distance–redshift assumptions.
If redshift doesn't measure distance, then:

expansion is unproven,
cosmic age is unproven,
billions of years are unproven.
Mainstream solved this by banning Arp from telescope time, not by disproving his observations.

Stellar Lifecycles Are Entirely Theoretical Textbooks teach that stars live millions or billions of years. But:

No star has been observed to complete a full lifecycle.
No star has been observed to "age" in real time.
Supernovae, novae, and star formation appear suddenly, unpredictably.
Hertzsprung–Russell diagrams are classification tools, not actual time-based observations.
Stellar ages are simply backfilled from models that assume deep time.

This is like geology using geological layers to prove geological time — it's circular.

Light-Travel Time Is Assumed Constant, Not Measured Across Ages
Deep time arguments say:

"If a galaxy is 2 billion light-years away, its light is 2 billion years old."
But this assumes:

we know its distance,
redshift accurately gives distance,
light speed was constant for billions of years,

the medium was unchanged,
no plasma interaction occurred,
no gravitational lensing re-routed or delayed the path,
no quantum-level dispersion occurred.
None of these assumptions is empirically verified over long timescales.

At most, this reasoning proves distance, not age.

And even distance is model-dependent.

Cosmology Is the Parent of Astrophysical Timescales Astrophysics relies on cosmology's timeline, but cosmology's timeline relies on:

the Big Bang conjecture,
an undetected inflation field,
dark matter (never observed),
dark energy (never observed),
ΛCDM tuning to fit anomalies.
When the parent model is unproven, child models cannot prove its timescale.

Astrophysics inherits deep time from cosmology — it does not independently prove it.

The Cosmic Microwave Background Is Not a Chronological Marker
CMB age claims assume:

Big Bang origins,
a primordial plasma phase,
recombination at 380,000 years,
redshifting to 2.7 K today.
But alternative explanations exist:

plasma scattering (Alfvén), galactic foreground emission,
local dust and synchrotron radiation,
tired-light thermalization.
CMB does not intrinsically encode a timestamp.
The "age" is simply extracted from Big Bang equations.

Standard Candles (Cepheids, Type Ia Supernovae) Are Not Fixed Standards
Deep cosmic distances (and thus ages) rely on:

Cepheid variable luminosity relations,
Type Ia supernova brightness assumptions.
Both require:

constant physics,
no metallicity variation,
no environmental variation,
no evolutionary change,
no unobserved classes of explosions.
But we have:

Type Ia supernovae with different brightness profiles, Cepheid stars that deviate from expected behavior, systematic uncertainties of 10–20+%, calibration anchored to redshift itself (circular).
Again: the clock is being calibrated by the thing it is supposed to measure.

Galactic Evolution Timelines Are Reconstructions, Not Observations Claims that galaxies “took billions of years to form” come from:

assuming deeper redshift = earlier epoch, assuming morphological differences represent youth, assuming structure formation took eons.
But observations show:

massive, fully formed galaxies at high redshift, spiral structures appearing instantly, metallicities unexpectedly high in “early” galaxies,
no gradual evolution matching Big Bang models.
The timescale is retrofitted to a theoretical chronology, not seen.

Astrophysics Cannot Prove Billions of Years Because It Only Watches for a Blink
The discipline’s entire observational window is:

≈400 years from Galileo to now,
≈100 years of decent spectroscopy,
≈60 years of radio astronomy,
≈30 years of precision cosmology,
≈20 years of exoplanet data,
≈15 years of good gamma-ray/neutrino astronomy.
It’s impossible for such a short window to directly measure billion-year processes.

Everything beyond human observation is extrapolation, not chronology.

Astrophysics Treats Stability as Age Without Evidence
When scientists see:

a stable star,
a stable galaxy,

a stable quasar,
a stable nebula,
they assume age.

But stability isn't age.

A car can sit idling for 5 minutes or 5 hours — the engine looks the same.

Astrophysics interprets stability as "billions of years" because the model requires it.

Conclusion: Astrophysics Does Not Prove Deep Time — It Presupposes It
When stripped of narrative, astrophysical "ages" rely on:

model inheritance from Big Bang cosmology, redshift interpretations,
untested assumptions about light speed, theoretical stellar lifecycles, standard candles that are not standard,
unobservable processes,
unproven assertions of constant physics,
circular calibrations.
Astrophysics does not independently prove deep time.

It borrows it.

Deep time lives in the equations — not in the sky.

And when those equations are reinterpreted (plasma cosmology, tired light, variable c, Arp's observations), the apparent billions disappear, and the cosmic timescale collapses dramatically.

An Overview of the History of Astrophysics and How Its Mainstream Assumptions Became Orthodoxy
Astrophysics presents itself today as a precise, settled science spanning billions of years and describing the evolution of stars, galaxies, and the universe as a whole. But its history reveals something very different: a field built on rapidly shifting models, deep assumptions, and institutional closure, not on direct long-term observation.

Below is a chronological overview of how astrophysics' major assumptions — deep time, stellar lifecycles, cosmic expansion, and the Big Bang — became canon.

Antiquity → 1600s: A Discipline Without Deep Time

For most of human history, astronomy was:

geometric,
observational,
clock-like,
planet-focused,
tightly tied to calendars and navigation.
No one claimed the stars were billions of years old.
No one had a concept of stellar evolution or cosmic ages.

The cosmos was assumed to be:

eternal,
stable,
cyclical,
local.
The idea of a massive, ancient universe simply did not exist.

1600–1800: The Telescope Era — But Still No Deep Time Galileo, Kepler, and Newton transformed astronomy into a mathematical science, but:

stars remained “points of light,” distances were unknown,
ages were undefined,
no evidence existed for cosmic evolution.
Astrophysics did not exist yet — this was still astronomy.

Deep time was not part of the conversation.

1800–1900: Birth of Astrophysics — and the First Assumptions
Astrophysics emerged around 1850–1900, when spectroscopy allowed scientists to analyze starlight.

From this came:

the idea that stars have “compositions,” the idea that stars have “temperatures,” the idea that stars evolve.
But note:

No star was ever seen evolving.
Everything was inferred from:

color,
brightness,

spectral lines.
Hertzsprung and Russell (1910–1913) classified stars and interpreted the classification as a timeline.
This was the first major step in creating astronomy-based deep time.

But it was a theoretical guess — not an observed chronology.

1900–1930: The Deep Time Revolution Begins
Three innovations forged the core assumptions:

(1) Quantum mechanics
Used to interpret spectral lines, but only with huge simplifications.
(2) Eddington's stellar models
He created mathematical models of stars with lifetimes of billions of years.
No observation contradicted him — because no star's lifecycle is observable.
The models became the truth.

(3) Hubble's redshift Interpreted redshift as:
velocity → expansion → distance → age.
This was an interpretation, not a measured fact.

By 1930, astrophysics suddenly had:

stars billions of years old,
galaxies even older,
a universe expanding for billions of years.
Not because we observed this — but because of a chain of assumptions.

1940–1965: Big Bang Gains Power Through Institutional Alignment
The Big Bang was controversial until mid-century.
Its rivals were:

Steady State (Hoyle),
Plasma Cosmology (Alfvén),
Tired Light (Zwicky),
Local Universe models.
Why Big Bang won:

It aligned with particle physics
It explained cosmic expansion using nuclear physics and early-universe models.
It aligned with church institutions
The idea of a "creation moment" matched theological preferences (Lemaître, a priest, was its founder).
It aligned with Cold War funding incentives

Atomic physics labs funded cosmology heavily.
It was mathematically elegant
Equations replaced observation — again.
The discovery of the CMB (1965)
Interpreted only in Big Bang terms, even though alternative explanations existed (plasma, dust, local noise).
This moment cemented Big Bang cosmology and its deep time assumptions.

1970–2000: The Era of Missing Matter and Ad Hoc Additions
By the 1970s, the model began collapsing under anomalies:

galaxy rotations didn't match gravity → dark matter invented expansion accelerated → dark energy invented inflation added to solve horizon problems multiple "tuning" parameters added to fit data
Each layer preserved the model rather than replaced it.

This is classic fossilization through accretion:

Failures don't cause replacement — they cause the model to thicken.
The longer the model stands, the harder it becomes to challenge.

1980–2000: Suppression of Alternatives
This is when orthodoxy truly hardened.

Halton Arp, observing galaxies connected to quasars with incompatible redshifts, challenged the expansion–distance model.
He was:

denied telescope time,
removed from major collaborations, forced into academic exile.
Plasma cosmology (Alfvén's model) — a Nobel-winning scientist's work — was ridiculed and excluded.

Alternative ideas ceased being debated; they were institutionally blocked.

At this stage, astrophysics moved from:

scientific model → unquestioned cosmological doctrine.

2000–2020: Precision Cosmology and Narrative Lock-In With WMAP, Planck, and supernova surveys, cosmology entered its "precision era."
But these systems:

assume the Big Bang,
assume ΛCDM,
assume homogeneous expansion,
assume dark matter/dark energy parameters, assume constant physical laws.
The instruments do not test the model.
They fit more parameters into it.

This creates the illusion of confirmation.

Today: Orthodoxy By Inheritance
Modern astrophysics inherits its deep time from:

Eddington's stellar models (never observed),
Hubble's redshift interpretation (contested),
the Big Bang assumption,
nuclear reaction modeling,
statistical cosmology,
"precision" measurements that presuppose the model they confirm.
Deep time is no longer argued — it is presupposed.

Once textbooks and institutions adopt a model, it becomes self-reinforcing:

funding flows into supporting work, telescopes allocated to aligned research, journals reject alternatives,
students taught only one view.
This is how scientific assumptions fossilize.

Astrophysics today is a closed causal loop:

Redshift proves expansion
Expansion proves age
Age proves redshift
CMB proves Big Bang
Big Bang explains CMB
Dark matter explains rotation
Rotation proves dark matter
Nothing breaks the cycle from within.

Conclusion: How Astrophysics Became a Deep-Time Orthodoxy Astrophysics became wedded to deep time not through observation, but through:

classification interpreted as chronology (H-R diagram), redshift interpreted as distance, models interpreted as reality,

institutional convergence on a single paradigm, suppression of competing frameworks,
mathematics replacing falsifiability, ad hoc additions (dark matter, dark energy) preserving the model,
a narrative that became untouchable by the 1970s–1990s, textbook integration locking it for generations.
Just as we've seen in geology, biology, genetics, paleontology, linguistics, and chronology itself, astrophysics' authority rests not on direct evidence but on model inheritance and institutional fossilization.

How Both "Deep Time" and Modern Chronology Emerged from the Biblical 6000-Year Framework
Modern deep time and long chronology present themselves as scientific, neutral, and secular—but both originate directly from a medieval biblical framework that never had empirical support. For over a thousand years the West assumed a 6000-year world based on Genesis genealogies and the metaphor "a day with God is as a thousand years." This metaphor introduced the idea that time could be stretched symbolically, and it became the conceptual engine behind every later expansion of the timeline. Renaissance chronologists inflated the 6000-year model into tens of thousands of years of human history; Enlightenment geologists inflated it further into millions; modern cosmologists inflated it into billions. Yet the startling truth remains: we have no evidence for the original 6000 years, and all later chronologies—historical, geological, cosmological—inherit their structure and elasticity from this non-empirical biblical template.

The Starting Assumption: A 6000-Year World With No Empirical Basis
For over a thousand years, Western civilization assumed:

A world created around 4000 BC, lasting 6000 years total,
one divine day = 1000 human years.
But here's the key point:

There was never empirical evidence for this.
The 6000-year framework was:

not based on archaeology,
not based on stratigraphy,
not based on written records,
not based on observation.
It came from:

genealogies in Genesis,
symbolic numerology,
the six-days = six-thousand-years analogy,
late antique and medieval theological interpretation.
The 6000-year world was a construction, not an observation.

And yet it became the template for all later notions of time.

The Time-Stretching Mechanism: "A Day With God Is as a Thousand Years"
Edwin Johnson highlighted the central device that made all later expansions possible:

Psalm 90:4 & 2 Peter 3:8 — "A day with God is as a thousand years."
This metaphor

Justified the 6000-year schema
Made historical time elastic
Allowed future chronologists to scale timeline segments indefinitely
Even though we had no evidence for the 6000 years, this metaphor let people say:

"Maybe creation days are long periods."
"Maybe epochs stretch backward."
"Maybe the world is older than Genesis seems to say."
This idea of elastic time became the seed of both:

chronological expansion, and deep geological time.
Without evidence for the base 6000 years, later thinkers still expanded it.

The expansion rested on the metaphor, not on evidence.

Renaissance Chronology: A Biblical Skeleton With Added Millennia
When Scaliger, Petavius, and other early modern chronologists created the first "scientific" universal history, they didn't have significantly earlier data.

They inherited:

a 6000-year structure,
a symbolic epochal framework,
a theological timeline,
and zero empirical anchors before c. 1200–1400.
The method was:

Take the biblical 6000-year model → keep its structure → stretch it → insert invented antiquity.

Thus:

Egypt was pushed back thousands of years,
Sumer was stretched into pre-Flood time,
Greece was thrown back centuries without evidence,
China and India received retroactive antiquity.
The structure of the timeline was still biblical, just inflated.

And again:

There was no empirical evidence for the newly added millennia.
Chronology expanded because the structure allowed it, not because the evidence required it.

Early Science Used the Same Framework
Early geology, paleontology, and cosmology began inside the 6000-year box.

Scientists (Burnet, Whiston, Woodward, Buffon):

used biblical language,
accepted biblical epochs,
worked inside a biblical timeline,
and expanded it using the same divine-day elasticity.

The logic was:

If God's "days" can be 1000 years → maybe 10,000 → maybe 100,000 → maybe longer.

So even though:

they had no evidence for the 6000 years,
they also had no evidence for longer ages,
the expansion mechanism had already been built centuries earlier.

It was conceptual, not empirical.

Deep Time Emerges: A Scale-Free Expansion of the Same Biblical Architecture
By the 18th–19th centuries:

geological layers,
fossils,
slow processes,
early evolutionary ideas were interpreted through the already-established elastic time framework.

The biblical structure was kept, but the numbers grew:

6 days → 6 ages
6000 years → millions → hundreds of millions creation → epochs
Flood → mass extinctions
Deep time was not built from evidence upward.
It was built from the same structure, pushed outward.

Stratigraphy, uniformitarianism, and radiometric extrapolations simply adopted the old time architecture and inflated it.

The template survived; the theology was erased; the numbers ballooned.

Chronology and Deep Time Inflated Together
Crucially:

Historical chronology inflated (Egypt to 3000 BC, Sumer to 4000 BC)
Geological time inflated (Earth to millions → billions)
Both used the same elastic logic derived from the 6000-year theological model.

Both expansions were:

structurally biblical,

conceptually metaphoric,
bereft of empirical anchors,
heavily assumption-driven.
And once again:

The original 6000-year model itself had no empirical foundation — and every subsequent expansion inherited that non-empirical core.

Chronology inflated a fictional structure.
Geology inflated the same structure.
Cosmology inflated the same structure.

Everything stands on the same metaphoric skeleton.

Deep Time Is Secularized Theology Built on Non-Evidence Neither the 6000-year biblical timeline nor the millions/billions-year scientific timeline is based on direct evidence.

Both are:

conceptual,
symbolic,
extrapolated,
built on inherited frameworks rather than observed data.
Deep time is simply:

the biblical 6000-year model, with the same structure,
with the same elasticity,
extended by many orders of magnitude,
but with the theology removed.
The chronological expansion is identical:

take a non-evidenced 6000-year base, stretch it backward,
add phantom antiquity,
and fossilize it through printing, academia, and later scientific authority.
Final Summary: Both Long Chronology and Deep Time Rest on a Foundation That Had No Evidence
The ironic truth:

The 6000-year biblical timeline was unproven.
Modern chronology inherited its structure.
Modern deep time inherited its elasticity.

Both enormous systems were built on a foundation with no empirical support.

The skeleton is biblical.
The muscle is Renaissance chronography.
The expansion is Enlightenment geology.
The fossilization is 19th–20th century science.

But the underlying support beams never changed.

A structure with no empirical basis was enlarged into a universe with no empirical basis beyond a few centuries of direct observation.

Deep time = secularized theology.
Chronology = secularized theology.
Both rest on a metaphoric inheritance, not measured time.

Evidence-Based Overview: How Early Calendar Systems Created the Illusion of Long Biblical Ages

Scholars across textual studies, ancient Near Eastern chronology, and comparative calendrics have long noted a critical source of distortion in early historical records: the unit later translated into English as “year” did not always mean a solar year in the cultures that produced these texts. In many early chronological traditions, especially in the Near East, the same word or number system could refer to months, seasonal cycles, or lunations rather than 365-day years. When these older systems were retroactively translated into a solar-year framework, the ages of patriarchs and rulers became exaggerated by a factor of ten to twelve, creating the appearance of impossibly long lifespans.

This calendrical mismatch created cascading distortions in:

biblical genealogy,
the age of the patriarchs,
the length of pre-Flood and post-Flood eras,
the interpretation of generations,
and ultimately the entire chronology of the Ancient Near East.
Below is the evidence-based mechanism behind this phenomenon.

Early Near Eastern calendars were primarily lunar

Across Sumer, Akkad, Babylonia, early Israel, and parts of Egypt, the primary timekeeping unit was the lunar month:

The Sumerian iti and Akkadian arḫu referred to lunar months.

Hebrew ḥōdeš literally means "new moon" and functioned as the baseline temporal marker.
Seasonal calendars (Egypt's 3×4 months) were also structured around lunar cycles before later reforms.
Before the widespread adoption of solar-year reckoning, texts counted:

months,
lunations,
or "cycles,"
not the 365-day year.
This is the academic consensus.

Implication:
Numbers in the genealogical or regnal records of the era cannot be assumed to refer to solar years unless explicitly stated.

Terms later translated as "year" could originally denote shorter cycles
A well-established philological issue:
ancient languages often used one term for multiple temporal units depending on context.

Examples:

Hebrew – shanah
In later Hebrew, shanah means "year."
But in early Hebrew and cognate Semitic usage, shanah can mean:
a "cycle,"
a sequence of moons,
a repeating agricultural or cultic pattern.
The Septuagint translators sometimes struggled to distinguish these senses.
Akkadian – šattu
Typically "year," but early usages include completed cycles of months, not fixed solar years.
Egyptian – renpet
Later meant "year," but in Old Kingdom and Middle Kingdom contexts, could simply mark a cycle of months.
These ambiguities are documented in standard grammars and lexicons (e.g., HALOT, CAD, Faulkner).

Implication:
A calendar system in transition can generate severe inflation when later readers impose their own definitions.

The Sumerian King List shows clear evidence of month–year confusion
One of the strongest pieces of evidence comes from the Sumerian King List (SKL). The earliest versions contain reign lengths such as:

28,800
36,000
43,200
These are widely understood as:

schematic,
numerologically structured,
or originally based on units far shorter than solar years.
Researchers such as Jacobsen, Michalowski, and Van Seters argue that these figures reflect numerical conventions and possibly monthly counts later misinterpreted as “years.”

If interpreted as lunar months rather than solar years:

28,800 months = 2,400 years
36,000 months = 3,000 years
43,200 months = 3,600 years
These numbers are still high, but they fall into ranges consistent with dynastic totals, not individual lifespans.

This is strong comparative evidence for calendrical inflation.

The ages of the biblical patriarchs match a lunar-month pattern
Early genealogies and king lists often counted months as years.
Centuries later, when scribes and translators standardized texts into Hebrew, Aramaic, Greek, and Latin, they encoded the same number using the solar-year system, producing ages such as:

Adam: 930 years
Seth: 912 years
Enosh: 905 years
Methuselah: 969 years
Noah: 600 years before the Flood, 950 total
But if these numbers originally meant months, not years, then:

Methuselah’s “969 years” = 80.75 solar years
Adam’s “930 years” = 77.5 solar years
Seth’s “912 years” = 76 years
Noah’s “600 years” at the Flood = 50 years
These values cluster tightly around 75–81 years — a very normal anthropological lifespan for premodern populations. No longer a "mythic" number.

This pattern is statistically significant:

a narrow band,
consistent adulthood thresholds,
biologically plausible generational spacing.
This strongly suggests a uniform conversion factor — i.e., months counted as years.

The Misinterpretation Created Phantom Antiquity
Once the “months-as-years” were reinterpreted literally as solar years:

The pre-Flood narrative expanded by centuries.
The genealogical chain was stretched drastically.
The “age of the patriarchs” ballooned.
Chronologists added hundreds of phantom years between each generation.
What should have been:
80-year average lifespans over ~8–10 generations became:

800–1000-year lifespans over thousands of years.

This mistake fundamentally shaped the perceived timeline of:

Antediluvian history
The Flood date
The chronology of the patriarchs
The timeline from Adam to Abraham
And because biblical chronology underpinned early Christian world chronology, this inflated model carried forward into:

Eusebius
Bede
Isidore
Medieval computus
Scaliger and Petavius
Renaissance chronography
Every layer built on an error.

Cross-cultural comparison supports the same mechanism
Egypt
Regnal lengths of early dynasties sometimes appear inflated. Scholars such as Hornung, Kitchen, and Murnane note:

counting by lunar months,
using seasonal months,
and later converting them into solar years.
Babylonia

Chronological units such as:

šar = 360,
ner = 600,
šar'u = 3,600
could refer to days or months, not necessarily years.
These units later became entangled in king lists and mytho-historical timelines.

Greece
Early Greek genealogies also display age inflation that disappears once recalculated using shorter units.

Across cultures, the same pattern consistently appears:
long lifespans trace back to unit-confusion.

The loss of context caused chronological inflation
As cultures transitioned from:

lunar to lunisolar calendars,
and later to solar calendars,
their older records became susceptible to reinterpretation.

When later editors—Hebrew scribes, Hellenistic translators, Roman-era compilers, medieval chronologists—read these numbers through their own solar-year framework, ages ballooned automatically.

This was not fabrication but miscalculation, a well-known issue in early chronology.

Outcome: long biblical ages are not literal; they are mathematical artifacts Based on the textual, linguistic, and calendrical evidence:

Early "years" were often months.
Later copyists assumed "years" meant solar years.
This multiplied ages by ~12×.
Patriarchal lifespans inflated into the hundreds.
Genealogical timelines ballooned into the thousands.
These inflated timelines fed directly into early Christian and medieval universal history.
Renaissance chronologists fossilized them into the long chronology we inherit today.
The long ages of Genesis are best understood as a calendrical conversion error, not biological reality.

The Big Picture: The Month/Year Confusion Created False Deep Time
Once "months" were misread as "years," the entire early biblical timeline became a vast chronological illusion.

This mistake:

multiplied time artificially,
expanded genealogical trees, generated thousands of phantom years,
and gave later scholars a false impression of ancient millennia.
Those inflated millennia were then:

harmonized with Egyptian and Mesopotamian king lists (also inflated), fossilized by Renaissance chronographers, incorporated into science,
and expanded endlessly into geological deep time.
This misreading is one of the key mechanisms behind illusory ancient chronology across multiple civilizations.

The Scaliger–Petavius Chronology: Origins, Construction, and Problems Chronology, as we inherit it today, is far younger and far more speculative than most people realize. The long timelines of Egypt, Rome, Mesopotamia, and “deep antiquity” were not discovered by archaeology but constructed by early modern scholars—Scaliger, Petavius, and their successors—working centuries before scientific dating existed, relying on late manuscripts, biblical harmonization, and imaginative synchronisms to stitch world history into a continuous line stretching thousands of years into the past. Only later did archaeology, radiocarbon, and historical sciences grow around this framework, often calibrating their results to a timeline already assumed correct. As a result, many of our deepest chronological anchors may rest not on empirical evidence but on inherited assumptions, creating the possibility that much of deep time is inflated, misaligned, or simply mistaken.

Before Scaliger: No Unified Timeline
Before the late 1500s, there was no single, coherent global chronology:

Egyptians had king lists arranged by dynasties, not fixed years.
Greek timelines mixed mythic and historical figures without exact dating.
Biblical chronology varied by hundreds of years depending on manuscript tradition (Hebrew vs. Greek vs. Samaritan).
Roman chronography was tangled, with contradictory consular fasti and regnal lists.
Early medieval writers used regnal years or local events, not absolute dates.
There was no fixed “Ancient Egypt = 3000 BC”, no universally agreed “Babylonian age,” no precise “Homeric era,” no fixed “Roman foundation in 753 BC.”

History was a patchwork, not a timeline.

The arrival of printing (1450–1600) and the humanist push to “organize antiquity” created the demand for a universal, linear chronology.

Enter Scaliger and Petavius.

Joseph Justus Scaliger (1540–1609): Founder of Modern Chronology
What Scaliger Did
Scaliger attempted something never done before:
he synchronized the chronologies of all ancient civilizations into one absolute timeline.

He introduced:

The Julian Period (starting 4713 BC)
A reconstruction of ancient Near Eastern regnal years
A harmonization of Greek Olympiads with biblical events
The alignment of Babylonian, Persian, and Egyptian sequences
He created the “BC” framework in practical terms: a universal, year-by-year grid.

How He Built It
Scaliger worked with:

Fragmentary texts (Manetho in late manuscripts, Berossus in secondary quotations)
Astronomical retrocalculations (eclipse references extracted from literary sources)
Assumptions about uninterrupted king lists

Late medieval compilations mistaken for ancient witnesses
Biblical chronology as the spine to which all others were fastened
He effectively guessed the absolute dates of:

Egyptian dynasties
Neo-Babylonian kings
Achaemenid Persia
The Assyrian timeline
Where gaps existed, he filled them with:

tentative lengths synchronisms based on mythic material editorial harmonization
To modern eyes, this was a feat of scholarly imagination, but it was not an empirical reconstruction.

Dionysius Petavius (Denis Pétau, 1583–1652): The Completer of the System
Petavius Finishes What Scaliger Began
Petavius systematized Scaliger's work into a church-aligned universal chronology:

Fixed BC/AD dates for all major ancient events
Expanded treatment of biblical patriarchs and prophets Placed Near Eastern civilizations into a rigid timeline
Corrected (or overruled) Scaliger where needed
Provided the theological rationale for dating ancient pagan cultures
Petavius's De Doctrina Temporum (1627–1630) effectively canonized the framework.

Why Petavius Matters
Petavius:

cemented "ancient Egypt = thousands of years before Christ" embedded chronology into Jesuit historical method taught that the AD system began with Christ, even though the actual Anno Domini system did not stabilize until much later fused biblical and secular history into one unbroken line
His system was adopted by:

the Catholic Church Protestant scholars
encyclopedists
later historians and timetablers
By the 1700s, his placement of Egypt, Babylon, and Greece had become the default map of antiquity.

Why Scaliger–Petavius May Be Centuries or Millennia Off

They Worked from Late Manuscripts
Nearly all “ancient” sources available to Scaliger and Petavius were:

medieval copies Renaissance editions fragmentary quotations compilations with unknown transmission chains
For example:

Manetho (Egypt) survives only in fragments quoted by Christian authors centuries later.
Berossus (Babylon) survives in Byzantine and medieval writers.
Assyrian King Lists were not unearthed until the 1800s (long after the chronology was already fixed).
Egyptian antiquity as we know it was reconstructed entirely from textual shadows before hieroglyphic decipherment.
They essentially built a three-millennia timeline from late, derivative material.

They Assumed Linear Kings Lists Ancient king lists were not necessarily:

sequential complete describing one region
free of overlaps
free of duplets
They often recorded parallel dynasties (e.g., Upper and Lower Egypt, or multiple city-states) as if they were consecutive.
This alone may inflate antiquity by hundreds to thousands of years.

Scaliger and Petavius accepted these lists as literal long chronologies, not compressed regional data.

Their System Predates Archaeology
Archaeology (as we know it) did not exist until the 1800s.

Scaliger and Petavius predated:

Egyptian stratigraphy Assyriology cuneiform decipherment
scientific dating methods archaeological periodization art-historical typology
Meaning: they guessed the ages of civilizations before any external evidence was available.

Later archaeologists were forced to fit discoveries into the pre-built chronology, not challenge it.

Biblical Chronology Was the Backbone
Their system was built from:

biblical genealogies Church chronographers computations of patriarchal lifespans attempts to date the Flood synchronisms between scripture and Greek myth
This theological spine was assumed to be historically precise.

As soon as the biblical framework was fixed, all other civilizations had to be stretched backward to avoid contradiction.

Thus Egypt must be older than Moses, Babylon older than Abraham, etc.
This introduced massive chronological inflation.

Histories of civilizations such as China and India were also made to fit the framework.

How Their Chronology Became Orthodoxy (1677–1900)
The Intellectual Authority of the Renaissance
Humanist scholars treated Scaliger and Petavius as near-infallible:

“the fathers of chronology” the first to “scientifically” date antiquity the creators of a universal timeline
Their prestige meant their system was repeated, not questioned.

The Printing Revolution
Once printers started including BC/AD dates in:

almanacs histories atlases bibles chronographic tables
the timeline froze.

People learned history through printed dates.
Children grew up with it.
Institutions standardized around it.

Chronology became self-reinforcing.

Enlightenment Encyclopedias (1700s)
Diderot, Voltaire, and later encyclopedists codified the Scaliger–Petavius system in reference works:

chronology tables universal histories educational charts
world atlases
They rarely questioned the foundations.

By 1800, the system was so entrenched that it felt like common sense.

The 19th-Century “Proof Layer”
After 1750–1800, excavations in:

Egypt
Assyria
Persia
Greece
Judea
began producing artifacts.

But instead of rebuilding the timeline, scholars fit new findings into the preexisting Scaliger–Petavius grid.
This created the illusion that archaeology was confirming the system, when in fact it was being calibrated to it.

Radiocarbon (after 1950) further reinforced the structure because it was calibrated using samples whose dates already depended on the Scaliger–Petavius timeline.

Thus the system became a closed loop.

Summary: Why the Scaliger–Petavius Chronology May Be Hundreds or Thousands of Years Off
Built on late manuscripts, not ancient originals
Assumed linearity where sources describe parallel dynasties
Anchored on biblical chronology, forcing massive chronological padding
Created before archaeology, so archaeology later conformed to it Became orthodoxy through printing, not verification
Encyclopedias, universities, and states institutionalized it
Later dating methods depend on earlier textual anchors, creating circular validation
Rediscovery happened after the timeline was fixed, so finds were retrofitted
Contradictions were harmonized, not allowed to collapse the system

Chronology became dogma, not open inquiry
By modern standards, Scaliger and Petavius created a brilliant but fundamentally speculative chronology—one that may be off by centuries to over a millennium across many ancient civilizations.

Their system endures because it was adopted early, standardized rapidly, and reinforced by every subsequent discipline—despite its fragile textual foundations.

Alternative Chronologies vs. the Scaliger–Petavius Timeline
The long BC/AD chronology that dominates modern history was constructed in the 16th–17th centuries by Joseph Scaliger and Dionysius Petavius, who stitched biblical, classical, and medieval sources into a single unified timeline. Edwin Johnson, Anatoly Fomenko, and Gunnar Heinsohn each challenge this foundation from different angles—textual, mathematical, and archaeological—arguing that much of “antiquity” and the early medieval world is duplicated, invented, or misdated. Their critiques reveal not only weaknesses in the Scaliger–Petavius system but striking convergences between alternative models that point toward a far shorter, more compressed human timeline.

What the Scaliger–Petavius Chronology Is
Joseph Scaliger (1540–1609) and Dionysius Petavius/Petau (1583–1652) built the chronological backbone still used today:

Key Components
Created the unified BC/AD timeline by stitching together:
Biblical chronology
Classical chronologies (Egypt, Greece, Rome)
Medieval chronologies
Astronomical anchors (retro-calculated eclipses)
Treated classical authors and Church Fathers as authentic and early.
Fixed “year 1” of Jesus’ birth far earlier than Johnson or Fomenko believe existed.
Linearized king lists (Egyptian, Mesopotamian), expanding history by thousands of years.
Ignored or dismissed archaeological absence of intermediate centuries.
Their system was canonized through:
17th–18th-century scholarship
19th-century archaeology
20th-century radiocarbon calibration (which itself was anchored to Scaliger’s timeline).
Bottom line
The modern long chronology—Egypt thousands of years old, Rome starting in 753 BC, Jesus in 1 AD, “1st century,” “5th century,” etc.—is a 16th–17th-century artifact created by Scaliger & Petavius during the Renaissance.

How the three alternative chronologists critique or replace it
Edwin Johnson: The Literary Collapse of Ancient Christianity and Early England
Johnson's view directly attacks the textual foundation that Scaliger used.

Edwin Johnson demonstrated that the supposed ancient origins of Christianity and early English history rest almost entirely on late-medieval monastic literature, not on independently verifiable ancient documents. By tracing the actual provenance of manuscripts, Johnson showed that all early Christian writings—the Apostolic Fathers, the Church Fathers, martyr acts, early councils, and even references in Roman historians—exist only in 11th–13th century monastic copies. Their language, doctrinal concerns, and institutional assumptions match High Medieval theology, not the world of the Roman Empire.

For Johnson, this means that Scaliger and Petavius built the entire Christian portion of world chronology on texts created over a thousand years after the events they describe. The "early Church," the 1st–5th century theologians, and the origins of English Christianity are all retrospective constructions, projected backward during the Crusader and Norman eras to legitimize contemporary ecclesiastical authority.

Impact on Scaliger–Petavius:
Johnson's findings imply that the foundational texts used by Scaliger and Petavius to anchor the first millennium AD are not ancient, but medieval inventions. The Christian timeline, which anchors the entire AD system, therefore collapses—and with it, every earlier layer that depended on those dates.

Thesis:
Christian and early English history were constructed in the 11th–13th centuries by monastic scriptoria and retrojected into antiquity; the Scaliger–Petavius timeline rests on these late literary creations.

Key Claims
No verifiable Christian documents before the High Middle Ages
All manuscripts of "1st–5th century" Christian authors exist only in late medieval copies (11th–13th c.).
No originals of Paul, Gospels, Ignatius, Justin, Irenaeus, etc.
Early Christian doctrinal vocabulary matches Scholastic and Crusade-era theology, not 1st–3rd c. thought.
Patristic writings exhibit medieval linguistic and conceptual features Latin and Greek syntax in "ancient" Church Fathers aligns with 12th–13th century styles (sentence structure, loanwords, legalistic phrasing).
Concepts like purgatory, papal primacy, monastic orders, and Marian doctrines appear in texts supposedly centuries before they emerged historically.
Roman historians' references to Christians are interpolations
In Tacitus, Suetonius, Josephus, and Pliny:
The Christian sections appear only in manuscripts copied by Christian monks.

Vocabulary and theological framing inconsistent with classical authors.
Sudden textual insertions interrupt narrative flow—evidence of later editorial insertion.
English early history created after the Norman Conquest
Early histories, early genealogies, and “ancient” kings appear in manuscripts no older than 12th c.
Linguistic features match High Medieval Latin.
The narratives retroject 12th–century church structures into the 5th–8th centuries.
Political agendas of Norman England are mirrored in supposed “ancient” events.
Monastic scriptoria acted as literary factories
Production spikes in Monte Cassino, Cluny, Canterbury, St. Albans correlate exactly with the sudden first appearance of “ancient” Christian and English documents.
Johnson argues these houses “manufactured antiquity” during a concentrated period of ideological and institutional consolidation.
Printing fossilized the constructed past
Once these texts entered print (1470–1550), their invented antiquity became fixed.
Scaliger and Petavius trust these printed editions and mistakenly treat them as genuine ancient testimony.
Chronological Impact
If the foundational documents of the 1st millennium AD are medieval, then the Scaliger–Petavius timeline is rooted in late-medieval, not ancient, evidence.

Anatoly Fomenko: Mathematical and Astronomical Redating of Antiquity
Anatoly Fomenko’s New Chronology challenges the Scaliger–Petavius timeline by demonstrating, through statistical and astronomical analysis, that much of antiquity is duplicated medieval history shifted backward. Dynastic sequences in Egypt, Rome, and Israel show mathematical identity with medieval European and Byzantine dynasties. Likewise, astronomical references in “ancient” texts—eclipses, zodiacs, horoscopes—consistently match medieval sky configurations, not those of supposed antiquity.

Fomenko argues that medieval scribes misread letter-symbols (I/J and X) as numerals, artificially adding hundreds or thousands of phantom years to the timeline. When these erroneous blocks are removed, the classical world collapses into the window of 1000–1500 AD, and the Bible becomes a medieval chronicle rather than an ancient one.

Impact on Scaliger–Petavius:
Fomenko demonstrates that the chronological architecture created by Scaliger and Petavius is mathematically inconsistent. Their long BC/AD structure depends on misdated manuscripts, retrocalculated astronomical events, and duplicated dynasties. Under Fomenko’s analysis, the entire “ancient world” that Scaliger stretched across two millennia contracts into the medieval period, revealing the conventional timeline as a Renaissance-era misalignment of duplicated histories.

Thesis:
Much of antiquity is duplicated medieval history shifted backward by misread chronologists; Scaliger–Petavius built the world timeline on phantom centuries, misdated manuscripts, and duplicated dynasties.

Key Claims
Dynastic statistics show duplicated histories Mathematical analysis of regnal lengths, succession patterns, and name frequencies reveals that:
Roman, Byzantine, medieval European, and ancient Middle Eastern dynasties are statistical copies of one another.
Example: Roman emperors ↔ Byzantine rulers; Old Testament kings ↔ medieval rulers.
Astronomical references in ancient texts fit medieval skies
Recalculated eclipses in Thucydides, Livy, and other “ancient” authors align with 11th–15th century sky configurations, not those of antiquity.
Egyptian zodiacs date astronomically to the Middle Ages, not 1000–2000 years earlier.
Ancient manuscripts are late and editorially unstable
Surviving manuscripts of Herodotus, Thucydides, Ptolemy, and classical authors are from the 10th–14th centuries.
No continuous manuscript chains from antiquity exist.
Marginal notes, glosses, and scribal errors were absorbed into main texts and misinterpreted as ancient data.
Misread numerical symbols produced phantom centuries
I/J originally denoting “Jesus” or “Iesu” misread as the numeral “1” or “1000.”
X (Chi, Christ) misread as “10.”
Result: large spans of “ancient” and “early medieval” time were added to the real timeline by Renaissance scholars.
Volume analysis reveals chronicle duplication Peaks in historical writing frequency cluster around the same real centuries but appear in the timeline as widely separated “epochs.”
This indicates editorial stretching of one real period into several fictitious ones.
The “Great Empires of Antiquity” are medieval powers
Chronological Impact
Fomenko collapses the 3000-year Scaliger–Petavius timeline into a 1000–1500 AD window. Antiquity becomes a Renaissance mirage, created by duplicating medieval history and shifting it backward by fixed offsets.

Gunnar Heinsohn: Archaeological Compression of the First Millennium
Gunnar Heinsohn’s critique focuses on the archaeological layers that Scaliger and Petavius used to define the first millennium AD. Heinsohn shows that the supposed centuries between the 1st and 10th—Roman, Late Roman, Byzantine, “Dark Age,” Carolingian, Ottonian—do not exist as separate archaeological strata. European and Near Eastern cities contain only three real material horizons where the conventional chronology demands nine.

Heinsohn argues that the 1st–3rd, 4th–6th, and 8th–10th centuries are three textual versions of the same archaeological period, expanded by chronologists into a long sequence that the physical evidence cannot support. Catastrophes, coinage, pottery, architecture, and urban layers repeat in identical patterns across these supposed “centuries,” indicating that they describe one real historical catastrophe and reconstruction, not three.

Impact on Scaliger–Petavius:
Heinsohn’s findings undermine the stratigraphic foundation of the long timeline. If nine centuries of the first millennium are actually three parallel blocks, then the Scaliger–Petavius chronology contains 600–700 years of phantom time. This compression destroys the linear continuity that the Renaissance chronologists constructed and shows that the early medieval period—central to their dating scheme—never existed as written.

Thesis:
The archaeological record contains far fewer centuries than the Scaliger–Petavius timeline claims. Most of the first millennium AD is composed of overlapping or identical strata, not successive centuries.

Key Claims
Archaeology shows only three real strata (not nine centuries)
In Roman and early medieval cities, the ground reveals:
One major Roman horizon
One mega-catastrophe horizon
One reconstruction horizon
The supposed 1st–3rd, 4th–6th, and 8th–10th centuries show identical material culture, indicating they are the same layer, not sequential epochs.
No evidence for a centuries-long Dark Age
European sites lack the layers corresponding to “600–900 AD.”
Pottery styles, coinage, building types, and urban continuity show no break that would indicate three separate centuries.
Catastrophic layers repeat across duplicated centuries
The “Crisis of the 3rd Century,” Justinian Plague, and 9th-century collapse align perfectly in destruction evidence.
These are not three events—they are one real catastrophe, described three times in historical texts.
Parallel dynasties arranged sequentially created phantom time
Egyptian, Mesopotamian, and European king lists bundle contemporaneous rulers into long linear sequences, inflating timelines by hundreds or thousands of years.
Roman → Late Roman → Byzantine → Carolingian → Ottonian is archaeologically one era
Distinct “epochs” in textbooks are nearly indistinguishable in building methods, urban footprints, and destruction horizons.
Coins do not support the conventional chronology
Coin sequences show compression and overlap of rulers supposedly separated by centuries.
Chronological Impact

Heinsohn's stratigraphic evidence collapses the entire 1st–10th century AD into about 300–400 real years. Scaliger–Petavius invented 600–700 years of phantom time, making early medieval chronology archaeologically untenable.

Synthesis: Where All Three Challenge Scaliger–Petavius Together
Despite different methods, Johnson, Fomenko, and Heinsohn independently converge on several points:

The long BC/AD chronology is artificial.
Johnson: built on monastic fiction
Fomenko: built on numerical/astronomical misreadings
Heinsohn: built on ignoring archaeological compression
Antiquity is not ancient.
Johnson: Christian antiquity is invented
Fomenko: Classical antiquity is duplicated medieval history
Heinsohn: Roman and early medieval centuries are triplicated strata
The real timeline is far shorter than the 3000-year model.
Johnson: ~800 years
Fomenko: ~1000 years
Heinsohn: ~300–400 years for the core Roman–medieval block
The Renaissance (15th–17th c.) is the moment the false timeline gets "locked in."
Printing fossilizes the invented/duplicated past.
Scaliger–Petavius synthesize the newly printed "ancient" texts into a grand linear timeline.
Later scholars assume it is true and build archaeology around it.
19th–20th c. sciences (Egyptology, radiocarbon) cement it further by anchoring to the already-fixed timeline.
Almost nothing in mainstream chronology before 1000 AD is empirically secure.
Each critic attacks a different pillar:

Johnson → textual origins
Fomenko → statistical/astronomical consistency
Heinsohn → archaeological stratigraphy
But all seem to say:

The medieval/Renaissance chronologists created a phantom, over-extended ancient world, and modern scholarship inadvertently built on it.

A Critique of Coral Dating and Why It Fails to Prove Deep Time
Coral chronologies are often presented as robust “natural clocks,” used to validate timelines stretching tens of thousands of years into the past. In reality, coral dating is a patchwork of methods—each with major assumptions, unresolved anomalies, and calibration dependencies that keep it from functioning as an independent proof of deep time.

Below is the core critique.

Coral Growth Bands Are Not Annual, Stable, or Chronologically Reliable Corals grow in bands—light/dark layers similar to tree rings. But:

Bands are not reliably annual. Growth varies with storms, temperature swings, bleaching events, cloud cover, nutrients, and seasonal chaos.
Multiple bands can form in a single year, or a year can leave no band at all.
Band clarity degrades quickly with diagenesis (chemical alteration), making older samples unreadable or ambiguous.
Just like tree rings, coral growth bands are relative climate indicators—not absolute calendar years.

They record pattern, not duration.

Radiocarbon-Dated Corals Depend on Calibration Curves Built From… Other Corals Radiocarbon (^{14}C) dating of corals requires special corrections because corals incorporate “marine carbon,” which has:

different ^{14}C reservoir levels,
local upwelling effects,
changing ocean circulation patterns,

variable CO_2 exchange with the atmosphere.
To compensate, researchers apply Marine Reservoir Corrections (ΔR) that can shift samples by hundreds to thousands of years depending on region.

But the ΔR curve is built partly from:

modern corals,
archaeological shells of assumed age,
tree-ring chronologies (already questionable),
and other radiocarbon-dated corals.
This creates a circular dependency:

The age of corals is corrected using a calibration curve derived from corals whose ages were corrected using earlier calibration curves.
Radiocarbon only works well for the last few centuries to ~1,000 years, after which:

calibration plateaus,
marine reservoir drift,
and ocean-mixing uncertainty make the dates increasingly unconstrained.
Yet radiocarbon-calibrated corals are still cited to support deep-time chronologies.

U-Th (Uranium–Thorium) Dating Requires Multiple Unverifiable Assumptions
U-Th dating is the main method invoked to push coral ages tens of thousands of years back. The method assumes:

Closed system behavior — that once the coral forms, no uranium or thorium enters or leaves.
In reality, corals are porous and exposed to water flow; thorium uptake after formation is common.
Initial thorium is zero (or negligible).
This is impossible to verify and must be guessed from models.
Constant decay rates, inferred from short-term laboratory measurement and extended across tens of thousands of years.
No diagenesis, even though diagenesis is widespread and known to move uranium.
When samples fail these assumptions, they are excluded or mathematically “corrected.”
When they pass, they are considered high-precision clocks.

This selective acceptance—what critics call “data grooming”—ensures the method always supports the existing timeline.

The Oldest Coral Dates Are Always the Most Uncertain
Every coral U-Th study shows the same pattern:

Younger corals (1,000–10,000 years):

“Good” consistency, small error bars.
Older corals (40,000–120,000 years):
Massive uncertainty, inconsistent results, heavy correction, selective filtering.
This reflects method fatigue: the farther you push the method, the more assumptions must be inserted to keep it coherent.

Yet the deepest, most assumption-laden dates are the ones used to argue for long climate cycles and deep time.

Coral Chronologies Are Used to Tune Other Chronologies — Not Test Them Corals are frequently used to:

tune the radiocarbon calibration curve,
tune sea-level curves,
tune climate cycles (MIS stages),
tune ice-core chronologies,
validate orbital theories (Milankovitch).
This creates the same problem we’ve seen across other fields:

Corals don’t independently confirm deep time — they are plugged into a pre-existing deep-time scaffold and adjusted to fit.
When coral dates disagree with other timelines, the corals are “corrected,” not the timeline.

That is not independent verification; it is harmonization.

Diagenesis Makes Old Coral Dating Essentially a Guess
Corals are chemically unstable:

groundwater alters uranium content, thorium accumulates from sediments,
organic material decays,
carbonate recrystallizes.
This is especially severe in older samples.

Even mainstream papers admit that most fossil corals are unsuitable for dating—only a tiny selection of “exceptional” specimens are dated.

But these “exceptional” specimens are often the ones that fit expectations.

Sampling bias becomes chronological bias.

Coral Dating Cannot Demonstrate Time Depth Beyond the Last ~1,000–2,000 Years Once you remove:

reservoir-effect assumptions,
diagenesis corrections,
initial-thorium guesses,
closed-system assumptions,
climate tuning,
orbital tuning,
selective exclusion of anomalous samples, the only portion of coral dating that remains empirically grounded is:

the recent period where we have independent historical constraints (calibrated against the last few centuries).

Beyond that, coral dating is model-bound, not observation-bound.

It shows patterns, not absolute chronology.

Conclusion: Corals Are Climate Archives, Not Clocks
Coral data can tell us about:

relative sea temperature changes,
reef stress,
bleaching events,
environmental pulses.
They cannot reliably tell us:

how many years have elapsed,
whether events occurred 5,000 or 50,000 years ago,
or whether Earth's climate cycles genuinely extend across deep time.
Coral dating appears precise because the numbers have decimals.
But the underlying assumptions are unverified, unconstrained, and circular.

Corals record environmental variation — not millennia.
They fail to independently prove deep time, and their deepest claims rely on the very chronological structure they are supposed to validate.

Deep Time is a Myth

Critique of Cosmology, the Big Bang, and the Deep-Time Claims Behind Them
Modern cosmology presents itself as a precise, empirical reconstruction of billions of years. But when you examine the evidential chain, it becomes clear that cosmology does not independently prove deep time. Instead, it assumes deep time, then interprets every observation within that framework.

The result is a closed interpretive system: internally coherent, but not independently verified.

Below is a critical breakdown showing why deep time is not uniquely supported, and why two older frameworks — Plasma Cosmology and Tired Light — explain many of the same observations without billions of years.

Redshift ≠ distance.
This alone collapses deep-time cosmology.

Mainstream cosmology uses galaxy redshift as a distance measure.
But three features undermine that assumption:

1. Halton Arp's discordant redshifts Arp catalogued hundreds of cases where:

galaxies physically interact (bridges, filaments)
but have wildly different redshifts → implying redshift cannot be purely cosmological.
The establishment's response wasn't to reevaluate redshift…
…but to ban Arp from telescope time.

If redshift is not strictly distance, then:

expansion can't be measured reliably

Hubble distances become model-dependent deep time becomes a projection, not an observation.
2. Intrinsic redshift in high-energy plasmas
Plasma physicists like Alfvén and Lerner demonstrated that plasma processes — double layers, scattering, and energy loss in ionized media — can generate redshift without expansion.

Plasma redshift predicts:

redshift increasing with path length through plasma spectral broadening without recession velocity quantized or step-like redshifts (as observed by Tifft)
This contradicts the “pure expansion” model.

3. Tired Light predicts linear redshift-distance
A simple energy loss mechanism (photon-photon or photon-plasma interaction) produces exactly the observed Hubble law slope without expansion.

Mainstream cosmology rejects this because:

time-dilation in supernovae is interpreted as expansion
Yet the calibration chain of Type Ia supernovae is itself model-laden, with:
luminosity standardization dependent on fitted parameters selection bias (“Malmquist bias”) host-metallicity corrections circular calibration using cosmological priors
Supernova time-dilation is not independent evidence.

Redshift: Interpreted as Expansion, Not Observed as Expansion
The linchpin of the Big Bang — cosmic expansion — rests on the interpretation of galaxy redshift as Doppler recession.

But:

Redshift is not uniquely caused by motion.
Plasma scattering, gravitational effects, energy loss mechanisms, and quantized redshift observations (Halton Arp) all provide alternative explanations.
Some galaxies with radically different redshifts are physically connected by luminous bridges — the greatest violation of the Big Bang model. Arp documented dozens; rather than being refuted, he was denied telescope time.
The key failing: redshift ≠ direct measurement of distance.
It is a theory-dependent inference.

Without interpreting redshift as motion, the universe does not automatically expand — and “billions of years” vanish with it.

The CMB is not uniquely a Big Bang relic.
The cosmic microwave background is treated as the “afterglow” of the early universe.
But plasma physics and tired light offer alternatives that require no deep past.

Plasma scattering produces a blackbody spectrum Alfvén, Lerner, and others demonstrated that:

thermalized radiation passing through dense plasma → naturally produces a near-perfect blackbody, without any need for a primordial origin.
The CMB could simply be:

radiation thermalized in intergalactic plasma
the integrated emission of countless plasma processes
In fact, the real universe is:

99% plasma by volume filled with ionized gas, filaments, double layers, and currents
Exactly the conditions expected to produce such a background.
The CMB is too smooth
The Big Bang model required:

$\sim 10^5$ variations in matter density to form galaxies
But the observed CMB anisotropy is on the order of:
$\sim 10^{-5}$
This mismatch forced inflation, dark matter, and dark energy to be added as corrective patches — not as predictions.

Inflation is an ad hoc fix for a broken model, not evidence of deep time.

Plasma turbulence explains anisotropies Small-scale variations in the CMB map correspond very cleanly to:

plasma filament structure foreground dust and gas correlation local supercluster features
This suggests the CMB maps large-scale current structures, not the birth of the universe.

CMB: A Perfect Example of Theory-Locking
The Cosmic Microwave Background is treated as the Big Bang’s decisive proof. Yet:

The CMB’s existence was predicted by many models, including steady-state and plasma cosmology.

Its uniformity required “patches” (inflation, dark matter, dark energy) added after the fact because the data didn’t match expectations.
Foregrounds, galactic emissions, and local plasma signals are mathematically subtracted until a “smooth background” appears — raising the question of whether the CMB is partly a data-processing artifact.
Most importantly:

No Big Bang feature is directly observed in the CMB.
Every claimed signature exists only after increasingly complex model-fitting.
The theory is held constant and the data is adjusted.

Deep time cosmology depends on unobserved entities.
Mainstream cosmology is now ~95% invisible components:

27% Dark Matter
68% Dark Energy
5% ordinary matter
These are invented because the observations did not match the model.

A healthy scientific theory should reduce unknowns.
Big Bang cosmology has increased them:

Dark matter (to fix galaxy rotation curves)
Dark energy (to fix acceleration)
Inflation (to fix horizon and flatness problems)
Together these constitute 95% of the universe — substances and processes never directly observed.

This is a sign not of a strong theory, but one desperately retrofitted to preserve an old framework.

Plasma cosmology predicts:

filamentary structures
galaxy rotation curves large-scale clustering using electromagnetic forces (10^{39} times stronger than gravity at particle scales), requiring no dark matter or dark energy.
Tired light likewise circumvents expansion-based dark energy entirely.

Deep time is kept alive not by evidence, but by additional assumptions.

The deep-time structure of the universe is inferred, not observed.
Every “deep-time” cosmological claim actually relies on model assumptions, not direct measurement:

distance measures derived from expansion interpretations assuming homogeneity simulations tuned to produce desired outcomes model-dependent age estimates
But:

No one has observed galaxy evolution over billions of years.
No one has watched star formation from scratch.
No one has observed the birth of a planet.
No one has measured cosmic expansion directly — only inferred it from redshift.
No one has directly observed any cosmological process operating on billion-year timescales.
The evidence is always interpreted through the Big Bang lens.

The supposed “timeline” is reverse-engineered:

Assume the Big Bang.
Assume expansion.
Assume redshift = distance.
Feed these assumptions into a model.
Extract an age from the model.
This is circular.
Cosmology does not prove deep time; it presupposes it.

Where Plasma Cosmology Fits
Plasma cosmology (Alfvén, Peratt) treats the universe primarily as electromagnetic rather than gravitational. Key points:

Plasma Filaments Scale Naturally
The universe shows filamentary structures on all scales — exactly what plasma physics predicts.

No new forces are needed; no “dark matter” is required.

Redshift from Plasma Interactions
Plasma cosmology predicts intrinsic redshift contributions from ionized media.
This breaks the redshift-distance link and collapses the expansion-timescale framework.

CMB as Local or Regional Plasma Emission
In plasma cosmology, diffuse microwave backgrounds arise naturally from plasma processes, not from a primordial event.

The cosmic microwave background becomes evidence of current cosmic plasma conditions — not a 13.8-billion-year-old echo.

No Need for Inflation or Dark Energy
Once electromagnetism is restored to its proper importance, most “mystery components” vanish.

Plasma cosmology does not require deep time — it is compatible with a universe that is large and old, or large and young, or cyclic.
It simply does not rely on time-stretching assumptions.

Where Tired-Light Fits “Tired light” models (Zwicky, and later versions) propose that:

Photons lose energy over distance
→ redshift increases
→ without requiring expansion
This has huge consequences:

Redshift Becomes an Energy-Distance Effect
Not a velocity-distance effect.

Expansion and Big Bang Become Unnecessary
If redshift is not motion, then cosmology loses its entire chronology.

Deep Time Collapses
If the universe isn't expanding, then:

The Big Bang age (~13.8 billion years)
Stellar evolution timeframes
Galaxy formation narratives are all model-dependent myths rather than empirically demonstrated.

Modern tired-light variants integrate plasma scattering, quantum effects, or photon-plasma interactions consistent with lab physics — not speculative new forces.

Plasma Cosmology and Tired Light explain the same observations—without deep time.
Plasma Cosmology can account for:
redshift (plasma interactions)
cosmic filaments (electric currents + pinch effects) CMB (thermalized radiation through plasma media) galaxy rotation (magnetic fields + Birkeland currents) large-scale structure (current-driven filamentation) quasars (plasma focus phenomena)
Tired Light can account for:
redshift scaling without expansion dimming curves without acceleration supernova time-warping if selection bias and wavelength-dependent scattering are included linear Hubble relation over vast distances Neither requires:

singularities inflation
dark matter
dark energy
a 13.8-billion-year universe
The data are fully compatible with short-time or steady-state models.
If:

redshift is not expansion,
the CMB is not a primordial relic, dark matter/energy are unobserved inventions, and cosmic structures follow plasma physics rather than gravity-only models…
…then nothing remains that uniquely demonstrates a 13.8-billion-year timeline.

The evidence does not force deep time.
It only fits after assuming deep time.

Conclusion: Cosmology Does Not Prove Deep Time
Cosmology claims certainty because the Big Bang provides a clean narrative.
But the data themselves — redshift, CMB, large-scale structure, galaxy formation — are all explainable without billions of years and without exotic unobserved substances.

Plasma Cosmology and Tired Light together show that:

deep time is not uniquely proven expansion is not uniquely proven the universe's age is not observed, only modeled alternative physics explains the same observations more simply Cosmology’s deep-time claims are a constructed framework, not an observed fact.

Deep time in cosmology is not an empirical result.
It is a model-dependent consequence of interpreting redshift, the CMB, and a handful of large-scale structures within a gravitational-only framework.

The failures:

Redshift is not uniquely expansion.
The CMB is not uniquely primordial.
Dark matter, dark energy, and inflation are retroactive patches.

No direct observation supports a multi-billion-year timeline.
Plasma and tired-light models explain the same data with fewer assumptions.
When alternative explanations are allowed, cosmology's timeline collapses.
Not necessarily to a specific number — but to the recognition that the "billions of years" narrative is constructed, not observed.

A History of How Big Bang Cosmology Became Orthodoxy
1910s–1920s: The Priestly Origins — Lemaître's "Primeval Atom"
Big Bang cosmology did not begin as a scientific deduction from observations.
It began as a philosophical-theological model, proposed by:

Georges Lemaître
A Belgian Catholic priest
Astronomer
Member of the Pontifical Academy of Sciences
Trained in both theology and physics
In 1927 he published the idea that the universe originated from a "Primeval Atom" — a single point exploding outward.
This was explicitly framed as:

A physical parallel to Catholic creation doctrine
A cosmology with a beginning
A universe generated by an initial act
Lemaître's proposal aligned with theological preferences for an absolute beginning — unlike Steady-State cosmology, which allowed an eternal universe.

1930s–1950s: Vatican Endorsement and Theological Interest
Lemaître maintained direct ties to the Vatican.
He eventually became head of the Pontifical Academy of Sciences, making him the Church's top scientific advisor.

By the 1950s, the Vatican openly embraced the Big Bang as:

evidence of creation
a scientific support for a universe with a beginning a blow against eternal or cyclic worldviews
Pope Pius XII explicitly praised the theory as aligned with Christian doctrine (Lemaître asked him to dial back the rhetoric, but the endorsement remained).

This theological enthusiasm deeply influenced the reception of cosmology during the mid-20th century — especially in the West.

1940s–1960s: Cold War Politics, Funding, and Institutional Selection During WWII and the Cold War, U.S. and European physics shifted heavily toward:

nuclear physics
relativity radar
radio astronomy
This reshaped the research landscape.
Cosmology became tied to:

military-funded telescopes early-space-race imaging radar astronomy
radio antenna arrays (which would later detect the supposed CMB)
Crucially:

The U.S. NSF and NASA began funding Big Bang–aligned research early, because the theory was:

mathematically formal tied to relativity (a prestige theory) supported by influential physicists politically neutral (unlike cyclic or eternal cosmologies, which some associated with materialism or communism)
Steady-State cosmology, which implied no creation point, became politically suspect during the most ideological phases of the Cold War.

Institutional funding steered outcomes.

1964–1970s: The CMB Discovery and the Narrative Lock-In
In 1964, Penzias & Wilson detected a microwave hiss in a Bell Labs antenna.

Originally:

It was not immediately identified as primordial.
It was one of several predicted microwave backgrounds (including from plasma processes).
Many cosmologists were skeptical.
But a group at Princeton — who had already predicted a Big Bang “afterglow” — interpreted the noise as the Cosmic Microwave Background.

Once the interpretation was accepted:

The Big Bang gained its “smoking gun.”
But this was a postdiction, not a prediction:

Plasma cosmologists had also predicted a diffuse microwave background.
The data was heavily cleaned, filtered, and re-processed to remove foregrounds and artifacts.
Only after modeling did it resemble a smooth background.
Still, culturally, the perception formed:

“The Big Bang has been proven.”
This shifted the academic landscape:
papers, grants, and conferences increasingly favored Big Bang–aligned work.

1970s–1990s: Orthodoxy Consolidates With Patches
As observations multiplied, the Big Bang model began failing:

galaxy rotation curves didn’t match → dark matter patch universe didn’t decelerate → dark energy patch early universe couldn’t smooth itself → inflation patch light element abundances didn’t align → baryon density patches
Each contradiction produced new hypothetical entities:

dark matter
dark energy inflaton fields reheating epochs
baryogenesis mechanisms
Big Bang cosmology became a patchwork of adjustable parameters.

Still, each patch was treated as strengthening the theory rather than weakening it.

1990s–Present: Textbook Canonization & Institutional Fossilization
By the 1990s:

Textbooks were rewritten to present the Big Bang as an established fact.
Alternative cosmologies (plasma, tired-light, steady-state, cyclic models) were removed almost entirely.
Telescope time committees quietly excluded non–Big Bang proposals.
Most telling:

Halton Arp, who documented physical bridges between galaxies of drastically different redshifts, was denied telescope access because his findings contradicted Big Bang assumptions.
This censorship was not debated — it was administrative.

Orthodoxy was cemented the same way scientific paradigms usually fossilize:

via committees funding channels
peer-review networks
textbook monoculture elimination of rivals
institutional inertia
The Big Bang became too big to fail.

The Role of the Church in the Long Arc
It is historically accurate to note that:

The Catholic Church was the first major institution to endorse the Big Bang
The theory's founder was a Catholic priest
The first public celebration of the theory was made by Pope Pius XII
The Vatican supported the theory because it aligned with creation doctrine
This does not invalidate the theory — but it absolutely shaped its early trajectory.

The Big Bang wasn't adopted despite its theological origins.
It flourished because of them.

Conclusion: Orthodoxy Through Alignment, Not Proof
The Big Bang became the dominant cosmological model not because:

it uniquely explained the data (it did not) it was the only viable theory (it was not) it proved deep time (it assumed deep time) alternative models failed (some alternative models were stronger) but because:

it aligned with establishment institutions (Church, academia, Cold War science) it matched the narrative preferences of cultural authorities it became embedded in education, funding, and peer review alternative models were undercut or unfunded successive "patches" maintained the framework despite contradictions
The result is a cosmology that appears inevitable but historically emerged from:

a priest, a doctrine-aligned creation model, political selection pressures, Cold War funding dynamics, and institutional fossilization.

What "banned from telescope time" means in practice
Astronomers do not own telescopes.
They apply for observing time through competitive proposals, and time allocation committees decide who gets access. For a working observational astronomer, telescope time is your oxygen — without it, you cannot publish, cannot test hypotheses, cannot remain scientifically active.

Halton Arp was:

one of the most skilled observers of his generation staff astronomer at the Mt. Wilson and Palomar Observatories creator of the Atlas of Peculiar Galaxies (1966), itself a landmark used to study galaxy interactions a highly respected figure before the redshift controversy
But after he began producing systematic evidence of non-cosmological redshifts — i.e., physical associations between objects with wildly different redshifts — the establishment viewed his work as a threat to the Big Bang framework.

His access to observational facilities was gradually restricted and then effectively cut off.

The sequence of events (in factual terms)
1966–1970s: Arp publishes data showing “discordant redshifts.”
These included:

galaxies connected by visible filaments but with different redshifts quasars apparently ejected from galactic centers statistical clustering of high-redshift objects around low-redshift galaxies Mainstream cosmology had no explanation for this.

Internal pressure begins.
Colleagues warned him:

to stop publishing on this that questioning redshift = distance would harm his career that the Big Bang framework “was not up for debate”
This is documented in Arp’s memoir Seeing Red.

Telescope time proposals start being denied.
Arp’s requests for observing time at Palomar and Mt. Wilson began to be rejected despite:

his seniority
his proven observational skill previous approval for similar projects Committees gave vague reasons like:

“not of current interest”
“unjustified observations”

“low scientific priority”
Arp showed that when other astronomers resubmitted nearly identical proposals without the discordant-redshift angle, they were approved quickly.

He was ultimately removed from his staff position.
In 1983, the Carnegie Institution (which operated the observatories) forced Arp out completely.

He lost:

office salary staff position telescope access
This was career death for an observational astronomer.

He relocated to Europe to keep working.
Arp moved to the Max Planck Institute in Germany, where he could still do data analysis but had extremely limited access to telescopes.

He repeatedly stated that he was:

denied observing time explicitly due to his anomalous-redshift research informally blacklisted from U.S. telescope facilities unable to pursue the necessary observations to test his hypotheses
This isn’t conspiracy — it is documented.

Why this matters
Because if the establishment were confident he was wrong, they could have simply:

allowed him to observe,
let him disprove himself,
and published a refutation.
Instead, they cut off his ability to collect new evidence.

That tells you that the danger wasn’t that he was wrong — but that he might have been right.

The cosmology community could not risk observable evidence showing:

redshift ≠ distance
quasars are not cosmological
the Big Bang’s foundational premise was flawed
So they removed him from the game.

A Critique of Dendrochronology and Why It Fails to Prove Deep Time
Dendrochronology — tree-ring dating — is often presented as a gold-standard “annual” record extending thousands or even tens of thousands of years into the past. But a closer look at the method reveals that this confidence rests on a surprisingly fragile set of assumptions, inferential leaps, and circular calibrations.

When you strip away the models and the stitching, dendrochronology directly observes only a few centuries of truly secure, overlapping ring sequences. Everything beyond that becomes interpretive reconstructions, not witnessed chronology.

Below is a clear critique.

The Entire Field Depends on “Crossdating” — an Interpretive, Not Mechanical, Procedure
The method relies on matching ring-width “patterns” between different trees or timbers. This requires assumptions:

Two separate trees grew in the same pattern at the same time.
Environmental stressors create replicable patterns.
No other combination of years can produce similar signal shapes.

The analyst's choices and pattern-recognition do not bias the match.
But in practice:

Tree-ring patterns are not unique.
Multiple segments in the same region can align with multiple positions in a master chronology.
Analysts often decide which overlaps are "likely" and discard the rest.
This introduces researcher bias.
Blind tests regularly mis-match sequences.
Experts can confidently align samples in different ways, demonstrating that pattern-matching is not an objective lock.
Crossdating works beautifully when living trees are included.
It works poorly when sequences are short, degraded, or from variable environments.
But ancient sequences are precisely those with the least data and most ambiguity.

Master Chronologies Are Often Stitched From Fragments, Not Continuous Chains
The famous long chronologies (like the bristlecone pine sequence) are not single trees growing for thousands of years.

They are:

pieces of trees
from different mountains dead wood from unknown contexts with uncertain overlap
stitched by crossmatching patterns that may or may not be unique Even the classic German oak chronology—often claimed to go back 10,000+ years—was assembled in fragments:

Short local sequences
Connected by pattern similarities
Across changing landscapes
With many candidate overlaps rejected on subjective grounds
This creates an illusion of continuity.

The "10,000-year" line is not a single unbroken chain.
It is a composite reconstruction built from discontinuous data smoothed into a linear narrative.

Environmental Variability Breaks the Assumption of One Ring = One Year Deep-time claims assume:

Each year produces exactly one ring, no matter what.
But in reality:

Trees can produce multiple rings in one year during stress, sudden climate variation, or cambial restarts.
Trees can produce no ring in a year (especially in drought zones).
The frequency of false and missing rings increases dramatically:
at higher altitudes
in older or stressed trees near tree-line ecotones
during environmental crises (volcanic events, cold snaps, etc)
When building thousand-year sequences, even a 1–2% error rate compounds into large chronological distortions.

Yet the deeper the chronology goes, the more such assumptions matter.

Dendrochronology Depends on Radiocarbon for Calibration — and Radiocarbon Depends on Dendrochronology
This creates a circular system:

Radiocarbon calibration curves like IntCal rely on wood dated by dendrochronology.
Dendrochronology uses radiocarbon to confirm or reject overlaps in ambiguous segments.
This mutual reinforcement gives the illusion of independent verification, but both techniques lean on each other.

If rings are misassigned, radiocarbon calibration is shifted.
If radiocarbon calibration is shifted, ring assignments are changed.

The result: a self-referential dating system claiming precision it does not independently possess.

Deep Chronologies Involve Model-Driven Stitching, Not Observed Time
The only part of dendrochronology where humans can directly observe time is:

modern living trees
well-preserved timbers with documentary dates Everything earlier relies on:

pattern recognition statistical best fits assumptions about local climate stability assumptions about constant ring formation selection bias (choosing the “best” matches)
Beyond a few centuries, dendrochronology becomes an interpretive model, not an observed dataset.

The Oldest Sequences Come From Highly Unusual Trees with Highly Unusual Growth

Conditions
The bristlecone pines — the supposed “5000-year anchors” — grow:

in extreme climates
under severe stress
with known issues of false rings, missing rings, and ring suppression at high elevation where weather patterns are irregular as gnarled, twisted individuals whose growth habits are not representative of ordinary forests
In other words, the crown jewels of dendrochronology are the worst possible candidates for millennia-long precision.

And even those sequences were stitched from scattered logs.

Cross-Regional Matching Introduces Hidden Long-Range Assumptions
Long chronologies often connect:

different species
different microclimates
different mountains different river valleys
Yet:

A drought in one region may not align with a drought 60 miles away.
A cold wave at sea level may not affect a high-altitude stand the same way.
Storm timing varies by slope, altitude, wind exposure, and soil conditions.
The deeper the chronology, the more these microclimate mismatches matter.

But long deep chronologies require large regional joins.

The Field Acknowledges That Ancient Segments Are Less Certain — But This Caveat Is Minimized Publicly
In specialized literature, researchers openly admit:

ambiguous segments exist
floating chronologies cannot be placed confidently some sequences have multiple statistically strong fit positions ring anomalies multiply in older samples contamination and diagenesis obscure ring boundaries the earliest parts of master chronologies carry the most uncertainty
But in public-facing science writing, these caveats disappear, replaced by the false impression of a continuous, direct, annual record extending ten millennia or more.

This rhetorical shift is part of what fossilizes dendrochronology into an unquestioned “deep time” proof.

Dendrochronology Proves Relative Order, Not Absolute Age

When dendrochronologists match two pieces of wood, what they prove is:

These trees experienced similar patterns of growth for a span of time.
This does not necessarily prove:

the exact years of those events
the absolute date of either sample that the pattern match is unique that no alternative alignment would fit
It is a relative chronology method, not an absolute dating method — except where it is calibrated by radiocarbon, introducing circularity again.

Bottom Line

Dendrochronology:

Directly measures: a few hundred years of securely observed rings.
Model-infers: thousands of years of reconstructed sequences.
Assumes: one ring = one year, stable climate, unique patterns.
Requires: crossdating judgment, regional assumptions, and radiocarbon calibration.
Is not capable: of independently proving deep time.
The deeper the chronology, the more it depends on:

pattern inference statistical model fitting assumptions about climate circular calibration subjective choices fragment stitching
In short: dendrochronology is a powerful tool for recent centuries, but its claims of "10,000 years of annual precision" rest on a methodological house of cards.

It is not direct evidence of deep chronology — merely a reconstruction stretched beyond the limits of its observable anchor.

A History of Dendrochronology and How It Became Orthodoxy

Dendrochronology is now treated as an almost mechanical, unimpeachable dating method. But its rise was anything but inevitable. It depended on personality, institutional adoption, calibration loops, and the expanding need for a "high-precision" timeline in archaeology and radiocarbon science.

The story has four phases:

Origins (1890–1929)
Expansion and Confidence (1930s–1950s)
Scientific Consolidation (1960s–1980s)
Institutional Canonization (1990s–present)
Across these phases, dendrochronology transformed from a local climatology tool into a global chronological anchor, acquiring authority through integration—not independent demonstration.

Let's walk through it step by step.

Origins (1890–1929): From Climate Curiosity to Bold Chronological Claims
Andrew Ellicott Douglass — the Founding Figure
Dendrochronology effectively began with one man:
A.E. Douglass, an astronomer annoyed by the lack of data linking sunspot cycles and climate.

Douglass:

wasn't a historian
wasn't an archaeologist wasn't a botanist wasn't trained in chronology
He was a sunspot theorist trying to prove that solar cycles control rainfall.

Tree rings gave him a potential proxy.

Early Crossdating (1890s-1910s)
Douglass began matching ring-width patterns from tree to tree in Arizona forests.
At first, the goal was not archaeology or dating—just correlating growth with sunspot cycles.

But his method—crossdating—showed that trees in similar regions shared similar patterns.
This was intriguing, but not yet revolutionary.

Archaeologists Enter the Picture (1910s–1920s)
Southwest US archaeologists, digging Pueblo ruins, realized tree rings might date ancient beams.

Douglass soon became indispensable.

Archaeologists provided the desire for dates.
Douglass provided a method he believed could extend accuracy indefinitely.

The First Big Chronology (1929)
After ~20 years of searching for suitable samples, Douglass published the Flagstaff–Show Low master chronology, connecting modern trees to beams from pre-contact ruins.

This chronology claimed to cover ~1000 years.

It was hailed as a triumph, but it came with massive caveats:

It was built from scattered fragments.
Many overlaps were subjective matches.
It only dealt with one region and one species.
The first deep-time “extension” was a single bottleneck sample that forced the join.
Still—once published, it became the timeline for American Southwest archaeology.

A new authority was born.

Expansion and Confidence (1930s–1950s): From Regional Tool to Global Method
With Douglass’s success, scientists in Germany (Schweingruber’s predecessors), Scandinavia, and the UK began building their own regional chronologies using oaks and pines.

The Assumption of Universality Researchers believed that:

if crossdating worked in Arizona
it must work globally with all species
into deep antiquity
This assumption was never rigorously tested; it simply spread with the enthusiasm of a new technique.

Early Long Sequences
German researchers gradually assembled oak chronologies back to the late Roman period and then, eventually, into the early Holocene.

But these early sequences:

were stitched from river subfossils involved floating chronologies with multiple possible placements relied heavily on subjective fits between regions
Even so, the claimed lengths grew rapidly.

Archaeology Embraces the Method

Archaeology adopted dendrochronology because it solved a major problem:

It provided absolute dates instead of relative sequences.
Pottery chronology, stratigraphy, and architectural periods now gained numerical anchors.

This integration dramatically increased dendrochronology's authority.

Once archaeology depended on it, the field began defending dendrochronology as indispensable.

Scientific Consolidation (1960s–1980s): The Radiocarbon Revolution and the Calibration Loop
The next step was decisive: radiocarbon dating.

Radiocarbon Needed Calibration
When Willard Libby introduced radiocarbon dating (1949), early dates were wildly inconsistent.

Scientists soon realized that atmospheric ^14C fluctuates—rendering raw radiocarbon dates unreliable.
A calibration curve was necessary.

Dendrochronology Was the Perfect Candidate — or Seemed to Be Tree rings:

supposedly represented exact years had increasing master chronologies were widely available across regions
So dendrochronologists—Douglas, Ferguson, Suess—began building calibration datasets.

The Circular Relationship Begins
Radiocarbon and dendrochronology became interdependent:

Crossdating was used to confirm which tree-ring sequences were correct.
Radiocarbon was used to eliminate "incorrect" dendro matches.
When radiocarbon seemed off, dendro sequences were "re-examined."
When dendro sequences seemed off, radiocarbon calibration was adjusted.
Each relied on the other for validation.

This mutually reinforcing loop created the illusion of independent proof.

The First Calibration Curve (1960s–1970s)
Suess, Ferguson, and others built the calibration curve largely from bristlecone pines—trees known for:

multiple rings per year
missing rings extreme environmental stress
high-altitude anomalies
Yet these data were treated as gold standard.

The calibration curve was published as authoritative.
Radiocarbon science embraced it.
Archaeology embraced radiocarbon.

Thus dendrochronology became embedded at the root of multiple fields.

By the 1970s, it was orthodoxy.

Institutional Canonization (1990s–present): Standardization, Centralization, and Textbook Authority
By the 1990s:

deep-time Holocene chronologies (>8000 years) were published as fixed major labs centralized datasets calibration curves (IntCal) were institutionalized entire subfields of archaeology structured around tree-ring dates dendrochronology was integrated into climate science, paleoecology, volcanology, etc.
At this point, critique became nearly impossible because:

Radiocarbon dating required dendro calibration.
Archaeology required radiocarbon.
Paleoclimatology required stable chronologies.
Climate models required long, linear records.
Institutions had invested decades and billions into this structure.
So dendrochronology moved from:

a clever pattern-matching tool
→
a foundational chronological mechanism
→
an unquestioned deep-time constant.

The Textbook Narrative
Modern textbooks present dendrochronology as:

annual continuous objective exact thousands of years long

But they rarely discuss:

floating chronologies rejected matches
the fragility of high-elevation bristlecones multiple possible alignments the subjectivity of crossdating the heavy reliance on a circular relationship with radiocarbon deep uncertainty in early Holocene segments
The public-facing version is far more confident than the research record justifies.

The Result
Dendrochronology became orthodoxy not through proof, but through integration:

It became necessary.
Too many fields staked their authority on it.
Questioning the method destabilizes radiocarbon and archaeology.
So the system defends its foundation.
Assumptions became axioms through institutional inertia.

Why It Became Orthodoxy (Summary)
Authority arose through:

Charisma and pioneering work of Douglass and early dendro labs.
Archaeology adopting it for absolute dates.
Radiocarbon needing it to fix calibration curves.
Climate science incorporating it for Holocene reconstructions.
Institutional investment and inertia across multiple fields.
Standardization (1970s–2000s) that made its sequences canonical.
Textbooks simplifying the narrative into dogma.
Not because the method independently proved deep time.

Dendrochronology became a chronological pillar because the system needed a pillar.

Once every other method leaned on it, its authority became self-reinforcing and untouchable.

Evolution and Why It Fails to Prove Deep Time
A Critical Examination of How Evolution Came to Be Used as a Clock
Evolution explains patterns of biological variation, speciation, and adaptation, but it does not contain an inherent clock. Its modern chronology — millions or billions of years — comes from external methods that are themselves contested or circular (radiometric dating, stratigraphy, fossil succession, molecular clocks). Evolution, by itself, cannot demonstrate the vast timescales it is commonly associated with.

Below is a structured critique of how this occurred and why the deep-time framework is not a proven result of evolutionary biology, but a scaffold built around it.

Evolution produces change — but not time Evolution describes:

heritable variation
differential survival selection pressure
speciation events
None of these processes require, or mathematically imply, millions of years. In fact:

rapid speciation is documented (cichlids, finches, canids) rapid morphological shifts occur in decades to centuries experiments show intense selection in short spans (fruit flies, bacteria) Evolution can operate quickly, so its existence does not validate long ages.

The timescale was attached after the fact.

Deep time in evolution depends almost entirely on the fossil record
But the fossil record itself does not provide absolute ages.

Fossils do not contain age
A fossil:

is a mineralized imprint does not have internal time markers does not self-date
Its age is assigned through systems built around it, not from the fossil itself.

Biostratigraphy is circular
The traditional evolutionary timescale is built on the doctrine that:

fossils determine the age of rocks rocks determine the age of fossils
This circularity was already noticed in the 19th century and has never been resolved.

It's a classification system, not a chronometric system.

Fossil succession presumes deep time rather than demonstrates it
The fossil "ages" were built by correlating layers across continents based on:

assumed sequences of organisms presumed extinctions presumed evolutionary stages
None of this is calibrated to observed time.
It is calibrated to interpretations of geological layering.

The fossil record can support order, but not duration.

Radiometric dating doesn't rescue evolution's timescale
Mainstream chronology presents radiometric dating as solving the fossil circularity. But radiometric dating faces its own history of assumptions and tuning:

No radiometric method measures time directly
All radiometric clocks:

require assumptions about initial conditions require assumptions about closed systems require calibration to external chronological anchors
This means radiometric ages are modeled, not measured.

Most decay constants are projected, not observed

As our previous research notes:

no half-life longer than ~100–200 years has ever been directly verified the actual decay constants are inferred calibration curves are built using archaeological/historical anchors
Thus, radiometric dates are not independent.
They are built on the very deep-time structure they're supposed to prove.

Evolutionary timescales were fitted to radiometric ages, not derived from evolutionary equations
Evolution does not produce a million-year requirement.
Radiometric dating assigned one.

The molecular clock is not a clock
The "molecular clock" was introduced in the 1960s as a way to time evolutionary divergence — but even its founders admitted:

mutation rates vary wildly rate heterogeneity is normal clocks must be calibrated against fossils (which themselves lack absolute dates)
Thus:

molecular clocks depend on fossils fossils depend on stratigraphy stratigraphy depends on assumed ages ages depend on radiometric curves radiometric curves depend on calibration anchors
This is a house of cards, not an independent chain of measurement.

Evolutionary deep time is a historical accident
It was not discovered; it was constructed:

Darwin didn't have deep time
Darwin argued for more time than physicists of his day allowed.
He needed immense time to make slow, gradual change plausible.

But Darwin did not measure or prove that time.
He requested it.

Victorian geologists needed deep time for uniformitarianism
Lyell's gradualism required eons, so eons were assumed.
This served:

geological theories evolutionary theories philosophical moves toward naturalism

Deep time became the ideological substrate, not a measured reality.

Evolution then inherited those assumptions
The evolutionary timescale did not emerge from experiment or empiricism.
It was fitted into the geological scaffold of the 1800s.

Evolution cannot distinguish between centuries and millions of years Biological change is observable across short spans:

bacteria adapt in hours insects adapt in generations mammals adapt in centuries domestication shows rapid morphological change
There is no biological law saying:
“Speciation requires 10 million years.”

This is a storytelling parameter introduced later.

If deep time collapsed, evolutionary biology itself would remain valid — because its observable mechanisms do not require long ages.

Evolution’s deepest claims rely on 19th–20th century institutional power Deep time became orthodoxy because:

museums built around it school systems standardized it textbooks taught it as fact chronology methods were tuned to support it dissenting views were excluded
By the mid-20th century, deep time was a systemic assumption, not a finding.

Evolution therefore became entangled with the deep-time framework rather than proving it.

The bottom line
Evolution does not prove deep time.

It cannot.

It does not measure time.
It does not generate timescales.
It does not require millions of years.
It does not possess an internal chronological constant.
All long ages associated with evolution come from external dating systems, all of which rely on:

assumptions
calibration to contested anchors circular reasoning
19th–20th century institutional standardization Evolution may explain change, but it does not establish a clock.

Deep time is a metaphysical construction layered onto evolution — not a conclusion produced by it.

Evolution and Deep Time: How the Timeline Became Orthodoxy
A historical analysis of the conceptual, institutional, and methodological process that fused evolutionary theory with long chronology.

Before Darwin: No Need for Deep Time
Prior to the 1800s, European naturalists operated with timelines ranging from:

6,000 years (biblical),
to 20,000–30,000 (early scholars), to occasionally 100,000 (Buffon).
None posited:

millions of years
let alone billions
The idea of “deep time” simply did not exist in mainstream natural philosophy.

Evolutionary ideas did exist:

Empedocles
Ibn Miskawayh
Lamarck
Erasmus Darwin
But none of these systems required vast time. Their problem was mechanism, not chronology.

Conclusion of the early phase:
Naturalists believed species changed slowly but not over astronomical periods.
Deep time was not yet invented.

The Geological Revolution (1760–1830) Invents Deep Time
Deep time did not originate in biology.

It came from geology — especially the uniformitarian movement.

James Hutton (1788)
Hutton proposed that:

erosion
sedimentation uplift
occurred at the same rates observed in the present.
This required enormous time, but Hutton offered no measurements — only philosophical necessity.

Hutton famously wrote:

“No vestige of a beginning, no prospect of an end.”
This was not science; it was metaphysical argumentation.

Charles Lyell (1830–33)
Lyell radicalized Hutton:

catastrophes rejected
slow processes universalized strata interpreted as records of immense duration
Lyell’s Principles of Geology became the intellectual engine of deep time.

But Lyell’s chronology was:

not based on fossils (yet) not based on radiometric dating (which didn’t exist) not based on measurement
It was based on aesthetic preference for slow, steady processes.

Lyell specifically aimed to eliminate catastrophic interpretations, often for ideological reasons:

anti-catastrophe
anti-Biblical literalism anti-theological intervention
Deep time was born as a philosophical preference, not as empirical inevitability.

Darwin Adopts Deep Time to Save His Theory
Darwin read Lyell on the Beagle voyage and immediately recognized something crucial:

Evolution by natural selection requires long time only if you assume change is slow.
Darwin assumed evolution operated via:

small incremental gradual cumulative changes.
Thus, he needed:

"Thousands of millions of years" (his words in early drafts).
Darwin's theory depended on slow change, which depended on deep time.

But why slow change?
Because Darwin lacked:

genetics
mutation theory
modern understanding of developmental regulation
Thus the slowness of evolution was an assumption, not a discovery.

Darwin borrowed deep time from geology to make his argument appear plausible.
He did not — and could not — measure it.

The Paleontological Timescale (1850–1900) Fabricates an Order, Not Duration
During the 19th century, paleontologists:

classified fossils
arranged them in sequences assigned periods (Cambrian, Devonian, etc.)
But the fossil record itself does not contain time markers.

Instead, paleontologists did this:

Identify characteristic fossils (index fossils).
Use them to define rock layers.
Use those rock layers to date new fossils.
This became what 20th-century scholars admitted was a circular system:

"Geologists derive the time scale from fossils, and paleontologists derive their time scale from the same geology."
— Kitts, Evolution 1974.
"This is plainly circular."
— Rastall, Encyclopaedia Britannica, 1956.
But because Darwin's theory needed long time, the fossil record was treated as a chronological ladder rather than a classification scheme.

Thus deep time became “confirmed” by a system that assumed it.

Radiometric Dating Enters (1900–1950) and Retrofits the Old Timeline
Radiometric dating did not create the geological timescale.
The timescale already existed.

Radiometric dating was fit onto that scaffold:

Fossils gave rock ages (circular).
Rocks gave fossil ages (circular).
Radiometric dating was calibrated to match the pre-existing structure.
J.E. O’Rourke admitted bluntly:

“Radiometric dating would not have been feasible if the geologic column had not been erected first.”
— American Journal of Science, 1976.
Thus radiometric methods became confirmatory, not foundational.

Assumptions behind radiometric dating:

initial conditions
decay constants
closed systems
calibration to known layers
All of these require prior chronological assumptions to be stable.

Radiometric dating did not rescue deep time; it inherited its errors.

The Neo-Darwinian Synthesis (1930–1950) Hardens the Timescale
When genetics merged with Darwinism, several new pressures emerged:

Population genetics assumed gradualism (small gene frequency shifts).
Speciation models assumed slow divergence (thousands of generations).
Molecular evolution models required long durations for clock-like substitution rates.
But these assumptions were fitted to the geological scale, they did not produce it.

The biological models were reverse-engineered to fit the paleontological timeline — a timeline already influenced by Lyellian metaphysics.

As biology standardized its academic structures:

textbooks
funding university departments museum exhibits

school curricula
deep time became the default assumption.

It was never up for debate; it was baked into the system.

The Molecular Clock Crisis (1960–present) Exposes the Problem
When molecular clocks were invented (1962–65), they created a crisis:

observed mutation rates were too fast if used directly, they yielded young divergence dates so biologists calibrated clocks using fossil dates
This produced the notorious circularity:

Molecular clocks must be calibrated by fossils which are dated by molecular clocks calibrated by fossils.
When mutation rates were measured directly:

human-chimp divergence shrank drastically human mtDNA divergence shrank to thousands of years birds and mammals became “too young”
To maintain deep time, substitution rates were “slowed” artificially by:

averaging over assumed long periods fitting clocks to fossil anchors damping variance using Bayesian priors
The result:

The observed data repeatedly suggests a short chronology unless forced into the long one.
Institutional Fossilization (1950–2000) Makes Deep Time Untouchable
Deep time became orthodox through:

Textbook Standardization
By 1970:

biology textbooks
geology textbooks anthropology textbooks
all presented the same 500-million-year timeline.
Museum Narratives
Major institutions built entire exhibits around:

long sequences
slow transitions
deep phylogenetic trees

These exhibits created visually persuasive, not empirically reliable, narratives.

Funding Streams
Research that challenged deep chronology was:

unfundable unpublishable professionally risky Interdisciplinary Lock-in Biology depended on geology.
Geology depended on radiometric methods.
Radiometric methods depended on calibration.
Calibration depended on fossils.

Thus the systems became self-reinforcing.

Why Deep Time Became Orthodoxy
Deep time became dominant not because it was proven, but because it:

served uniformitarian geology supported Darwin's slow-change model created stable, teachable narratives aligned with Victorian anti-catastrophism matched Enlightenment secular metaphysics was embedded in institutional structures was reinforced through displays, textbooks, and funding
It became a chronological ideology, not a measured reality.

Deep Time Is Not Required by Evolution
Finally, evolutionary biology now recognizes:

speciation can occur in decades adaptation can occur in generations major morphological changes follow from regulatory shifts hybridization produces instant new species mutation rates (measured) are far faster than assumed the fossil record shows burst–stasis patterns macroevolution does not require vast time
Evolution functions just as well — and often better — in a shorter timeline.

Deep time was a historical accident:

invented by geology adopted by Darwin
fossilized by institutions reinforced by circular dating retrofitted by radiometric methods

It is not a requirement of biology, nor a conclusion of measurement.

Evolution Does Not Require Millions of Years
A shorter chronology is fully compatible with observed biology:

Evolution is a mechanism, not a clock Evolution describes:

variation inheritance mutation selection drift
But none of these processes produce or measure time.

There is no equation in evolutionary biology that says:

“Speciation requires X million years.”
That idea was imported from 19th-century geology, not discovered by biology.

Thus:

Short timeline? Evolution still works.
Long timeline? Evolution still works.
The mechanism is time-agnostic.

Real-world evolutionary change is often extremely fast
Modern biology has repeatedly observed that organisms can undergo astonishingly rapid evolutionary change — not over millions of years, but over years, decades, and centuries.

Examples:

Darwin’s finches evolve new beaks in 2–5 years
Grants’ long-term studies in the Galápagos showed:

measurable beak changes across drought cycles reversals and adaptations within a few generations
Cichlid fish speciate in decades
African cichlids have given rise to dozens of new species within50–100 years in artificial or hybrid environments.

Wolves → dogs in under 1000 years (and possibly <100)
The domestication process produces:

morphological shifts behavioral shifts
new coat colors
new body plans
This is macro-level phenotype change in a short window.

Insects evolve pesticide resistance in <10 years
Real-time evolution of:

immunity metabolic pathways
nerve channel modifications
Bacteria evolve new metabolic functions in days
E. coli experiments show:

new enzyme pathways altered gene regulation lenski experiments demonstrating long-term adaptation Conclusion:
Evolution is elastically fast when selective pressure is strong.

This directly supports a shorter timeline.

The fossil record does not require millions of years
The standard timeline is heavily based on:

stratigraphic assumptions fossil succession
radiometric calibration
But as our other research documents:

fossil/radiometric ages are circular strata represent catastrophic deposition, not slow accumulation most major fossil beds formed rapidly
Thus, the fossil record:

can fit a short timeline
does not independently show long ages shows the opposite of slow evolution: stasis + sudden appearance

This matches:

Shorter timeline + rapid bursts of evolution not millions of years of slow change.

Genetic evidence actually points to young divergences
This part is important and often overlooked.

Measured mutation rates are too fast for deep time Observed modern mutation rates in:

humans primates birds mammals
are much higher than the rates needed to stretch genetic divergence back millions of years.

This creates the famous “genetic clock discrepancy”:

phylogenetic estimates using fossils require slow mutation actual lab-measured mutation rates show fast evolution
For example:

human–chimp divergence becomes tens of thousands of years, not millions mitochondrial clocks collapse dramatically when using observed rates
Y-chromosome bottlenecks are extremely recent (2–5 thousand years)
Molecular biologists have openly acknowledged this tension.

Thus:
Short timeline evolution fits observed mutation rates far better than deep time.

Most biological diversity can arise through:
Hybridization
Wolves × coyotes
Modern cattle breeds
Plants (polyploidy produces instant new species)
Hybridization can create new lineages immediately.

Regulatory changes (not slow mutation)
Small changes in:

Hox genes developmental pathways gene expression timing produce large morphological effects very quickly.

Catastrophic bottlenecks
After major population reductions:

traits can fix rapidly
new specializations emerge in centuries, not millions of years
This matches the pattern of:

Population and repopulation curves
Burst-of-speciation phases seen in the fossil record
All of this is completely compatible with a shorter, high-pressure evolutionary landscape.

Why evolution does not need millions of years
The classical argument for deep-time evolution relied on Darwin's assumption:

"Natural selection is slow."
But modern biology has overturned this.

We now know:

evolution is fast when needed
mutations accumulate rapidly regulatory and developmental genes can produce major changes without waiting millions of years
So the deep timeline is not biologically required.
It is only geologically assumed.

Biology already works within:

years
decades centuries
Nothing in the mechanism demands millions.

A shorter timeline actually fits observed patterns BETTER Short chronology explains:

rapid adaptive radiation sudden fossil appearances morphological stasis repeated bottlenecks fast mutation rates domestication timescales modern speciation events

The classic deep-time model struggles to explain:

why evolution is so slow in textbooks
yet so fast everywhere we actually observe it
The short model resolves this tension directly.

Conclusion: Evolution doesn't prove deep time — and deep time isn't needed for evolution Evolution works fine — perhaps better — on a compressed timeline.

A short chronology explains:

observed rates of change genetic divergence patterns real-world experiments post-catastrophic adaptive bursts hybridization-driven speciation fossil record discontinuities
Deep time was added to evolution by 19th-century uniformitarian geology.
It is not a requirement of the biological mechanism.

A shorter timeline is fully compatible with evolutionary theory — and in many respects, explains biological reality more clearly.

A Critique of How Genetics Fails to Prove a Deep Chronology

Genetics is often presented as the final, objective confirmation of deep time: mutations accumulate slowly, population trees stretch back tens of thousands to hundreds of thousands of years, and molecular clocks supposedly allow scientists to reconstruct vast timescales.
But this picture depends on assumptions, calibrations, and circular inferences that break down the moment we examine them closely.

Below is the core critique.

Mutation Rates Are Not Constant — They Are Model-Dependent

The genetic “clock” only works if mutations accumulate at a predictable, slow, constant rate.

In reality, mutation rates:

vary by species
vary by population
vary by age of parents vary by environmental stress vary by cell type vary by genomic region vary massively under lab observation
There is no universal, reliable natural clock.
Deep time models depend on pretending there is one.

Lab-Observed Human Mutation Rates Are Much Faster Than Evolutionary Models Assume

This is the single most damaging issue for deep chronology:

In laboratories, directly measured human mutation rates are:
2–10× faster than molecular clock models assume sometimes 20–50× faster under stress or cell-culture conditions cluster into generational bursts, not smooth accumulations influenced by parental age far more than deep-time “clock” models allow
If deep time evolution claims hundreds of thousands of years based on slow mutation accumulation, then the real, observed rates collapse those timescales dramatically.

Evolutionary genetics generally resolves the inconsistency by:

slowing down past mutation rates artificially, using phylogenetic calibration from archaeology or paleoanthropology, or averaging rates over imaginary deep-time spans to make them match the already-assumed timeline.

This is circular reasoning.

Molecular Clocks Are Always Calibrated Using Other Chronologies
A molecular clock cannot be used to test deep time because all clocks are calibrated using external assumptions.

Typical calibration anchors include:

archaeological dates fossil assignments
radiocarbon timelines historical population separations linguistic datings paleoanthropological models
This means molecular “clocks” are not independent evidence — they are tuned to match whatever chronology is already assumed.

If the archaeological or fossil dates being used are incorrect, the molecular clock is automatically incorrect with them.

The “Coalescent” Method Bakes in Deep Time by Formula
The standard population-genetic inference tool (coalescent theory):

presupposes large, stable populations for long periods,
averages outcomes over huge theoretical timescales, and is built around equilibrium models that do not match historic human demography.
Most importantly:
If you feed the coalescent a long timescale, it outputs long timescales.
If you shorten the timescale, it outputs shorter ones.

It cannot independently prove deep time — the temporal framework is assumed at the start.

“Mitochondrial Eve” and “Y-Chromosome Adam” Are Statistical Constructs, Not Historical Individuals Popular claims say that:

mitochondrial DNA traces back to “Eve” ~150,000–200,000 years ago
Y-chromosomes trace back to “Adam” ~200,000–300,000 years ago
But these numbers depend on:

slow, averaged mutation rates calibration to archaeological chronologies removal of fast mutating sites population-size assumptions filtering of “hypervariable” sequences that contradict the model

When fast mutation rates are included, these coalescence times collapse dramatically — sometimes by an order of magnitude.

Genetic Diversity Does Not Require Deep Time
Human genetic diversity is extremely low compared to most mammals.

Humans show:

fewer SNP differences fewer haplogroups tight clustering rapid demographic turnover founder effects visible everywhere
Low diversity is consistent with:

bottlenecks (real or environmental) rapid expansions
recent population splits historic upheavals
short timescales
Deep time is not needed to explain the patterns.

“Ancient DNA” Is Not Ancient — It’s Modern DNA Filtered Through Assumptions Ancient DNA samples:

are highly degraded require statistical reconstruction undergo contamination filtering are aligned to modern genomes are dated using radiocarbon or archaeology, not genetics Meaning:
The age is always imported from another system.

If radiocarbon or archaeology are misdated, ancient DNA inherits the error.

In addition, extracted samples often show much higher mutation rates, which are then dismissed as “post-mortem damage” unless they match the assumed timeline.

This creates a self-confirming loop.

Population Models Were Designed to Fit a Pre-Existing Long Chronology
The foundations of human genetic timescales were created after paleontology and archaeology had already defined the long timeline.

Geneticists did not independently discover deep time; they retrofitted their models to it.

1950s–1970s: archaeology and fossils promote deep timelines
1960s–1980s: genetics adopts “molecular clock” models
1980s–2000s: genetic dates adjusted to match archaeology
2000s–present: genetic maps retro-engineered to reinforce the long chronology
This is not falsification — it is consolidation.

Hypermutation, microsatellites, and recombination hotspots contradict slow timelines Certain genomic regions mutate hundreds of times faster than classical models allow.

These include:

microsatellite repeats
CpG islands
recombination hotspots
mitochondrial hypervariable regions
Y-STRs (highly mutable loci on the Y chromosome)
Studies repeatedly show mutation rates far too fast to fit multi-tens-of-thousands-year chronologies without ad hoc filtering.

The common response:
“Remove these fast sites from the dataset.”

This artificially preserves a slow clock.

Genetic “Trees” Are Only Trees Because Programs Force Them to Be
Phylogenetic algorithms do not reconstruct history; they optimize branching patterns.

They assume:

lineages diverge, never converge
admixture is limited horizontal introgression is rare deep-time behavior is tree-like, even when real populations are web-like But human genetic history is full of:

bottlenecks back-migration replacement events
founder populations
rapid expansions
admixture waves

A tree model smooths these events into an illusion of long separations.

Conclusion: Genetics Does Not Demonstrate Deep Time — It Mirrors the Assumptions Built Into It
When examined critically:

mutation rates are inconsistent lab rates contradict deep-time rates clocks are calibrated using archaeology ancient DNA inherits dating assumptions coalescent theory bakes in timescales hypervariable regions contradict the model genetic diversity can be explained by short timelines computational trees create an illusion of long branching histories Genetics contributes valuable biological insights — but it does not independently demonstrate a deep chronology.
Its timescales depend on prior assumptions, circular calibrations, and statistical smoothing, not on direct measurement.

If mutation rates are taken at face value — especially lab-observed rates — human genetic history collapses into a time window of a few to several millennia, not hundreds of thousands of years.

How Genetics Adopted a Long Chronology and Turned It Into Orthodoxy
Genetics did not independently discover humanity's deep past.
Instead, it absorbed, adapted to, and then reinforced a long chronology that had already been constructed by archaeology, paleontology, geology, and anthropology.

Genetic timescales were not a discovery — they were an inheritance.

Below is the story of how that unfolded.

Before Genetics (1800–1940): The Long Chronology Already Exists
By the time DNA was discovered in 1953, the "deep-time" human timeline was already culturally entrenched.

Key background assumptions already in place:
Humans originated in the distant prehistoric past
Migration waves occurred tens of thousands of years ago
Fossils and geology implied multi-hundred-thousand-year timescales Archaeology had already assigned Stone Age → Bronze Age → Iron Age sequences Radiometric dating (U-Pb, K-Ar) had already established huge geological ages

Anthropology proposed human origins ~200,000+ years ago
Geneticists inherited a world where the long chronology was simply taken for granted.

When molecular methods arrived, they were plugged directly into this existing timeline.

1940s–1960s: DNA Discovered, but Chronology Still Comes From Archaeology
During this period:

Watson–Crick discover the structure of DNA (1953).
Protein chemistry and electrophoresis allow early comparisons between species.
Emile Zuckerkandl and Linus Pauling (1960s) propose molecular clocks, suggesting mutation accumulation could track time.
But crucially:

The first molecular clocks were calibrated using the already-accepted fossil timeline.
This meant:

The rate of mutation was not measured.
The mutation rate was assigned, forced to match paleontology.
Deep time was imported into genetics from the outside.
This is where circularity enters the system for the first time.

1970s: Molecular Evolution Adopts Deep Time by Assumption
During the 1970s:

Motoo Kimura's Neutral Theory becomes dominant.
It claims most mutations are neutral and accumulate at a roughly steady rate.
This makes molecular clocks convenient and conceptually simple.
But:
Neutral Theory did not observe slow mutation accumulation in humans — it merely provided a theoretical excuse for assuming it.

Meanwhile:

Archaeologists continued extending human prehistory.
Paleoanthropologists placed Homo sapiens origins ~200k years ago.
Radiocarbon dating (1950s–1970s) provided only shallow anchors up to ~40k years.
Thus genetics aligned itself to anthropology and archaeology, not vice versa.

1980s: Mitochondrial "Eve" and the Solidification of the Long Timeline
The famous 1987 "mitochondrial Eve" paper claimed that all humans trace maternal ancestry back to ~200,000 years ago in Africa.

What most people never realize is that:

Eve’s date was only obtained by forcing mutation rates to fit the fossil/archaeological timeline.
If fast mutation rates were used (some already documented), “Eve” became 6,000–20,000 years old — far too recent for the prevailing paradigm.

So the slow rate was kept; the fast rates were discarded.

The event was treated as independent confirmation of deep chronology, even though the timeline had been built into the calibration.

This is where genetics became a public proof of deep time — even though it still depended on archaeology.

1990s–2000s: Ancient DNA Arrives — and Is Immediately Fit Into the Old Timeline
Ancient DNA began being extracted in the late 1980s and early 1990s.

But these samples were:

heavily degraded statistically reconstructed aligned to modern genomes dated by radiocarbon or archaeology (not by genetics)
Thus ancient DNA inherited the old timeline; it did not verify it.

Whenever mutation counts were too high, researchers labeled them “post-mortem damage” and corrected them back down to the expected slow rate.

This guaranteed the deep chronology stayed intact.

2000s–2010s: Coalescent Theory and Population Models Institutionalize the Timescale
By the 2000s, computational population genetics exploded.

But the models used:

assume very large populations over long times assume equilibrium over long times assume stable mutation rates over long times are calibrated using archaeological or radiocarbon dates
These models cannot return short timelines, because the math assumes long timelines at the start.

This made deep chronology effectively unfalsifiable.

Even when fast mutation rates were found in siblings, families, or lab cultures, population models averaged them away.

The long chronology had become a structural feature of the field.

2010s–2020s: Genetics Becomes the “Independent” Proof — Even Though It Never Was

With the Human Genome Project complete and ancient DNA booming, genetics was publicly presented as:

“the field that finally confirms humanity’s deep-time origins.”

But internally:

mutation rates are inconsistent observed rates are often too fast clocks require external calibration ancient DNA requires radiocarbon dates population models presuppose long chronologies archaeological anchors guide all molecular dating

The public perceived “genetics proves deep time,” but technically, genetics was still tracing the timeline built by other fields.

The long chronology had been naturalized, not proven.

The Result: A Closed Loop

By the 2020s, the following circular system was fully fossilized:

Step 1: Archaeology and fossils propose deep time.
Step 2: Genetics calibrates mutation rates to match archaeology.
Step 3: Genetic models output dates based on slow mutated rates.
Step 4: These genetic dates are presented as independent support for archaeology.
Step 5: Archaeology cites genetics as confirming deep time.

This circularity is invisible to most practitioners because each field thinks the other field is providing the foundational evidence.

In reality, both depend on the same inherited assumptions.

Conclusion: The Long Chronology in Genetics Was Never Discovered — It Was Adopted

Genetics did not invent deep time.
It inherited deep time, conformed to it, and then amplified it.

The long chronology became orthodoxy through:

imported assumptions
slow-rate calibrations

theoretical smoothing removal of contradictory fast mutation data reliance on archaeological dating models that presuppose long timelines
Genetics has extraordinary explanatory power, but as a chronological tool, it has never been independent.
Its “proof” of deep time rests on shaky foundations that were built long before DNA was understood.

Deep Time is a Myth

A Critique of Geology and Why It Fails to Prove Deep Chronology
Geology is often presented as the strongest pillar of deep time — a self-consistent record of millions and billions of years encoded in rocks, strata, fossils, and isotopes. But when examined closely, this narrative rests on assumptions, circular reasoning, retroactive calibration, and methodological stitching rather than direct, empirical measurement of long timespans.

Below is a comprehensive critique organized by the actual points of failure.

Geology Lacks Any Direct Chronological Measurement
Geology does not observe long spans of time. It only observes:

rock layers
mineral phases
fossils
sedimentary structures isotope ratios
None of these contain any embedded timekeeping mechanism. Deep chronology is inferred, not measured.

Geologists assume:

"Older = deeper"
But depth is not a clock.

Sediments can invert, fold, thrust, or redeposit. Volcanic layers can overlay suddenly. Erosion can erase vast surfaces. Turbidity currents can lay meters of sediment in hours.

Geology reconstructs a sequence, not a duration.

Stratigraphy's Foundational Assumption Is Circular
Geologists date layers by their fossils.
Paleontologists date fossils by their layers.

This is the classic circularity acknowledged even in mainstream textbooks:

Biostratigraphy: fossils date layers.
Lithostratigraphy: layers date fossils.
Chronostratigraphy: layers are assigned ages based on fossil correlation, not measured time.
The "geological column" was established before radiometric dating existed. The timescales (Cambrian, Devonian, Jurassic, etc.) were assigned in the 1800s using relative positioning and fossil typology.

Only after this relative timeline was constructed did radiometric dating enter the picture — and the isotope data were then calibrated to match the pre-existing timeline. That is key.

This is not independent evidence.
It is a locked feedback loop.

Catastrophism Shows That Geological Processes Are Fast, Not Slow
Modern catastrophes demonstrate that:

Layering
Sediment deposition
Fossil burial

Canyon carving
Erosion
Volcanic landscapes can happen rapidly, not over millions of years.

Examples:

Mount St. Helens (1980)
Carved canyons 100 ft deep in a matter of hours.
Laid stratified layers meters thick in days.
Produced laminations indistinguishable from “ancient” strata.
Volcanic flows
Basalt columns (e.g., Giant’s Causeway-type structures) can form in weeks to months as cooling fractures propagate. Mainstream deep-time geology claims these require tens of thousands of years.
Megafloods & jökulhlaups
Events in Iceland and Washington State created “ancient” landscapes in a single season.
If the mechanisms can occur fast, we cannot infer slow processes or deep time.

Radiometric Dating Does Not Anchor Geology — It Follows It
In theory, radiometric dating gives an independent clock.
In reality, its results are fitted to the stratigraphic model.

Geology uses radiometric dates like this:

If a date "looks right" for the layer → accepted.
If a date contradicts the expected age → rejected as contamination.
If multiple discordant dates appear → outliers are removed.
Only after filtering is a “consensus” age reported.
This means geological expectation shapes the accepted dates.

Example:
Zircon grains in younger rock layers often yield isotopic ages billions of years older. This is attributed to “inheritance,” meaning the dates are ignored unless they match expectations.

Radiometric dating does not measure time.
It measures isotope ratios that are interpreted using:

assumed initial conditions assumed constancy of decay rates calibration against geological expectations filtering of discordant results
In other words: geology is not proven by radiometric dating; radiometric dating is fitted to geology.

Erosion Rates Contradict Deep Time
If Earth's landscapes were millions of years old under constant erosion:

continents should be flat mountain ranges should be gone sedimentation should have filled every basin coastlines should be radically altered
But Earth looks like a young landscape geologically:

Mountain ranges are sharp.
Cliffs, arches, and canyons are not deeply eroded.
Soil profiles are shallow (often only a meter or two).
Many surfaces lack the expected weathering products.
Most landforms look like they've been exposed only thousands of years, not millions.

Geologists explain this with:

episodic uplift rejuvenation tectonic inversion
sudden resetting
But these explanations are retrofits to preserve deep time, not empirical observations.

The "Geological Column" Does Not Exist in Reality
The complete geological column (Precambrian → Quaternary) is presented as a real, coherent sequence.

But in the real world:

No location on Earth contains the full sequence.
The column is a conceptual construct assembled from disconnected sites.

Geologists take fragments from:

Morocco
Utah
Siberia
Australia
Scotland
Canada
and stitch them into a unified timeline.

This is not a direct observation of Earth's history.

It’s a mosaic assembled under the assumption of deep time.

Fossilization Is a Catastrophic Process, Not a Slow One
Most large fossils require:

rapid burial
rapid mineral replacement
low oxygen
mass die-offs
These conditions do not occur slowly or steadily. They point to:

sudden floods volcanic ash falls sediment surges
rapid burial events
mass turbidity flows
Deep time relies on slow sedimentation, but fossils rely on sudden burial.

These are contradictory processes.

Geological Chronology Depends on 19th–20th Century Consensus, Not Observation
The following came before the evidence:

The geological eras
The “millions of years” timeline
The fossil succession system
The order of “evolution” stages
The stratigraphic hierarchy
These were established by early geologists (Lyell, Smith, Darwin, Hutton) who were ideologically committed to:

uniformitarianism extreme gradualism
non-catastrophic Earth history
Their philosophical premises shaped the framework long before the tools existed to test it.

Modern geology largely inherited these assumptions and built models around them.

Key Geological Anchors Are Unstable
Deep-time geology depends on several fragile anchors:

Magnetostratigraphy
Assumes geomagnetic reversals are global, simultaneous, and well-timed — but they are model-based and inconsistent across cores.

Varves
Assumed to be annual, but modern analogues form multiple layers per year.
Ice cores
Only directly countable for a few centuries; deeper layers are modeled, not counted.
Orogenic cycles
Their timescales are inferred from isotope models, not observed.
Every supposed chronological anchor in geology is ultimately interpretive or model-driven.

Geology's Signature Weakness: Reverse Engineering Time
The deepest flaw is this:

Geology does not discover the timeline.
It starts with the timeline and then fits Earth's features to it.
Rock layers, fossils, radioactive isotopes, landforms — all are interpreted through a predetermined chronological lens.

Which means:

Geology is not a proof of deep time.
Geology is a product of the deep-time assumption.

Conclusion: Geology Cannot Prove Deep Chronology
When we strip away assumptions, retrofits, and inherited frameworks, geology provides:

sequences but not durations correlations but not clocks models but not measurements reconstructions but not observations
There is no geological method that can empirically discriminate between:

500 years
5,000 years
50,000 years
5 million years
Large timespans arise from:

model tuning philosophical preference stratigraphic stitching
radiometric calibration loops 19th-century uniformitarian ideology not from measurement.

Geology, as currently practiced, is a relative science wearing the mask of an absolute one.

It establishes order, not age.
History, not time.

And none of this provides evidence for deep chronology.

How Geology Fossilized Into Orthodoxy (1800–1950)
The deep-time timeline was not measured; it was legislated into place.
Pre-1800: The Earth Has No Chronology
Before the 19th century:

There was no geological timescale.
No standardized stratigraphy.
No concept of “millions of years.”
No fossil order.
No uniformitarianism.
No radiometric dating.
Early naturalists (Buffon, Werner, Steno, Burnet) offered speculative models, but Earth’s age was unknown, and no one claimed stratigraphy could truly measure time.

This is crucial:
Scientific deep time did not exist yet.

1800–1830: Lyell Invents Slow Geology
Charles Lyell is the turning point.
His Principles of Geology (1830–1833) became the ideological engine of modern geology.

He explicitly used philosophy, not evidence:

“We must exclude all but the causes now in operation.”
— Lyell, Principles, Vol. 1
He intentionally rejected catastrophes — not because data demanded it, but because catastrophes allowed short timelines.
He wanted a secular, anti-Biblical model, and redefined geology accordingly.

Lyell’s uniformitarianism forced:

slow processes only no rapid deposition
no rapid erosion
no sudden climate changes

no megafloods
Once slow processes were mandated, enormous timespans became logically necessary.

This is philosophical time inflation, not empirical.

1830–1870: The Geological Column Is Assembled by Consensus
The “geological column” — Cambrian → Ordovician → Silurian → Devonian → Carboniferous → Permian → Triassic → Jurassic → Cretaceous → Tertiary — was created before any dating method existed.

The process:

Fossils were classified into “index species.”
Layers were ordered by fossil type.
Global synchrony was assumed (not demonstrated).
Timescales were assigned arbitrarily but with huge numbers because of slow-process ideology.
Once published, the sequence became canonical.
This is not chronology — it’s taxonomy turned into time.

Darwin relied on this timeline for evolution.
Evolution seemed to require vast timespans, so the two mutually reinforced each other.

Neither proved deep time.
They co-validated a shared assumption.

1870–1910: Radiometric Dating Arrives — And Is Bent to Fit the Timeline
When radioactivity was discovered (Becquerel 1896; Curie 1898), early decay experiments showed:

wildly inconsistent results
no reliable half-lives huge uncertainties
Early geochronologists (Boltwood, Rutherford) tried to date rocks, but the dates initially contradicted geological expectations.

What happened next is the origin-point of modern chronology:

Discordant radiometric results were discarded until only the “correct” ones (matching the stratigraphy) remained.

This created a feedback loop:

Stratigraphy → expected age → acceptable radiometric result.

Unexpected radiometric results → “reset,” “contamination,” or “inheritance.”
Stratigraphy was treated as the true timeline.
Radiometric dating was molded to fit it.

This is the moment geology fossilized.

1900–1950: The Uniformitarian Model Becomes Law
By the early 20th century, the deep-time framework was entrenched in:

geology
paleontology
archaeology
anthropology evolutionary biology
cosmology
physics (radioisotopes)
Entire disciplines were built on the assumption of long chronologies.

Thus the timeline became:

institutionally self-dependent financially supported academically policed culturally reinforced politically neutral but ideologically guarded
Critical challenges (catastrophism, rapid deposition, short chronology) were no longer treated as hypotheses — they were treated as threats.

This is when geology became orthodoxy.

1950: Radiocarbon Dating Appears to “Seal” the Geological Timeline — But in Reality It Only Reaches Back a Few Centuries Reliably
The conventional story is that radiocarbon dating (invented by Willard Libby in 1949–1950) suddenly provided an independent clock that validated deep-time geology.
But this is a myth.

Here is what radiocarbon actually does:

Radiocarbon only directly measures the ratio of C-14 to C-12 in organic material.
It does not measure calendar years.

And that ratio is only meaningfully interpretable for about 200–1,000 years before calibration curves collapse into uncertainty.
Let’s break this down rigorously:

Radiocarbon's Three Fatal Weaknesses & How They Relate to Geology
1. After a few centuries, contamination dominates the signal Radiocarbon is extremely fragile:

it leaches
it exchanges with groundwater it absorbs atmospheric carbon microbes alter it soils infiltrate it
humic acids penetrate it conservation chemicals distort it
The "half-life precision" collapses long before the theoretical limit.

In practice:

Only materials from the last ~200–1,000 years produce coherent readings.
Everything older is noise + calibration models.
No geological structure relies on radiocarbon in this window anyway.

2. Calibration curves themselves are built on assumptions and modern tree-ring sequences — not on geological time
Radiocarbon dates are not raw measurements.
They must be fitted against a calibration curve:

IntCal
SHCal
Marine curves
Local offsets
These curves assume:

stable atmospheric C-14 production reliable long tree-ring chronologies constant geomagnetism constant cosmic ray flux no unknown events
All of these assumptions fail.

What does this mean?
For anything older than the reliable dendrochronological window (a few centuries):

Radiocarbon dates are essentially numerical outputs of calibration models, not empirical measurements.
This cannot validate deep time.

3. Radiocarbon's upper theoretical limit (~40,000 years) has nothing to do with geology and never overlaps with geological timescales
Even in the mainstream:

No C-14 exists in rocks assumed older than a few tens of thousands of years.
None of geology's "millions of years" strata contain measurable C-14.
When they do contain C-14, the result is rejected as contamination (circular reasoning).
In reality:

Measurable C-14 appears in "ancient" materials constantly — coal, diamonds, limestone, marble, oil — all of which should be radiocarbon-dead if they were millions of years old.

Mainstream geology deletes these results because they contradict the canonical timeline.

Short chronology interpretation:

The universal C-14 signal means these materials are young — on the order of centuries to a couple thousand years.
The Real Role of Radiocarbon in Geology
Despite the myth, radiocarbon:

does not confirm stratigraphy does not reach geological timescales does not independently validate deep-time does not bridge archaeology → geology cannot test "millions of years" cannot verify the geologic column cannot date fossil layers cannot date mineral strata cannot date sedimentation cycles cannot date the "age of dinosaurs," the "age of coal," or any geological period
It is limited entirely to recent history — and even that is fragile.

In practice:

Radiocarbon provides a coherence window of ~200–1,000 years.
Everything older is calibration-model inference.

This is devastating for geology, because the discipline continues to deploy radiocarbon rhetorically as "proof" of the deep-time framework, even though it cannot touch that scale.

What Actually Happened in 1950
Radiocarbon did not seal the geological timeline.
Instead, it:

1. Gave archaeology a short-range tool
(useful for the last millennium when carefully applied)

2. Created a cultural illusion of scientific chronological precision
The public believed:

“If we can date something to 30,000 or 40,000 years, surely millions of years are validated too.”
But this was never true.

Radiocarbon doesn’t validate deep time — it fails to even reach the border of geology’s claimed timescales.

The deeper timelines still rested on:

U-Pb
K-Ar
Ar-Ar
Rb-Sr
which were already retrofitted to match the geological column.

Radiocarbon Strengthens the Short Chronology Far from anchoring geology’s timeline, radiocarbon:

collapses after centuries
contradicts deep-time chemistry shows young C-14 in “old” materials reveals contamination sensitivity forces arbitrary calibration curves cannot test geology at all
Thus:

Radiocarbon dating is entirely compatible with a world where the geological layers formed within the last few to several thousand years
— but totally incompatible with a deep-time chronology.
Radiocarbon didn’t validate deep time.
It validated only a tiny upper slice of an already-assumed timeline model.

But culturally it created the impression that “science has proven the geological ages,” even though radiocarbon cannot test — let alone confirm — the vast spans geology claims.

1960–2000: Plate Tectonics Retrofits the Old Timeline
Plate tectonics becomes mainstream in the 1960s, and is used to justify the old timescale:

slow drift = millions of years mantle plumes = millions ocean ridges = millions supercontinents = hundreds of millions
But the dating of these events still depends on:

magnetic striping (model-based, not measured) radiometric calibration (stratigraphy-based) assumed slow rates
Plate tectonics did not independently verify the timeline.
It was made to conform to it.

The Sociological Lock-In: Why Geology Cannot Revise Its Timeline
Once deep time became the backbone of:

evolutionary biology
climate science
paleontology
archaeology physics cosmology
anthropology
Earth system modeling
radiometric dating
museum narratives
school curricula
it became impossible to collapse.

Entire disciplines would require rewriting.

Universities, textbooks, funding, museums, research agendas, and professional identities all depend on the timeline.

Every scientist working in geology is trained inside the model.
Every anomaly is explained within the model.
Every contradictory finding is treated as an exception, never a refutation.

A timeline invented before measurement became the structure into which all later measurements were forced.

Why Challenges Are Dismissed Instinctively Geologists respond to anomalies with:

contamination
inheritance
resetting mixing erosion gaps reworking stratigraphic inversion time-transgressive boundaries unconformities
anomalous preservation
anomalous magnetism
anomalous isotopes
The very language of geology is constructed to preserve the model.

This isn't conspiracy.
It's structural inertia.

Once a chronology becomes embedded across all sciences, the system self-protects.

Summary: How Geology Fossilized Into Deep-Time Orthodoxy
Phase 1 — Ideological Construction (1800–1830)
Lyell imposes slow processes → long times required.
Phase 2 — Stratigraphic Assembly (1830–1870)
Geological column created by fossil sorting, not by clocks.
Phase 3 — Radiometric Fitting (1870–1910)
New isotope methods are filtered until they match the column.
Phase 4 — Institutionalization (1900–1950)
Deep time becomes foundational across sciences.
Phase 5 — Cultural Fossilization (1950–2000)
Educational institutions, museums, and public science embrace the model as unquestionable.
Phase 6 — Global Lock-In (2000–present)
Deep chronology becomes "the default," despite the absence of direct time measurement.

A Short-Chronology Geological Model
How a shorter stratigraphic history explains the Earth better than "millions of years."
Below is the central argument:

Geology looks old only because we assume slow processes.

Remove that assumption, and the whole Earth reads as a layered, catastrophic world. What follows is a fully coherent model, built from catastrophic mechanics, observed rapid processes, and real-world analogs.

The Fundamental Reality: Geology Records Processes, Not Time
The short-chronology reinterpretation begins with a simple fact:

Geology directly measures events, not ages.
Everything else is inference.

Once we stop assuming long durations, the geological record becomes a stack of events, not a clock.

And those events can—and do—happen fast.

The Geological Record Shows Sudden, Repeating, Catastrophic Deposition Almost every major geological formation on Earth shows signatures of:

violent, rapid deposition mass transport marine incursions
turbidity flows
continent-scale megafloods volcanic ash dumps sudden sedimentation pulses rapid canyon carving
mass die-offs
instantaneous fossil burial
These are not slow processes.
They are violent and fast — minutes to days to years.

Examples from the record:
cross-bedded sandstones → produced by massive storm surges or tsunamis graded bedding → turbidity currents that happen in hours rapid fossilization of fish with open mouths → minutes to hours fossil graveyards → mudflows or tsunami backwash entire forests buried upright → single catastrophic burial chalk and limestone megabeds → rapid blooms + rapid deposition polystrate fossils → burial in one major event
These point consistently to repeated large-scale catastrophes.

Deep time says:
These happened occasionally over 540 million years.
Short chronology says:
They more likely happened repeatedly within a much shorter window.

This explains why:

layers look uniform globally
fossils appear in sudden horizons “mass extinctions” cluster erosion surfaces are crisp, not weathered unconformities look like missing time, not experienced time
The rock record behaves like a compressed catastrophe archive, not a 500-million-year diary.

Layering via Cycles of Flood, Volcanism, and Basin Filling Instead of incredibly long eras, we get:

Marine transgressions
When coasts are hit by mega-storms, asteroids, tsunamis, or crustal displacement, sea-level surges deposit marine sediments inland.
Volcanic winters
Large eruptions generate:
ash beds
tuffs lahars
“fern spikes” after ecological collapse
These can repeat many times within centuries.
Basin-scale turbidity flows
Earthquakes or sudden water loads trigger sediment avalanches miles long.
Climatic oscillations
Short but intense:
glacial expansion
rapid meltwater floods dust-laden cooling periods
The combination of these cycles produces thick but fast-formed strata.
Minimum timescale:
Thousands of years of active catastrophe cycles can easily generate the vast majority of Earth's layered record.
Biological “Ages” Explained Without Deep Time
Cambrian explosion
Massive burial of pre-existing marine life by sudden sediment pulses.
No long-scale evolution required.
Sorting by ecology + hydrodynamics.
Paleozoic forests & coal Coal forms quickly when:
wood is buried in thick sediment pressure is applied
oxygen is cut off
Multiple catastrophic burials → multiple coal seams in centuries.

Mesozoic reptiles
Large animals sort differently than small ones during high-energy water flows.
This explains their layer positions.
Cenozoic mammals
Terrestrial deposits formed after the major marine pulses, in the stabilization phase.
This entire sequence can fit a few to several thousand years, not necessarily an assumed 500 million.

Mountain Ranges and Tectonics: Fast, Not Slow
Modern earthquakes show:

mountains can rise meters in minutes continents shift meters instantly fault blocks tilt rapidly
Extrapolating observed rates:

entire mountain belts can form in decades–centuries–millenia of quake clusters not necessarily millions of years
Erosion rates then sculpt features quickly:

1–3 mm/year denudation would remove mountains in < 3 million years yet mountains are sharp, uneroded → very young
The short chronology supports:

rapid uplift rapid erosion rapid stabilization
Canyons, River Valleys, and Landscapes Form Fast
We know this because:

Modern analogs
Mount St. Helens carved 100-ft canyons in hours
Missoula floods carved the Channeled Scablands in weeks
Icelandic jökulhlaups cut valleys in days
Tsunamis reshape landscapes instantly
The “long ages” interpretation is unnecessary.

Typical landscape formation timescale:
hundreds to thousands of years, not millions.

Ice Cores and Glaciation
While mainstream claims ice cores show 100,000-year cycles, we know:

annual bands merge at depth lower layers are model-dependent multiple layers form per year in storms Greenland ice has disturbed horizons consistent with rapid events many “ancient” ice cores date to only centuries in certain regions Short chronology glaciation looks like:

abrupt cooling rapid snowfall sudden glacier advance catastrophic meltwater pulses
Radiometric Dating Does Not Provide an Independent Timescale
It assumes:

initial daughter isotopes
closed systems
constant decay rates
no contamination
agreement with stratigraphy
But discordant ages are common and “adjusted” to expectations.
Therefore the deep-time timeline is not validated by radiometric evidence.

Short chronology interpretation:

isotopic ratios record chemical processes not elapsed time or they measure time in distorted ways due to fluctuating decay conditions Either way:
radiometric dating cannot distinguish 1,000 years from 100 million years reliably.

Why This Short Chronology Fits the Evidence Better ✔ Explains rapid burial fossils
✔ Explains polystrate fossils
✔ Explains consistent layering over huge distances
✔ Explains sudden changes in fossil assemblages
✔ Explains sharp mountain peaks
✔ Explains the lack of erosion expected over millions of years
✔ Explains the youthfulness of landscapes
✔ Explains the need for catastrophic vocabulary in modern geology ✔ Eliminates the circularity between stratigraphy and radiometric dating
Overall, the Earth’s surface looks far more like the product of rapid, repeated catastrophes over hundreds to thousands of years than the product of slow processes over millions.

The geological record is dominated by sudden burial, rapid sediment pulses, megaflood signatures, youthful mountains, uneroded landscapes, polystrate fossils, and globally synchronized layers — all features that form quickly, not slowly.

Nothing in geology directly measures deep time; the long timeline is inferred, not observed.
When we examine the physical evidence itself, without assuming millions of years, the Earth fits a compressed, event-driven chronology far better than a vast, uniform, deep-time one.

Deep time is unnecessary.

The physical data point overwhelmingly to a far younger geological surface.

A Technical Critique of Ice Core Dating and Why It Fails to Prove Deep Chronology
Ice cores are often presented as one of the strongest lines of evidence for “hundreds of thousands of years” of climate history. The argument rests on the idea that each annual snowfall creates a layer, and scientists count these layers downward like tree rings.

But this model collapses under examination.

Below is a systematic critique.

Annual Layers Are Only Directly Countable for a Few Centuries

Fact: Even ice-core scientists admit that clear, unambiguous annual layers disappear quickly with depth.

Near the surface (first ~200–600 years), summer–winter signals produce obvious bright/dark bands.
Below that, layers get:
compressed (a single “annual layer” might be <1 mm) diffused (chemical profiles smear and blend) folded (ice flow causes deformation, shear, lamination) overprinted by storms and sub-annual layers Direct counting ends early.
After that, what’s called “annual” is model-based, not visually observed.

Conclusion: Only the shallowest portion of an ice core is genuinely “seen.”
Everything beyond that is inferred, not measured.

Multi-Layer Storm Events Mimic “Annual” Layers
A single year can produce:

multiple melt–refreeze cycles
several dust storms sudden volcanic ash deposition unusual precipitation events
All can create what look like separate layers.

Even ice-core researchers acknowledge this and try to correct for it — but the corrections rely on statistical models and climate assumptions, not direct observation.

So: Layer ≠ Year.

Deep Layers Are Computed Using Models That Assume Deep Time
This is the heart of the issue.

Once annual layers blur, scientists turn to ice flow models (like the Dansgaard–Johnsen model):

These models assume slow accumulation.
They assume hundreds of thousands of years of compaction.
They assume long timescales to match the thickness profile.
Thus the model outputs deep chronology because it begins with deep chronology.
It is circular calibration.

Researchers then mix:

oxygen-isotope proxies assumed Milankovitch cycles theoretical accumulation rates flow dynamics equations

And tune the whole system until it matches the expected timeline.

This is not counting; it's curve-fitting.

Gas Ages and Ice Ages Don’t Match — Showing How Artificial the Model Is In deep ice:

the age of trapped gas and the age of the ice lattice can differ by thousands of supposed years.

Scientists “correct” this with Δage models — again assuming:

climate cycle lengths accumulation rates diffusion constants
glacial–interglacial durations
This mismatch reveals that the system is not measured reality but model tuning.

If the physical system were genuinely stable and chronological, gases and ice should align. They don’t.

Annual–Layer Counting in Greenland Has Produced Impossible Results
Greenland ice layers are particularly chaotic.

There are documented cases where:

20 layers were laid down in 1 year
The “annual” pattern reversed due to weather anomalies
Melt events obscure or destroy multiple layers entirely
Even in “best case” scenarios, Greenland series have to be adjusted repeatedly.

Every correction pushes the system further from direct observation and into assumptions about long timeframes.

Ice Flow Can Mix, Fold, or Truncate Layers
Deep ice is not static:

plastic flow moves layers laterally shear zones fold layers basal sliding destroys strata subglacial water lubricates flow deformation produces false repetition (“double years”)

Even in Antarctica, one of the most stable ice masses, deep layers show folding, disturbance, and lamination inconsistent with simple year-by-year accumulation.

Ice-core papers regularly mention:

“uncertain annual signal”
“layer thinning beyond the resolution limit”
“folded strata”
“near-basal age uncertainty is extremely large”
But the public never hears this.

Calibration to Other Deep-Time Systems Creates Circularity
Ice core deep chronology is not stand-alone evidence.

It is calibrated to:

orbital Milankovitch cycles deep-time climate models marine sediment cores
radiometric dates (especially volcanic tephra)
All of these methods also assume a long chronology.

When circular methods cross-calibrate, they produce an illusion of certainty.

That’s not independent verification — it’s mutual reinforcement of shared assumptions.

The 700,000+ Year Antarctic Chronology Relies on Extreme Extrapolation
The famous EPICA Dome C core is the foundation of the “800,000-year” climate chronology.

But the core only contains:

a few hundred directly observable annual layers beyond that, nothing annual is seen at all The deeper sections are constructed by:

thinning functions
flow models
isotope tuning
glacial cycle alignment
You can change the model parameters and get wildly different ages.

Researchers acknowledge that deep layers may be off by tens of thousands of years — yet the public hears “precise to 1%.”

No One Has Ever Observed Ice Layers Form Over More Than a Few Centuries
This is the important epistemic limitation.

Human observation:

only covers ~100–600 years of layering and even that period contains irregular layers
Everything beyond that is inference, not measurement.

We've never watched an ice sheet build a 1000-year segment, let alone 100,000.

So any claim of "hundreds of thousands of years" rests entirely on:

untested assumptions
theoretical models climate analogies
orbital alignment
The empirical base is thin.

Bottom Line
Ice cores do not prove deep time.
They prove:

ice accumulates
layers exist near the top deep ice is complex, deformed, and modeled scientists can generate a chronology if they assume one Ice-core chronologies beyond the first few hundred years are:

not directly observed not strictly counted not independent not falsifiable except by changing the model heavily reliant on circular calibration to long chronologies in other fields
In other words:

Ice cores give climate variation sequences, not absolute ages.
Their timescales are interpretive — not measured — and they cannot stand as independent evidence for a deep chronology of Earth.

A History of Ice-Core Dating and How It Became Orthodoxy

Ice cores are now held up as near-infallible chronological records stretching back "hundreds of thousands of years."
But this confidence is modern, not ancient.
The method's authority was built slowly, step by step, with a paper trail showing how assumptions hardened into dogma.

Below is the historical progression.

Pre-1950s: Polar Ice as a Curiosity, Not a Chronology Before mid-20th century science, polar ice was:

deep, mysterious poorly understood rarely drilled assumed to be layered, but with no clear methods for dating depth Early explorers (Nansen, Amundsen, Byrd) noted banding but did not claim these were annual.

Scientists knew:

snow accumulates ice compacts layers existed
But no one thought you could read hundreds of thousands of years.
Glaciers were viewed as dynamic, not time-capsules.

There was no chronology, only general ideas.

1950s–1960s: The First Cores + the Birth of the "Annual Layer" Narrative
Only in the 1950s did deep drilling in Greenland and Antarctica begin.

Key events:

1956: Camp Century (Greenland) base established
1957–59: International Geophysical Year
1960s: First continuous deep core recovered at Camp Century Researchers noticed:

alternating clear/dusty bands
sulfate peaks from known 19th-century eruptions
This created early optimism that deeper records might contain more "annual signatures."

But:
These early cores only convincingly counted a few centuries, not millennia.

The idea that every couplet = year was not yet accepted.
It was an emerging hypothesis.

1960s–1970s: The Glaciological Turn — From Counting to Modeling
By the late 1960s, scientists realized the problem:

Layers could not be counted reliably beyond the top few hundred meters.

Reasons:

compression diffusion deformation
sub-annual storm layers
melt events
So ice-core dating required new tools, especially:

Flow Models
Dansgaard and Johnsen pioneered mathematical models describing:

ice accumulation thinning rates deformation
vertical strain
These models began to replace direct observation.

Oxygen-Isotope Chronology
$\delta^{18}O$ and δD were used to infer climate cycles (warm/cold phases).
Climate oscillations were then matched to Milankovitch cycles (orbital theory).

This created the first major circularity:

“We know the age because the climate pattern fits the expected cycle length.”
Once flow models and isotope curves became standard, the field crossed a threshold:
Dating was no longer empirical counting — it was computational reconstruction.

1970s–1980s: Cross-Calibrations Cement the Long Timeline
During these decades, multiple deep-time fields tried to synchronize:

marine sediment cores
ice cores
Milankovitch orbital cycles
radiometric dating
paleoclimate models
Ice cores were calibrated against marine cores; marine cores against orbital theory;

orbital theory against geological sequences; geological sequences partially reinterpreted based on radiometric dates.

This cross-calibration created mutually reinforcing timelines.

Each method leaned on the others:

Deep ice ages validated orbital theory
Orbital theory validated deep ice ages
Marine cores validated both Radiometrics were adjusted to fit them
A self-consistent system emerged, but it was not independent.
It was a network of assumptions stitched together.

Late 1980s–1990s: The First “Hundreds of Thousands of Years” Claims
Major cores:

Vostok (Antarctica)
GRIP & GISP2 (Greenland)
These cores produced:

long climate curves
inferred glacial/interglacial cycles layer counts supplemented heavily by models
At this stage:

no direct annual signal existed past ~2,000 years deep ages were fully model-based Yet the public narrative shifted to:

“We have a continuous record of 160,000 years (Greenland) and 400,000 years (Vostok).”
The authority now rested not on what was seen but on what was computed.

The method became orthodox because:

the curves matched each other (after calibration) they matched orbital expectations climate scientists needed long timelines for models geology needed an ice-age clock
The feedback loop locked in.

2000s: EPICA Dome C Extends the Chronology to “800,000 Years”
The EPICA Dome C core (2004) was the turning point.

It produced:

no countable layers beyond a few hundred meters huge stretches with no visible annual markers ages derived entirely from flow modeling and orbital tuning
But the resulting curve aligned with:

CO_2 cycles
marine sediment cores
orbital variations
This alignment was treated as validation, not circular reasoning.

EPICA thus became the flagship of ice-core deep chronology.

After this, the field treated the deep timeline as settled, despite:

known uncertainties in basal flow acknowledged inability to visually count past a few centuries extreme sensitivity to model parameters mismatches in ice-age vs gas-age requiring correction models
Orthodoxy had fully formed.

2010s–Present: Institutionalization and the Closing of Debate
By the 2010s:

IPCC reports used ice-core long chronologies without caveat textbooks presented ice cores as direct clocks public communication simplified the story into “layer = year” cross-discipline reinforcement reached its peak
At this stage, challenging ice-core dating became socially and academically taboo because it would destabilize:

Paleoclimate models
Glacial theories
Marine sediment chronologies
Anthropogenic climate calculations
Orbital tuning methods
Geological timelines
The system became too interconnected to question.

Ice cores emerged as orthodoxy not because the empirical evidence is strong, but because the entire climate-time edifice leans on them.

Why Ice-Core Dating Became Orthodoxy
1. It provided a long chronology needed for paleoclimate models.

Models required tens or hundreds of thousands of years of data.
2. It matched orbital theory, creating a pseudo-confirmation loop.
3. It visually looks persuasive in public communication (layers!).
4. Climate science, geology, and astronomy all needed a shared timeline.
5. The method became institutionalized through major research stations and multi-decade funding cycles.
6. Few outside the ice-core community examined the mathematical assumptions.
7. Once the 800,000-year narrative fossilized, deviation became professionally risky.
Final Summary
The history of ice-core dating is not a story of direct measurement.
It is a story of increasing model dependence, cross-disciplinary calibration, and the gradual hardening of assumptions into “facts.”

In other words:

Ice cores became orthodoxy by fitting into a pre-existing, assumed long chronology — not by independently proving one.

Critique of Modern Linguistics’ Long Timeline — and Why the Evidence Fits a Shorter Chronology
Modern linguistics commonly assumes a very long timeline for language development:

Language origins: 50,000–200,000 years ago
Proto-Indo-European: ~4500–6000 BCE
Afro-Asiatic: 7000–10,000 BCE
Sino-Tibetan divergence: 6000–9000 years ago
Bantu expansion: ~3000 BCE
These numbers sound authoritative.
But they are not the product of linguistic data.
They come from imported assumptions and methods that do not actually measure time.

When we examine what we truly know, the timeline collapses dramatically.

Below is the critique, step by step.

Direct observation shows languages change fast, not slowly
We have ~2,000 years of directly attested linguistic change:

Latin → Romance
Created a whole family: French, Spanish, Italian, Romanian, Occitan, Catalan, etc.
These are mutually unintelligible and have major grammatical differences.
Old → Middle → Modern English
Massive drift: phonology, syntax, vocabulary, morphology.
Old Chinese → Middle Chinese → Mandarin
Tonal system reorganized, many consonant categories disappeared, syllable structures collapsed.
Proto-Slavic → modern Slavic
Split into East, West, and South branches with distinct phonologies and grammar.
Arabic
Far more divergence between spoken dialects than standard Arabic implies.
Conclusion:
One to two millennia is more than enough to produce large, distinct language families.

Yet the story often told is:

Indo-European branches supposedly diverged 6–9k years ago, but many core structural similarities still remain.
Afro-Asiatic families preserved recognizable patterns across ~10k+ years (per some proposals).
If languages can change that much in just 1–2k years, keeping coherent, reconstructable signal over 8–10k+ years is actually harder than the models admit:

You'd expect either:
Far more divergence and noise (making reconstruction dubious),
Or a much shorter actual time depth than the one being claimed.
Shorter chronology lens:

The comparative signal looks like millennia-scale, not tens-of-millennia-scale.
The fact that we can still reconstruct PIE at all suggests a time depth closer to the length of recorded history, not a vast double-length prehistory.
If Indo-European or Afro-Asiatic really had 8,000–12,000 years of divergent evolution, the similarities would be obliterated.
They would look like separate, unrelated families.

But they don't — which strongly implies shorter time depths.

Limits of the comparative method: you can't see forever
Historical linguistics rests on the comparative method: find systematic sound correspondences, reconstruct proto-forms, and infer a family tree.

Even mainstream linguists will tell you:

The time depth of reliable reconstruction is roughly 6–8k years at best, and often more like 3–5k:
Beyond that, sound changes, borrowing, and chance resemblance swamp the signal.
Famous reference works (e.g. standard introductions to historical linguistics) routinely warn that claims of genetic relationships beyond that horizon are speculative.
That already clashes with the very long timelines sometimes advertised to the public (e.g., "Nostratic 15,000+ years," "Proto-World 50,000+ years"):

These mega-families (Nostratic, Eurasiatic, Proto-World) are highly controversial even within mainstream linguistics.
The further back you push, the more it becomes pattern-hunting on noise, especially once you allow looser correspondences ("sort of similar" words, partial overlaps).
So even from inside mainstream theory, there's a tacit admission:

We do not have a robust, instrument-like method to reconstruct language families 10k–50k years into the past.
If your method's own practitioners say "we can't see that far," then using it to support a very long linguistic prehistory is already a stretch.

Glottochronology — the source of many long dates — is unreliable
Originally, long-time linguistic dates came from glottochronology — a "vocabulary decay rate" model.

Its assumptions:

vocabulary changes at a constant rate borrowing is minimal semantic shifts occur uniformly cultures evolve similarly

All of these are false.

The assumption of constant rates across time and cultures… doesn't hold.
Borrowing, cultural upheaval, and semantic shifts all break the nice clean math.
Modern linguistics largely treats glottochronology as unreliable; updated "lexicostatistics" is used cautiously, not as a precise dating tool.
Modern linguists admit:

The method is not accurate
The dates are model-bound
It cannot give real chronological ages
Yet the old numbers ("PIE = 4500 BCE," etc.) persist in textbooks and pop science.

So we have a "clock" that:

Assumes a constant rate that isn't shown empirically.
Depends on reconstructions that already sit near the edge of the method's horizon.
Gets recycled into neat infographics and textbooks as if it were solid.
From a shorter-chronology perspective, this is classic house-of-cards behavior: an unstable inner method used as if it were a calibrated, external timekeeper.

Conclusion:
Many long linguistic dates are inherited artifacts of a discredited system.

Written records: a compressed, not stretched, story
When you look at actual writing, the story is not "gradual, deep-time evolution." It's sudden density:

As soon as writing appears, we already see:
Fully formed grammatical systems.
Rich lexicon and morphology.
Specialized technical vocabularies (law, ritual, astronomy).
We do not see:

A long, slow progression from proto-language scribbles to full languages over tens of thousands of years.
Instead, languages arrive in the record already complex and differentiated.
From a shorter chronology angle, this is exactly what you'd expect if:

The real window of language diversification and crystallization is a few thousand years, not tens of thousands.
By the time we get writing, many branches are already differentiated because the "real" pre-writing interval was short but intense (a few centuries to a couple millennia), not vast.
Mainstream linguistics explains this by saying:

“Language is much older; writing just arrives late.”
But that’s an assumption driven by the evolutionary deep-time narrative, not by linguistic evidence itself. Nothing in the language data forces a 50–200k-year span. It’s imported from archaeology/genetics.

Circularity with archaeology & genetics
Here’s the pattern you see a lot:

Archaeology & genetics adopt a deep-time human history (Homo sapiens ~300k years ago, modern behavior ~50–100k years).
Linguists assume language must be nearly as old as “behavioral modernity.”
Therefore they place language origins tens of thousands of years ago — because “humans then must’ve talked.”
That long timescale then gets echoed as if linguistics itself independently confirmed it.
This is not independent confirmation; it’s cross-disciplinary echo.

From a shorter chronology perspective:

Archaeology and genetics have their own deep-time issues, and linguistic “confirmation” is inherited from those assumptions.
The actual language evidence (reconstructions + inscriptions) does not demand a long prehistory. It only fits comfortably once you presuppose deep time.
Cross-family similarities imply shorter timelines, not longer
When unrelated families show:

similar case systems
parallel sound changes shared morphological templates identical functional grammatical patterns
…linguists assume these developed independently across deep time.

But parallelism is more consistent with overlapping time frames, not immense separation.

In other words:
Language universals look like features of relatively recent, interacting systems, not remnants of 10,000 years of divergence.

If Indo-European, Afro-Asiatic, Uralic, Altaic, and Sino-Tibetan truly diverged 6–12k years ago, then:

cognates should be nearly wiped out, typological similarities should be minimal or accidental, structural parallels should be statistical noise.

But there are:

abundant typological parallels,
unexpected structural overlaps,
recurring phonological patterns, widespread similar morphology (e.g., ablaut, case systems, agglutination patterns).
This makes sense if divergence is 1,000–2,500 years, but not if it's 8,000–12,000.

Languages simply do not retain this much structure over immense spans.

Most of the World's Alphabets Share One Ancient Order
Despite looking different on the surface, most of the world's alphabets ultimately follow the same core sequence — the old Near Eastern ABGD order:

A–B–G–D–E …

This order originated in the Phoenician/Aramaic script and spread through the Mediterranean and Near East, producing:

Greek (Alpha–Beta–Gamma–Delta)
Latin (A–B–C–D)
Hebrew (Aleph–Bet–Gimel–Daleth)
Arabic (Alif–Ba–Ta–Tha)
Syriac
Coptic
Aramaic derivatives
Armenian and Georgian are not independent exceptions. Both were created in the 4th–5th centuries within the Greek–Syriac cultural sphere and preserve the same A–B–G–D structural sequence, even though the letter shapes are unique.

As a result, the alphabets of hundreds of modern languages — across Europe, the Middle East, Africa, and parts of Asia — inherit this same basic ordering.

Only a few systems (like Indic scripts, Chinese logographs, and Korean Hangul) use independent ordering principles.

This means:

More than half of the world's alphabets ultimately use the same inherited order.
Even when scripts look different (Latin, Greek, Hebrew, Arabic), their underlying sequence is the same.

Conclusion:
The vast majority of alphabetic systems around the world trace back to one shared ancient ordering tradition. The global picture is far more unified — and far younger — than it first appears.

How the same data fits a shorter chronology
Suppose we drop the assumption of tens-of-thousands of years and instead say:

The real window of human linguistic history (as regards currently known languages) is on the order of a few thousand years, not 50–200k.
Many language families are younger and more rapidly differentiated than assumed.
Some “ancient” lineages have been retro-dated via circular links to deep-time archaeology and genetics.
Then the same evidence re-arranges neatly:

Inscriptions & texts
Earliest secure written languages ~3–4k years ago = near the actual origin horizon of our current linguistic ecosystem, not the final 5% of a huge unseen span.
Comparative method’s 6–8k horizon
That’s not a frustratingly short telescope for a huge universe; it might actually be close to the full range needed for real history.
Attempts to reach further (Proto-World, Nostratic) are noise because there isn’t much older history to see.
Speed of change
Observed rapid change (Latin→Romance, Old→Modern English) fits a world where major diversification/inflation happened in the last 2–4k years, not slowly over 50k.
“Deep-history” languages
Claims that X family is 10–15k years old collapse into more modest time depths.
Many long chains of reconstructed proto-forms become over-extended; we keep the near end (2–4k years), treat the rest as speculative padding.
What linguistics actually shows (and doesn’t)
So what does modern linguistics truly show about time?

It does show:

Languages change systematically over centuries and millennia.
We can reconstruct family trees and proto-forms across some thousands of years.
The present diversity of languages is consistent with a few millennia of branching and change.
It does not robustly show:

That language itself is 50–200k years old, as opposed to “at least several thousand”.
That specific proto-families can be dated with precision beyond ~3–5k years.
That mega-families and Proto-World are more than speculative constructs.
All of the dramatic deep-time claims rest on:

Extrapolations from limited data.
Methods with known limitations (glottochronological thinking).

Circular borrowing of dates from archaeology & genetics.
In other words: linguistics, properly interpreted, supports a shallow but richly structured human chronology of language. The sense of “vast prehistory” comes not from direct linguistic evidence but from aligning linguistics with a pre-existing deep-time cosmology.

Overview of the Manuscript Tradition — and Why It Fails to Prove Deep Time
The belief that manuscripts establish a long, unbroken chronology is one of the biggest illusions in mainstream historiography. When we examine the manuscript tradition empirically—object by object, century by century—it becomes clear that manuscripts do not demonstrate thousands of years of continuous history.

Instead, they show a short, late, discontinuous, highly curated record, assembled primarily between the 9th and 17th centuries and fossilized in the 18th–19th centuries.

Below is the structured critique.

The Manuscript Tradition Begins Shockingly Late
Across all major civilizations (Europe, Islamic world, Jewish tradition, India, China):

The overwhelming majority of surviving manuscripts date from 1100-1500 CE.
Manuscripts before 800 CE are extremely rare, usually fragmentary, and lack chain of custody.

Large, sustained manuscript traditions do not appear early—they appear suddenly in the medieval period.
This is not a continuous tradition.
It is a late arrival.

There Is No Unbroken Chain of Transmission
For every major “ancient” text:

We do not possess the original.
We do not possess the immediate copy.
We do not possess the exemplar chain.
We do not have documentation of copying events.
We do not have records linking manuscripts across centuries.
Instead, we have:

A late medieval manuscript
That claims to represent a much older work
With no intermediate links
And no physical ancestors
The chain is imagined, not witnessed.

Manuscripts Were Copied in a Very Narrow Window (800–1450 CE)
Most surviving manuscripts—biblical, classical, philosophical, scientific, literary—were produced in:

Monastic scriptoria (9th–12th c.)
University scriptoria (12th–14th c.)
Renaissance workshops (14th–15th c.)
This is a 500–600 year window, not a multi-millennial tradition.

If antiquity had produced immense libraries for centuries, their total absence before 800 CE cannot be explained by selective destruction—especially when post-800 CE manuscripts survive in the same regions where earlier ones supposedly vanished.

Classical Antiquity Enters the Manuscript Record Only in the Middle Ages
Every major classical author—Homer, Plato, Aristotle, Herodotus, Thucydides, Livy, Tacitus, Cicero, Virgil—has earliest surviving copies from:

9th–15th centuries CE
This means:

“Ancient” literature is preserved in medieval manuscripts, not ancient ones.
The supposed 1,000-year transmission chains are unverifiable.
A continuous literary tradition requires early manuscripts.

We do not have them.

Canon Formation Occurs After the Manuscripts Appear
Between 1400 and 1700:

Renaissance humanists “rediscover” classical works
Scholars edit them into coherent canons
Christian texts are standardized
Biblical and patristic corpora are harmonized
Islamic and Jewish canons are consolidated
East Asian classics are re-edited and re-copied
In each case, the canon is created long after the supposed era of composition.

This means that editors—not ancient authors—determine the shape of these traditions.

Manuscript Dating is Circular Manuscripts are dated using:

Paleography
Codicology
Ornamentation
Watermarks
Script evolution tables
Linguistic style
Historical assumptions
But these methods rely on the same chronology they claim to verify.

Example of circularity:

Paleography says a script is 4th century.
Because 19th-century scholars decided that script type belongs to the 4th century.
Manuscripts are then used to “prove” the 4th century existed.
The dating system presupposes the deep timeline.
It does not independently establish it.

The Retrojection Seam (1677–1780) Created “Ancient” Manuscripts
During this period:

Scholars built the first paleography tables
Libraries integrated manuscripts into chronological systems
Monastic holdings were catalogued
Dates were assigned retrospectively
“Ancient” manuscripts become ancient by classification, not by origin
This is the foundational moment at which manuscripts became “evidence of antiquity”—but only because the new chronology told them to be.

Manuscripts did not prove the timeline.
The timeline defined them.

Excavation-Era Rediscovery Created the Illusion of Antiquity
In the 1800s:

Mesopotamian tablets
Egyptian papyri
Buddhist sutras
Dead Sea Scrolls
Gnostic texts
Mayan codices
…were suddenly discovered by imperial archaeologists.

These do not represent a continuous tradition.
They represent a rediscovery wave, not an unbroken chain.

Earlier manuscripts did not hold up the ancient world.
19th-century excavations created a new “ancient layer” and retrofitted it to the chronology.

Gaps of 500–2000 Years Are the Norm, Not the Exception
Examples:

Homer: gap ~1700 years
Plato: gap ~1200 years
Tacitus: gap ~800–1000 years
Hebrew Bible: gap ~1500 years (to full manuscripts)
Qur’an: gap ~200–300 years (to full manuscripts)
Talmud: gap ~700–900 years
Hindu Vedas: gap ~2000+ years
Confucian Analects: gap ~1200 years
Mahābhārata: gap ~1500 years
Sima Qian: gap ~1000 years
These are not chains of preservation.
They are voids, followed by sudden appearance.

Manuscript Tradition Shows No Evidence for Deep Time
Deep time requires:

Continuous copying
Continuous preservation
Continuous manuscript evidence
Multiple independent traditions

Verifiable transmission chains
But the manuscript record shows:

No continuity
Abrupt beginnings
Massive gaps
Late appearance
Canon creation in Renaissance
Retrojection in 17th–18th centuries
Excavation-driven proof in 19th century
Therefore:

The manuscript tradition does not support a 3000–5000+ year chronology.
It supports a 700–900 year chronology, with retrojections and later inventions filling the gaps.

Timeline of Manuscript Provenance
A cross-civilizational overview of when manuscripts actually enter history
Below is the real timeline of manuscript survival and cataloguing — not the claimed ages of texts, but the documented provenance of the physical manuscripts themselves.

This timeline reveals a late, clustered, discontinuous record that does not support a multi-millennial literary tradition.

Before 500 CE: Fragmentary, Isolated, and Not Continuous
0–300 CE
Extremely rare manuscript fragments (mostly papyri in Egypt), though these may be misdated.
Almost nothing from Europe, the Levant, India, China, or Persia.
No “classical library” in manuscript form survives.
No continuous chain of custody for any major text.
Pattern: isolated scraps, no networks, no lines of transmission.

300–500 CE
Late antique luxury codices begin to appear (e.g., some biblical codices), these also may be misdated.
Classical pagan texts still do not appear in manuscript form; the earliest witnesses are centuries later.
Almost no administrative or historical manuscripts survive.
Pattern: still fragmentary; provenance is broken, not continuous.

500–800 CE: The “Dark Manuscript Age”
Across cultures (Christian, Jewish, Islamic, Chinese, Indian):

Almost no surviving manuscripts.
Major religious, historical, and literary texts have no witnesses from this era.
The “early Middle Ages” are practically a manuscript desert.
800–1100 CE: First Real Survivals — A Jump, Not a Continuity
Around 800–1100 CE:

Carolingian manuscripts are said to be created in large numbers — mostly theological and liturgical.
These are overwhelmingly first noticed and catalogued in the 1500s-1700s, and first dated in the 1800s.
Few secular or classical texts.
Islamic manuscript production expands, but early Qur’ans remain fragmentary.
Jewish manuscript tradition begins visibly only after 900 CE.
Chinese manuscripts begin surviving in cave libraries (Dunhuang) — a large but sudden pocket.
Pattern: sudden appearance of manuscripts without earlier chains.

This is the first recognizable layer of manuscript culture that survives.

1100–1300 CE: The Great Manuscript Explosion
This is the critical turning point.

In Europe:
Massive production in monasteries and universities.
Major classical texts appear for the first time in 9th–12th century codices.
Augustine, Jerome, Origen, the Church Fathers: earliest manuscripts are from this period.
The first substantial manuscripts of major Latin and Greek authors appear (Homer, Plato, Cicero, Livy, etc.).
In the Islamic world:
Qur’anic manuscripts become regularized.
Early hadith manuscripts appear (but still centuries after composition claims).
In Jewish tradition:
Talmud manuscripts begin surviving (12th–13th c.).
Masoretic text witnesses appear only around 1000–1200 CE.
In China & East Asia:
Buddhist and Confucian classics receive stable manuscript witnesses (Song era).
Pattern: Textual canons stabilize across cultures almost simultaneously.

This cluster is the true birth of the manuscript record as we know it.

1300–1500 CE: Second Wave, Pre-Print Consolidation Europe:
Humanist Renaissance begins collecting and copying manuscripts.

“Rediscovery” of classical authors (Tacitus, Pliny, Lucretius, Quintilian) occurs here, not in antiquity.
Schools of scribes standardize script and formats.
Many manuscripts from the 1400s receive retrodated attributions.
Islamic world:
Manuscript proliferation in Persia, Anatolia, India.
Standardization of Qur’an and Hadith texts.
Jewish:
Vast copying activity in medieval Spain and Italy.
China:
Neo-Confucian manuscript culture thrives; block printing widespread.
Pattern: consolidation and harmonization, not continuity from antiquity.

1450–1530 CE: Printing Begins — Fossilization Stage I
First printed editions (editio princeps) of classical works appear.
Many “ancient” texts are printed for the first time.
Often based on single medieval manuscripts.
Once printed, the printed version becomes the canonical text.
This begins the fossilization of the “ancient” corpus.

1530–1677 CE: Early Modern Editing & Canon Construction
Greek and Latin classics standardized in print.
Large-scale editorial projects: Estiennes, Plantin, Aldine Press.
The Vatican and major monastic orders classify and edit texts.
Biblical and patristic canons fixed in their modern forms.
This period creates the illusion of antiquity through editorial harmonization.

1677–1780 CE: The Retrojection Seam
Almost no new early manuscripts appear.
Instead, scholars classify, date, assign centuries, and build paleography tables.
Manuscript dating becomes systematized — using assumptions that create antiquity.
The chronological scaffolding is built here, not in antiquity.
This is when medieval manuscripts become “ancient.”

1780–1900 CE: Rediscovery Wave II — Archeology, Museums, & Catalogues
Massive library reorganizations (British Museum, Vatican, Bibliothèque Nationale).
Early manuscripts are catalogued, dated, and interpreted within the new chronology.
Many major “ancient” texts are found only in this period (e.g., Tacitus MS rediscovered in Fulda).
Egyptian papyri, Mesopotamian tablets, Buddhist sutras appear suddenly via excavations.
Manuscripts become fetishized objects of antiquity.
This is fossilization Stage II: the physical proof-layer appears.

1900–Present: Scientific Dating & Digital Access

Radiocarbon dating, codicology, multispectral imaging applied to manuscripts.
But these techniques rely on:
conventional chronology anchors dendro/radiocarbon calibrations stylistic tables
paleography assumptions
Thus they reinforce, not independently verify, the chronological model.
Digital cataloguing gives the impression of antiquity, but the material record remains medieval and early modern.

Summary: What the Provenance Timeline Actually Shows
Across cultures, the manuscript record follows a consistent pattern:

1. Almost no surviving manuscripts before 800 CE
2. Explosive growth 800–1300 CE (first real corpus)
3. Classical, biblical, and philosophical texts appear only in medieval witnesses
4. Renaissance and early-modern editors create the canon
5. The Retrojection Seam (1677–1780) assigns ancient dates
6. 19th century rediscovery provides physical anchors that appear ancient but are not continuous

This is not the timeline of a 3,000-year literary tradition.
It is the timeline of a much shorter chronology.

A Critique Of Paleography And Why It Cannot Accurately Prove Age
Paleography — the study of handwriting to date documents — is often presented as a rigorous scientific discipline. But it is not a science. It is a stylistic comparison method built on assumptions, circular chronologies, and feedback loops that make it fundamentally unable to establish absolute dates.

Below is a systematic critique.

Paleography Is Circular: It Dates Undated Texts Using Other Undated Texts
Paleographers claim to “estimate age” by comparing letterforms, ligatures, ductus, abbreviations, and ornamentation.
But what are the reference samples?

Manuscripts dated by scribal colophons (self-dating, often copied forward)
Manuscripts assigned dates through older paleography
Manuscripts linked to conventional historical events (which themselves may rest on phantom chronology)
Printed editions back-projected as “traditions"
This creates a circular feedback loop:

Undated manuscript → compared against a “dated” sample → but that sample was dated by earlier paleography.

The field functions on self-reinforcing stylistic genealogy, not objective temporal measurement.

Style Does Not Evolve Linearly; It Jumps, Collapses, and Revives
Modern empirical evidence shows that:

Handwriting styles can change abruptly due to reforms, institutional mandates, or scriptoria copying rules.
Styles can persist unchanged for centuries (e.g., monastic traditions, chancery hands).
Styles can revive after long intervals (e.g., humanist minuscule reviving Carolingian minuscule).
Geographic variation can mimic temporal change, confusing time with place.
Thus: stylistic similarity does not imply chronological proximity.
One script from “900 CE” and one from “1400 CE” may be nearly identical — or conversely, a 20-year gap may have dramatic shifts.

Paleography assumes gradual evolution, but real-world script history behaves in punctuated jumps, not smooth timelines.

Paleography Assumes Stable Transmission, But Manuscripts Are Copies of Copies

A manuscript's handwriting reflects:

the scribe's training
the scribe's model
the scriptorium's house style the exemplar manuscript (which could be centuries older or just a few years) Thus a manuscript can be:

recent but copied from an older model, preserving archaic forms old but copied in a modernized hand, making it look newer recently copied in imitation of a prestigious "ancient" style (common in medieval and Renaissance scriptoria)
Imitation destroys paleography's ability to distinguish old from new.
If scribes intentionally reproduced earlier styles — which happened frequently — paleographic dating collapses.

Paleography Lacks Quantitative Anchors Paleography has:

no atomic or chemical clock
no measurable decay process
no universal constant
Its "accuracy" (often advertised as ±50 years) is based on expert consensus, not empirical measurement.

If two experts disagree, there is no instrument or method to resolve the disagreement.
The field relies on:

trained intuition stylistic comparison consensus judgment reference to conventional chronology
This is not a scientific dating method — it is an interpretive art based on community agreement.

The Reference Timeline Is Already Inflated
Even if paleographic comparison were reliable, its reference points rest on the inflated conventional chronology, which includes:

invented figures (as observed by Jean Hardouin) misdated manuscripts (as observed by Edwin Johnson, William Kammeier, Uwe Topper) Renaissance retrojections rediscovery waves with no true provenance phantom centuries in the AD system Dating a document to "9th century" assumes a 9th century existed in the way we understand it.

If the reference timeline is padded or distorted, paleographic placements reinforce the distortion.

This means paleography can only produce relative, not absolute, estimates — and even those sit inside a potentially fabricated framework.

Most Paleographic “Standards” Were Constructed in the 19th Century
The field matured when:

national libraries centralized manuscripts major cataloguing projects began (c. 1800–1900) facsimile technology emerged the great classification systems were built
This means:

The surviving manuscripts reflect rediscovery phases rather than an unbroken historical record.
The paleographic “tree” was constructed after manuscripts were already sorted, dated, and assumed to fit a timeline.
Most manuscripts were admitted into scholarship only after the chronological framework had already been fixed.
Thus paleography was born into a pre-defined chronology, not used to construct one — making it inherently biased toward confirmation.

Manuscripts Often Have False Colophons or Later Additions
Colophons — the dates scribes write inside manuscripts — are often treated as gold-standard data.

But they are not reliable:

Scribes copied colophons from source manuscripts.
Colophons were added later or rewritten during binding/restoration.
Some scripts reused older parchment and kept older colophons.
Many colophons use regnal or liturgical dating systems that were later misinterpreted.
False colophons can shift paleographic reference points by centuries.
Because paleographers rarely re-examine colophons skeptically, these infiltrate the dating system and corrupt all later comparisons.

Blind Tests Show Paleography Performs Poorly
When manuscripts with known (modern) dates are submitted anonymously to paleographers, the results often show:

wide variation

systematic clustering around expected periods overconfidence in precise stylistic ranges significant misplacement when samples imitate older styles Experts frequently disagree by 100–300 years — far beyond their claimed ±50-year "precision."

The method is therefore not reliable enough to reconstruct long chronology.

Paleography Is Contaminated by Manuscript Provenance Issues
As we have documented, manuscripts often:

appear suddenly in specific centuries lack a continuous chain of custody are only witnessed after the printing era follow rediscovery waves
cluster by region, institution, and cataloguing period
Paleography assumes these manuscripts reflect stable, organically growing traditions. But their provenance patterns instead show intermittent appearance, editorial consolidation, and post-facto classification — not long, continuous historical development.

A dating method built on such a corpus inherits the same unreliability.

Paleography Proves Style, Not Time
In the end, paleography can only prove:

"This handwriting resembles this other handwriting."
"These letterforms share stylistic features."
"This script family looks earlier or later within its own stylistic evolution."
It cannot prove:

the real date of composition the age of the underlying text absolute chronological placement the number of centuries between manuscripts that a "9th-century" sample is actually 9th century
Paleography is a relative stylistic taxonomy, not a time machine.

Conclusion: Paleography Is an Interpretive Art Built on a Circular Timeline
Because paleography:

uses undated samples to date undated samples assumes a long, unbroken chronology cannot detect imitation or revival lacks scientific anchors performs poorly in blind tests anchors itself in Renaissance and 19th-century assumptions treats unstable colophons as “data” is contaminated by manuscript provenance gaps

…it cannot reliably prove the true age of manuscripts.

At best, paleography is a descriptive tool, useful for organizing script styles.
At worst, it is a circular mechanism that reinforces phantom centuries and the inherited long chronology.

A History Of Paleography — And How It Became An Orthodoxy
Paleography is often imagined as an ancient discipline stretching back to monastic scriptoria. In reality, it is a modern construction, built slowly between the 16th and 20th centuries, and fossilized into academic orthodoxy through institutional consolidation, cataloguing projects, and the needs of historical chronology.

Below is the timeline of how it emerged and then became unquestionable.

1500–1600: The Renaissance Invention of “Ancient Scripts” Paleography begins as an offshoot of Renaissance humanism.

After the invention of printing (mid-15th century), humanists in Italy and France became obsessed with:

identifying “ancient” writing styles classifying manuscripts distinguishing “Roman,” “Gothic,” and “Carolingian” scripts reconstructing supposedly old texts
Important developments:

1450–1550: Humanists rediscover and imitate older scripts
Humanist minuscule was created by Poggio Bracciolini and others as a deliberate imitation of “Carolingian” writing — which they believed was ancient Roman.

This misunderstanding is the first major misstep that shaped paleography’s later categories.
A Renaissance script became the model for “early medieval script.”

Script classification followed pre-existing chronological assumptions
Humanists sorted scripts into “ancient,” “medieval,” and “modern,” not through measurement, but through literary expectations:

Roman = ancient Gothic = medieval
Humanist = modern but inspired by antiquity
This built a stylistic timeline before any empirical method existed.

1600–1700: Monastic Forensics and the Birth of Diplomatic Criticism
The next turning point came with the rise of diplomatics — the study of charters and forgeries.

Jean Mabillon's De re diplomatica (1681)
Often treated as the "birth" of paleography, though Mabillon was not doing modern paleography.
He was distinguishing:

authentic monastic documents forged charters differing handwriting styles
Mabillon:

created early script categories identified "merovingian," "carolingian," "beneventan," etc.
used stylistic comparison, not absolute dating Mabillon's goal was institutional: defending Benedictine archives.
His classifications became canonical because they served the Church's archival power.

But even Mabillon relied heavily on presumed timelines
He accepted the Scaliger–Petavius chronology as fixed.
Thus all script categories he created were placed onto a calendar that had already been stretched and back-projected.

1700–1800: State Archives and the Need for Standard Chronology
In this era, European states created:

royal archives
national libraries
centralized catalogues
standardized legal records
Paleography expanded because governments needed:

to authenticate documents to establish legal rights to place manuscripts into national histories
Thus paleography was institutionalized before it was scientifically validated.

1750–1800: The classification mania

Enlightenment scholars created:

enormous script tables
chronological atlases
facsimile collections
These projects codified paleography into a bureaucratic system, reinforcing the conventional timeline of history.

1800–1900: Academic Paleography Is Born
The 19th century is the true foundation of the modern discipline.

National codex projects
France: École des Chartes (1821)
Italy: Vatican School (1884)
Germany: Monumenta Germaniae Historica (1820s)
Britain: Record Office institutions
These schools trained bureaucratic specialists in:

reading medieval scripts
dating manuscripts
cataloguing national literary heritage
This professionalization created a closed expert class whose judgments were taken as authoritative.

The rise of printed facsimiles
Lithography and photography allowed mass reproduction of scripts.
This enabled:

comparison standardization style charts
pedagogical manuals
The “paleographic timeline” was constructed visually in this century — and once printed, it became self-reinforcing.

The long chronology needed paleography, so paleography confirmed the long chronology
The discipline was inserted into the architecture of the Scaliger–Petavius timeline.
Historians assumed the timeline was real → paleographers supplied the scripts to match it.

This is where paleography becomes a circular proof system.

1900–1950: The High Orthodoxy of Paleography
In the early 20th century:

Leading paleographers (Lowe, Traube, Bischoff, Derolez) created “definitive” script typologies
Their classifications became the template for every university course.

uncial half-uncial insular caroline minuscule gothic textura
cursiva, semicursiva chancery scripts, court hands and dozens more
These styles were assigned precise ranges like:

“mid-8th century”
“late 10th century”
“after 1150”
These ranges were based on consensus and examples — not on science.

Paleography merged with codicology and diplomatics
This created the impression of a multidisciplinary empirical foundation.
But all disciplines relied on the same assumed chronology.

Manuscript dating hardened into rule
Scholars wrote manuals stating paleography could date manuscripts to within “±50 years.”
This precision was not measured — it was asserted.

Because the manuals said it, students believed it, and the field locked into orthodoxy.

1950–2000: Fossilization Through Mass Cataloguing and University Curricula
Post-war decades created the modern belief system.

Photocopiers, microfilm, digital catalogues
Millions of manuscripts were scanned, indexed, and sorted according to:

paleographic era script style geographic handwriting families assumed historical periods
The classification infrastructure caused the methodology to self-reinforce.

University teaching cemented “canonical ranges”
Every generation of students memorized:

Carolingian minuscule = 8th–12th century
Gothic textura = 12th–15th century
Humanist script = 15th century
Coptic and Syriac hands = late antiquity
Arabic scripts = 7th century onward
These were presented as facts, not hypotheses.

Radiocarbon's rise ironically strengthened paleography
Even though radiocarbon is unreliable for deep chronology, it was seen as corroborating the paleographic timeline — even though most manuscripts are too young to be tested or too contaminated.

Thus paleography gained the appearance of being "scientific," even though it remained stylistic.

2000–Present: Orthodoxy Maintains Itself Through Institutional Inertia Today paleography is seen as:

authoritative mature trustworthy precise
But this appearance rests on:

Massive investment in manuscript catalogs
Changing the timeline would invalidate centuries of library work.
Dependency in related fields
History, philology, legal studies, medieval studies — all rely on paleographic dating.
Circular validation
Paleography confirms chronology.
Chronology confirms paleography.
Social enforcement
Disagreement is treated as amateurism or conspiracy theorizing, not research.
The result: paleography maintains its orthodoxy exactly the way other academic paradigms fossilize — through institutional inertia, mutual dependency, and the sunk-cost structure of cataloguing systems.

Conclusion: Paleography Became Orthodox Not Through Proof, but Through Infrastructure
Paleography never proved the ages of manuscripts.

Instead, it became orthodoxy through:

Renaissance misclassification monastic self-defense

state archival consolidation 19th-century standardization early 20th-century typology post-war cataloguing disciplinary echo chambers dependency from adjacent fields
It is a historically constructed belief system, not a scientifically dated timeline.

A Discovery-Based Narrative of Ancient Writing
The traditional story says:

Writing began in Sumer around 3300 BCE, spread to Egypt, China, and the Near East, then evolved over thousands of years.
But when you look only at what people truly knew, when they knew it, and what was actually decoded, the story collapses entirely.

The real timeline shows that almost all ancient writing entered human knowledge between 1752 and 1920.

Before 1800 — The World Had Almost No Knowledge of “Ancient Writing”
Before the 19th century:

Sumer was completely unknown.
Cuneiform was undeciphered squiggles on ruins.
Akkadian didn’t exist as a known language.
Hittite had never been seen.
Oracle bone Chinese hadn’t been discovered.
Egyptian hieroglyphs were decorative mystery symbols, not a readable script.
No one knew what the “ancient Near East” looked or sounded like.
The world had no access to any of the supposed earliest writing systems.

All reconstructions of “ancient literacy” are modern reconstructions.

Before 1752, Europe had zero authentic ancient papyrus texts in Greek or Latin.

Everything classical that we “knew” came through:

medieval manuscripts
Renaissance copies of medieval manuscripts early printed editions based on those medieval copies 1752-1800 — The First Real Ancient Greek/Latin Documents Discovered in Modernity

1752 — The Herculaneum Papyri discovered
They were the first time in modern European history that scholars encountered:

genuine ancient papyrus scrolls surviving Roman-period literary manuscripts actual ancient handwriting (not medieval copies)
Early attempts to read destroyed many of them, and their contents only began to enter human knowledge after 1800.

1799–1822 — Egyptian Writing Enters Human Knowledge
1799 — Rosetta Stone discovered
French soldiers in Napoleon's campaign find the first trilingual key to hieroglyphs.
1822 — Champollion announces decipherment
This is the first moment hieroglyphs become readable.
Before 1822, every "ancient Egyptian" text was unreadable.

This means the entire body of Egyptian literature was invisible until the early 19th century.

1840–1870 — Cuneiform Writing Suddenly Becomes Legible
Western explorers bring back clay tablets by the thousands.

1840s–1850s — excavation of Nineveh, Babylon, Ur
Tons of cuneiform tablets pour into Europe.
1850–1870 — Rawlinson, Hincks, and Oppert decipher cuneiform
Suddenly:
Sumerian
Akkadian
Babylonian
Assyrian
…all "come into existence" as readable languages.

Before 1850 none of these languages existed in modern knowledge.

This is the single largest leap in our understanding of "ancient writing."

1900–1915 — Hittite Writing Discovered, Then Cracked
1906–1907 — Hattusa tablets uncovered
A huge archive appears out of nowhere.
1915 — Hrozný deciphers Hittite
Within months, an entirely new Indo-European branch is recognized.
Hittite didn't exist as a readable language until 1915.

1899–1930 — Chinese Oracle Bone Script Enters Scholarship
1899 — Recognized as writing

A scholar notices patterns and realizes they're ancient inscriptions.
1900–1930 — Decipherment progresses
Oracle bone script becomes readable only in the 20th century.
The "earliest Chinese writing" was unknown until 1899.

This means
All major ancient writing systems entered human knowledge between 1799 and 1930.
The entire foundation of "ancient literacy" is barely 200 years old.

There is no continuous historical knowledge of ancient writing
Everything we know about Sumerian, Akkadian, Hittite, and oracle bone Chinese is a 19th–20th century invention (i.e., a decipherment project).

The deep-time writing narrative is retroactive
The dates (3300 BCE, etc.) were assigned after discovery, not inherited from history.

We do not have ancient records — we have modern decipherments
These interpretations:

rely on modern assumptions use modern linguistic models depend on 19th–20th century scholarly reconstruction are filtered through today's chronology
The "oldest writing" story is younger than the light bulb, telephone, and photography Sumerian entered modern knowledge:

after the steam engine after European industrialization before World War I after the American Revolution
before the airplane
Hittite was deciphered two years before the machine gun.

This is not ancient continuity — it is modern scholarship.

The corrected narrative of ancient writing
Here is what an honest, discovery-based narrative looks like:

Before 1800, humanity had almost no access to ancient writing. Most was medeival copies.
1799–1822, Egypt becomes readable.
1840–1870, Mesopotamia becomes readable.
1899–1930, early Chinese writing becomes readable.
1906–1915, Hittite becomes readable.
By 1930, the entire corpus of "ancient writing" is reconstructed.

Only in the mid–20th century does the modern narrative of ancient scripts become firmly established.
All “deep antiquity” interpretations depend on these modern decipherments, not on continuous transmission from the past.
The real conclusion
The traditional story says:

Writing began 5,000 years ago, and we’ve always known this.
But the actual story is:

Humanity rediscovered all ancient writing in the last 200-300 years — and deciphered most of it in the last 150-200.
The deep-time narrative is a modern construct.
The writing itself is real, but the interpretation is extremely recent.

A Critique of Paleontology and Why It Fails to Prove Deep Time
Paleontology is often presented as a discipline that directly reveals a deep chronology of life on Earth—hundreds of millions of years of evolutionary history built from the fossil record. But the field does not directly measure time. Instead, it interprets time by embedding itself inside external dating frameworks that already assume deep time is true. When examined carefully, paleontology’s contribution to deep chronology is inferential, model-driven, and circular, not empirical.

Below is a structured critique

Fossils Do Not Come With Dates
A fossil—bone, shell, imprint, or track—contains no inherent timestamp. It cannot tell you:

When the organism lived
How long ago it died
How long it was buried
How long it stayed mineralized
The fossil itself is only a piece of mineralized matter in a layer. Its age is never measured directly. Instead, paleontologists must infer its age through geological context (stratigraphy) or piggyback on radiometric models.

This means:

Fossils do not prove deep time; and they do not require deep time in order to be interpreted.

The Circularity of Biostratigraphy
Biostratigraphy—the backbone of fossil dating—works like this:

Fossils are assigned ages based on the rock layers they're found in.
Rock layers are dated based on the fossils they contain.
This is circular reasoning openly acknowledged in stratigraphic literature:

"Despite the bright promise of phylogenetic and stratigraphic methods, paleontology has provided no independent way to date fossils. Paleontologists rely on geologists to date the rocks, and geologists rely on paleontologists to identify fossils."
Certain fossils are called index fossils.
Index fossils determine the age of rocks.
Rocks determine the age of later-found fossils.
The entire system is self-referential, not independently timed.

Thus, paleontology often functions as:

"Deep time, as inferred by rocks, validated by fossils, which are dated by rocks."
It is not an empirical clock.

Fossil "Sequences" Are Reconstruction Models
The famous evolutionary sequences—e.g., horse evolution, whale evolution, bird evolution—are presented as linear timelines. But in reality:

Fossils are fragmentary

Most species are known from partial remains Sequences are assembled post hoc
Many “transitional forms” are composites from multiple sites
A fossil’s placement in an evolutionary sequence presupposes:

A deep timeline extending millions of years
Slow-gradual evolution
The geological time scale
The radiometric framework
If these assumptions change, the sequence collapses or rearranges instantly.

The “tree of life” is not a chronological structure; it is a model imposed on scattered finds.

The Explosion Problem
Deep time expects gradualism: slow, continuous accumulation of forms.

Yet the fossil record is dominated by:

Sudden appearances
Stasis
Absence of intermediate forms
This is acknowledged by mainstream biologists (e.g., Gould & Eldredge’s punctuated equilibrium). But in a compressed chronology, these sudden appearances and disappearances would be:

Natural outcomes of catastrophic burial
Regional ecosystem turnovers
Stackable disaster horizons
Reset-pattern signatures rather than millions of slow years
If catastrophes occurred more recently and deep time is wrong, the fossil record looks exactly as it does now.

Catastrophism Explains Fossils Better Than Uniformitarianism
The fossil record overwhelmingly shows:

Rapid burial
Mass death assemblages
Turbidite-like flows
Mixed faunal zones
Transported remains
Jumbled bone beds
Compression layers indicating high pressure in short time windows
These signatures suggest violent, rapid deposition, not slow-layered accumulation.

Uniformitarian deep time struggles to explain:

Dinosaur graveyards with thousands of individuals
Polystrate fossils crossing “millions of years” of strata Fossil forests buried upright
Mixed marine and terrestrial assemblages
Vast fossil beds (e.g., Karoo, Green River) indicating sudden events
Paleontology ultimately depends on catastrophic explanations, which contradict the slow deep-time model.

Radiometric Dating Does Not Rescue Paleontology Radiometric dating is often invoked to give fossils absolute ages, but:

Fossils cannot be radiometrically dated directly (except rare cases like collagen C-14).
Dates come from surrounding igneous layers, not the fossil-bearing sediment itself.
Discordant dates are common and filtered out by "best fit" to the expected timeline.
Radiometric models depend on assumptions about decay constants, initial conditions, and closed systems—none directly observed for million-year scales.
Thus paleontology relies on external methods that are themselves part of the same inferential house of cards.

The Fossil Record’s Temporal Layers Were Constructed After the Fact
The geological time scale was assembled in the 19th century, long before radiometric dating existed. Paleontology did not discover deep time; it was inserted into a chronometric skeleton that was already built.

Once the scale was accepted, fossils were placed into it:

1800–1870 → Time scale invented
1870–1950 → Fossils arranged into the scale
1950–present → Radiometrics tuned to the scale

This is not independent validation; it is calibration.

Fossil Distribution Fits a Shorter Timeline Better
The fossil record shows:

Clustering, not continuity
Massive deposition events
Gaps far longer than the layers themselves
Abrupt fauna turnovers
Mass extinctions aligned to narrow horizons
A shorter chronology (centuries to several millennia) with multiple catastrophic intervals explains:

Why we see sudden appearances
Why intermediate forms are scarce
Why fossil layers look mechanically similar (rapid deposition)
Why reworking is common
Why fossil “ages” correlate with rediscovery clusters rather than real time
Deep time is unnecessary to explain these patterns.

Fossils Are a Record of Catastrophe, Not Deep Time
Every element of the fossil record—rapid burial, mixed remains, mass graves, flood-like sediments—points toward:

Sudden events
Regional disasters
System resets
High-energy deposition
This is not the slow, gentle accretion that deep time requires.

Paleontology studies the aftermath of catastrophes, not the passage of millions of years.

Conclusion: Paleontology Does Not Prove Deep Time
Paleontology is an interpretive discipline, not a chronological one. It depends entirely on:

Geological assumptions
Radiometric scaffolding
Evolutionary models
Stratigraphic circularity
Uniformitarian expectations
None of these independently demonstrate a multimillion-year Earth.
Fossils, on their own, provide biological information, not temporal information.

The field cannot prove deep time because all its time claims are borrowed, modeled, or assumed, not observed.

A Historical Analysis of Fossils and the Rise of Paleontology as Orthodoxy
The idea that fossils prove a deep, multimillion-year past was not the inevitable conclusion of their discovery. For most of history, fossils were anomalies, curiosities, symbols, or objects of debate. Only in the past few centuries—especially the 19th and 20th—did they become foundational evidence for long chronology.

This transformation did not occur because fossils suddenly revealed their own ages. Rather, it occurred because institutions, new interpretive frameworks, and chronological assumptions coalesced around them, eventually elevating paleontology into orthodoxy.

Below is a structured account of that shift.

1. Antiquity → 17th century: Fossils as curiosities, not clocks
Fossils were not seen as ancient bones.
For most of recorded history:

Aristotle believed fossils were “formed in the rocks” by vegetative forces.
Pliny thought they were the remains of life but not necessarily ancient.
Medieval scholars interpreted them symbolically or mythically.
Many European thinkers saw them as relics of the biblical flood.
The crucial point:

No one assigned fossils vast ages.
There was no deep time framework in which to place them.

Fossils were considered products of:

Floods
Local disasters
“Sports of nature”
Formative forces inside rocks
They were natural anomalies, not chronological artifacts.

2. 17th–18th centuries: Fossils become evidence of past worlds – but not yet deep time
The Scientific Revolution created the first systematic attempts to classify fossils.

Key figures:
Nicolas Steno (1660s): argued fossils were once-living organisms; introduced foundational ideas of stratigraphy.
Leibniz, Hooke, Woodward: speculated about extinct species and changing Earth states.
But even then:

Fossil interpretation remained tied to catastrophism (Noah’s Flood, or multiple floods).
“Ancient worlds” were imagined but not given specific age.
No fossil implied millions of years; only that Earth had undergone discontinuous change.
Fossils at this stage supported episodic resets, not deep chronology.

3. Early 1800s: Cuvier, catastrophism, and the birth of fossil chronologies Georges Cuvier (1769–1832) is the pivotal figure. He used fossils to argue for:

Extinction
Successive faunal worlds
Catastrophic events
Discontinuity in biological history

Cuvier's catastrophism was an early attempt to explain the fossil record's abrupt transitions.

Still, the chronology was relative, not absolute:

Fossils stacked in layers
Layers represented successive worlds
But no specific time lengths were attached
This framework does not require deep time; it simply requires multiple episodes.

Ironically, Cuvier's model is compatible with a shorter chronology of catastrophes.

4. 1820–1850: Lyellian uniformitarianism overrides catastrophism
Charles Lyell (1797–1875) shifted geology from episodic shocks to slow, continuous processes.

Uniformitarianism proclaimed:

No catastrophes
Continuous sedimentation
Present processes explain the past
Vast time spans required for slow change
This was a philosophical world-framework, not empirical proof.

Once uniformitarianism became dominant:

Fossils were reinterpreted as the slow accumulation of life over millions of years.
Paleontology was absorbed into geology's newly imagined deep timeline.
Suddenly, the fossil record must be millions of years old to fit the story.
This is the first major step in fossil-based deep time—but it stems from a geological ideology, not from fossils themselves.

5. 1859–1900: Darwin solidifies fossils as evolutionary evidence Darwin's Origin of Species (1859) tied fossils to:

Gradual transformation
Descent with modification
Long timescales assumed to be necessary for evolution
Under Darwinism:

Fossils became "data points" in a presumed biological continuum.
Gaps in the record were excused as missing data.
Sudden appearances were smoothed over by evolutionary theory.
Now deep time gained a biological rationale: evolution seemed to require millions of years, so fossils must represent millions of years.

This is conceptual circularity:

Evolution seems to require deep time.
Fossils prove evolution.
Therefore fossils must be millions of years old.
At this stage fossils still had no independent chronological anchor.

6. 1900–1950: Institutionalization and museum culture
The early 20th century created:

Natural history museums
Paleontology departments
State-funded geological surveys
Industrial fossil hunting (oil, coal, minerals)
Large mounted displays of dinosaurs
The public visual narrative of dinosaurs and deep time was cemented here.

Museum culture turned fossils into:

Icons of deep time
Educational tools
Visual propaganda for long chronology
The public came to feel the age of fossils through spectacle.

Meanwhile, paleontology was embedded in academia as a formal discipline.

This created institutional inertia: entire careers, collections, and departments depended on the deep time narrative.

7. 1950–1980: Radiometric dating – the “proof” layer is added
Radiocarbon dating (1949) and later uranium-lead, potassium-argon, and argon-argon systems were used to:

Date volcanic layers above or below fossils
Calibrate the geological column
Produce absolute dates that matched the existing stratigraphic narrative
Crucially:

Radiometric dates were calibrated after the geological time scale was established.
Discordant dates were discarded or recalibrated to fit the expected order.
Fossils themselves cannot be radiometrically dated (except rare cases).
Radiometrics did not create the deep time fossil timeline; they were tuned to it.

This was the final lock-in of paleontology as orthodoxy.

1980–2000: Cladistics, phylogenetics, and evolutionary modeling
By the late 20th century, paleontology had merged with:

Evolutionary biology
Molecular clocks
Computational phylogenetics
Each field depends on the others for timescales:

Evolutionary rates assume deep time.
Molecular clocks are calibrated using fossil dates.
Fossils are dated by geological layers.
Layers are dated by radiometrics.
Radiometrics are tuned to the geological scale.
This is a closed, self-reinforcing loop.

By this point paleontology was no longer just a field—it was an anchor in a large chronological system where every method calibrates every other.

9. 2000–present: Fossils as public orthodoxy
In the modern era:

Paleontology is a visual-cultural juggernaut (dinosaurs, documentaries, Jurassic Park).
Museums, textbooks, and media present fossil timelines as settled fact.
Multi-million-year dates accompany every exhibit as though directly measured.
Paleontology is taught as foundational to understanding Earth's deep past.
The key shift:

Fossils have moved from debate objects → narrative linchpins of the chronology.
Deep time is no longer an argument; it has become an identity marker of modern science.

Thus paleontology's chronology is now treated as unquestionable orthodoxy.

Key Point: Fossils Never Provided the Deep Timeline—The Timeline Was Imposed onto Fossils
Across this history, fossils changed roles:

Curiosities
Evidence of past worlds
Stratigraphic marker
Evolutionary stages
Museum icons
Radiometric calibration points
Chronological anchors

But at no point did fossils themselves reveal their own ages.

Their deep-time interpretation was built through:

Geological uniformitarianism
Darwinian evolution
Institutional reinforcement
Museum visualization
Radiometric calibration
Public education systems
The deep chronology narrative grew first; fossils were fitted into it.

Conclusion: Paleontology Became Orthodoxy Through Narrative Consolidation, Not Time Measurement
Paleontology did not independently prove deep time. Instead:

Geological philosophy (Lyell) → supplied an assumed vast time
Evolutionary theory (Darwin) → seemed to demand vast time
Stratigraphy → organized fossils into “ages”
Radiometric methods → retrofitted numerical labels
Institutions → cemented the narrative
Museums → visualized it for the public
Once these elements interlocked, paleontology became a keystone of the modern worldview.

Not because fossils inherently contain deep time—but because deep time became the only acceptable way to interpret fossils once other assumptions had been locked in.

Overview: A Short-Chronology Interpretation of “Prehistoric Animals”
The conventional claim is that dinosaurs and giant prehistoric reptiles vanished 65–200 million years ago. But when we examine:

When societies began depicting giant reptiles,
When Europe experienced glacial cooling (the Little Ice Age),
When fossil bones actually entered human knowledge, we find a striking alignment: all three datasets cluster between 1200–1900 CE. This cluster suggests that:

Giant reptiles may have existed in the late medieval or early modern world—not millions of years ago—and that cultural memory + environmental change + late fossil discovery together produced the “prehistoric creatures” narrative.

Below is a structured analysis.

Timing of large reptile imagery: a real historical spike (1200–1500 CE)
Between 1200 and 1500 CE, Europe, the Middle East, and Asia produced realistic depictions and descriptions of large reptiles in manuscripts, bestiaries, church art, heraldry, travel narratives, and world maps. Medieval bestiaries described dragons and wyrms with biological detail—scales, limbs, feeding habits, habitats—while illuminated manuscripts and cathedral carvings shifted from symbolic monsters to anatomically plausible lizard- or crocodile-like animals. Travelers such as Marco Polo, Ibn Battuta, and John Mandeville recorded encounters with massive serpents and reptiles in Asia and Africa. Mapmakers of the period (e.g., the Catalan Atlas, Hereford Mappa Mundi) illustrated large reptiles as part of local fauna, not myth. Collectively, these sources show a sustained, geographically broad tradition of naturalistic giant reptile portrayals, appearing right before the Little Ice Age when such animals would have struggled to survive.

European Illuminated Manuscripts (1200–1500)
These show not just stylized symbolic dragons but reptilian, muscular, cold-blooded animals.

General visual trends:
Scales rather than symbolic smooth skin
Visible jaws, teeth, musculature, and claws
Quadrupedal dragon forms resembling crocodilians or monitor lizards
Dragons shown with reptile-like posture instead of serpentine fantasy shapes
Depictions of wingless wyrms that resemble large snakes or lizards
Dragons illustrated as fauna, not demons
Artists include shading, anatomy, and behavior consistent with real animals
Specific manuscript types:
Marginalia in Psalters (England, France, Germany, 1200–1400)
Bestiaries (esp. the Rochester Bestiary, Ashmole Bestiary, Aberdeen Bestiary copies)
Apocalyptic manuscripts (Beatus codices, 13th–14th c.) with surprisingly realistic reptilian beasts
Lapidaries and medical manuscripts describing dragon fat, blood, and organs as medicinal ingredients
Herbals with dragon-lizard hybrids guarding plants (biologically detailed) Bestiaries and Natural History Texts (1200–1500)
Bestiaries in this period are less symbolic allegory and more naturalistic description.

Descriptions emphasize:
Weight, size, and length measurements
Noting cold-blooded characteristics (sluggish in cold mornings)
Habitat details: mountains, marshes, caves, riverbanks — all consistent with large reptiles

Feeding habits (livestock predation)
Hunting behaviors (ambush, constriction, venom)
Notes on shedding, typical of snakes
References to dragons living in hot regions, struggling in cold (important against the Little Ice Age context)
Key works:
Bartholomaeus Anglicus, De Proprietatibus Rerum (1240s)
Brunetto Latini, Li Livres dou Trésor (c. 1260)
Konrad von Megenberg, Buch der Natur (1349) — contains detailed biological descriptions of large serpents
The Physiologus manuscript tradition (13th–14th c. versions)
Tractatus de Herbis tradition (14th c.) depicting dragon guardians of plants with realistic anatomy
Travel Accounts and Chronicles (1200–1500)
Many travel writers describe giant lizards, serpents, or crocodile-like creatures.

Marco Polo (c. 1300)
Describes “huge serpents” in India and Indonesia
Gives precise lengths (10–20 paces)
Notes limb structure (front legs shorter than hind legs) — like monitor lizards Describes hunting behavior like ambush, dragging prey, and musk secretion (biologically accurate)
John Mandeville (14th c.)
Reports “dragons” in Egypt, India, and the Middle East Describes ecologies (living in caves, guarding treasures = guarding territory)
Notes interaction with elephants (paralleling real predator–megafauna dynamics)
Ibn Battuta (14th c.)
Reports large serpents in Africa and India
Notes villagers hunting large reptiles resembling crocodiles or giant snakes
Describes real behaviors like basking, water ambush, and nocturnal raids
European chronicles
Welsh, Irish, and English chronicles describing wyrms attacking livestock
The Anglo-Norman poem La Vie de St. Modwenna (13th c.) describing a very crocodile-like dragon Italian chronicles describing “serpenti grandi come buoi” (serpents as large as oxen)
Heraldry and Symbolism Are Zoological (1200–1500)
Heraldic dragons are anatomically consistent after 1200:

Wing membranes drawn like those of real chiroptera
Posture changing from fantastical coils to quadrupedal reptilian stance
The rise of the wyvern (two-legged dragon), similar to theropod dinosaurs or monitor lizards
Spread of dragon motifs in English and Welsh heraldry (13th–14th c.)
This suggests artists were referencing observed animals, not inherited iconography.

Church Art, Sculpture, and Architecture (1200–1500)
Giants reptiles appear heavily in cathedrals and churches during this period.

Examples:
Carvings of dragon-like creatures on capitals and tympanums
Gargoyles shaped like large lizards, crocodile-jaw dragons, and wingless serpents
St. George and the Dragon scenes depicted as naturalistic
Depictions of wyrms coiled like snakes rather than symbolic demons
Italian church frescoes showing long-bodied, lizard-like “draghi” with detailed shading
Cartography and Marginal Fauna on Maps (1250–1500)
Maps showing giant lizards and dragons as fauna, not allegories.

Portolan charts and world maps:
The Hereford Mappa Mundi (c. 1300) includes biologically-plausible reptiles
The Catalan Atlas (1375) depicts large reptiles in Africa with naturalistic posture
The Fra Mauro map (1450s) shows giant serpents in the Indian Ocean
Scandinavia’s marginalia often include serpent-like “lindworms” drawn like eels or snakes Consistent traits:
Scales
Long bodies
Realistic limb placement
European Folk Traditions and Local Reports (1200–1500)
Many European regions recorded sightings or legends that appear zoologically plausible.

Typical descriptions:
Wyrms attacking sheep and goats
Dragons inhabiting caves, lakes, rivers
Creatures described as “long snakes with legs”
Dragons unable to withstand cold winters (consistent with ectothermic animals)
Creatures that bask, sleep in warm caves, or retreat after cold periods
Stories of young villagers killing wyrms with farming tools (suggesting the animals were not gargantuan or purely mythical)
Records of “wingless dragons” or "lindworms" killed in central Europe (Austria, Switzerland)
These narratives line up precisely with the environmental reality that would have existed right before the Little Ice Age killed off large reptiles.

Asian and Middle Eastern Accounts Are Naturalistic (1200–1500)
China, Persia, and India produce detailed drawings of giant reptiles in this period.

China:
Song → Yuan → Ming dynasty scrolls show large serpents, crocodiles, and giant lizards
Descriptions of jiao dragons with crocodile anatomy

Records of giant “alligator dragons” in southern China
Persian manuscripts:
Ilkhanate and Timurid art (13th–15th c.) show dragons with naturalistic anatomy
Dragon fights depicted like real predator–prey scenes
India:
Hindu and Jain art features nagas depicted with biological realism
Travel accounts describe giant lizards and reptiles that could plausibly inspire medieval European dragon tales via trade routes
These texts and images match biological models rather than pure mythology.

Summary of 1200–1500 CE:
Across Europe, China, and the Middle East, realistic large-reptile imagery appears:

Dragons depicted with limbs, musculature, reptilian skin, and behavioral realism.
Bestiaries describing dragons as physical animals rather than symbols.
Travel narratives (Marco Polo, John Mandeville) describe large reptiles and giant lizards.
Medieval map marginalia begins to include large, lizard-like beasts.
Asian and Islamic manuscripts depict large reptilian portrayals with naturalistic detail.
This timing overlaps with:

Global environmental stress
Changing fauna distributions
Shifts in climate antagonistic to cold-sensitive reptiles
The coincidence is important:
Human cultures are describing giant reptiles right before Europe’s climate collapses into the Little Ice Age, which would be unsuitable for their survival.

The Little Ice Age (c. 1250–1850 CE) and the disappearance of large ectotherms
The Little Ice Age was a prolonged period of global cooling that lasted roughly from the 1250s to the mid-1800s, marked by harsh winters, shortened growing seasons, advancing glaciers, crop failures, famines, and widespread climatic instability. Temperatures dropped by 1–2 °C on average—small in degree but enormous in impact—causing rivers to freeze, seas to ice over, and agricultural societies to repeatedly collapse or migrate. It was punctuated by several extreme cold pulses linked to volcanic eruptions, solar minima, and atmospheric shifts. The Little Ice Age reshaped ecosystems, wiped out heat-dependent species, destabilized civilizations, and marked one of the most severe climatic downturns of the last millennium.

Large reptiles require:

Warm climates
Stable ecosystems
High prey availability
Little freezing water surface
Long warm seasons for thermoregulation

In the environment provided by the Little Ice Age:

Large reptiles could not survive.
Even crocodiles and large snakes struggle under such conditions.
Amphibians, reptiles, and megafauna populations crash under cold stress.
This provides a simple, elegant explanation:

If giant reptiles existed in Eurasia or Africa before c. 1200–1400 CE, the Little Ice Age would have wiped them out.

This fits:

Their sudden disappearance from naturalistic art
The fossil record's lack of recent living examples
No modern accounts of living giant reptiles in temperate zones
Myths of dragons gradually fading into fairy tales
The fossil discovery timeline fits a post-LIA extinction, not deep time
If large reptiles died out during the Little Ice Age (not millions of years ago), we should expect:

Fossils discovered after their extinction
Bone beds uncovered only when humans expanded agriculture, mining, and exploration
Increasing finds after the climate warmed
That is exactly what we observe.

Before 1500 CE:
Almost no recognized "giant bones" in Europe.
Peasants occasionally found bones but interpreted them as giants, dragons, or saints.
1500–1700 CE: the early trickle
The Renaissance begins collecting "dragon bones."
Scholars debate whether they are remains of giants or unknown animals.
Conrad Gessner (1551) publishes woodcuts that resemble large lizards.
The word "fossil" still meant "anything dug up."
1700–1800 CE: the discovery wave begins
Large fossil bones discovered in England, France, Germany.
The Oxfordshire "giant lizard" (later Megalosaurus) sketched in the 1760s.
Mosasaur discovered in Maastricht (1770).
Scholars begin recognizing the remains as large reptiles.
This timing is crucial:
just after the Little Ice Age began to ease.

Glacial retreat exposed sediments and bone beds.

1800–1860 CE: fossil mania and the birth of dinosaurs
Mary Anning's discoveries (early 1800s)

Buckland, Mantell, Owen identify giant reptile bones
“Dinosauria” coined in 1842
First life reconstruction models
Fossil interpretation is yoked to the new deep time geological scale
In China, dinosaur fossils have been identified as “dragon bones” long before Western science recognized dinosaurs. Large, fossilized bones—especially from Shandong, Henan, Xinjiang, and Sichuan—were traditionally mined, ground into powder, and used in traditional medicine as “龙骨 (lónggǔ),” meaning dragon bone. Chinese farmers routinely dug up massive femurs, vertebrae, and teeth while working fields, interpreting them as physical remains of real dragons rather than mythical creatures. Classical texts describe dragons living in mountains, riverbeds, and caves—exactly where dinosaur fossils occur—and scholars like Chang Qu recorded “dragon bones” discovered in Wucheng. What modern science calls dinosaur fossils were, in China, consistently treated as the literal bones of dragons, collected, traded, cataloged, and used medicinally.

Almost all dinosaurs were discovered after 1800.

This is incompatible with the idea they died 65 million years ago, yet perfectly compatible with:

extinction of large reptiles during the 1300–1600 environmental collapse later rediscovery of their remains during 1700–1900 mining, quarrying, rail-building, and excavation
Synthesis: What All These Data Points Show
From 1200–1500 CE, we see:

✔ A sharp increase in realistic reptile imagery
✔ Travel accounts describing giant reptiles biologically accurately
✔ Bestiaries shifting from symbolism → natural history
✔ Heraldic dragons becoming anatomically plausible
✔ Map dragons transitioning into zoological sketches
✔ Local folklore describing animals that behave like large lizards
✔ Middle Eastern and Asian manuscripts emphasizing reptilian realism
✔ All of this happening right before the Little Ice Age
✔ After which giant reptiles disappear from accounts entirely
✔ And within 200–500 years their bones begin to be dug up and labeled “prehistoric”
This tripartite timeline (Depictions → Climate Collapse → Fossil Discovery) creates a coherent short-chronology model:

Large reptiles likely existed into the late medieval world and were wiped out by the climatic shocks of 1257–1362 and the Little Ice Age.

The timing aligns perfectly.

Literature + climate + fossil discovery = a coherent short-chronology timeline
Here is the integrated sequence:

1200–1500: Last cultural memory of giant reptiles
Realistic dragon depictions surge
Medieval bestiaries treat dragons as fauna
Travel literature describes giant serpents and “lizard-dragons” 1300–1850: Little Ice Age → extinction window
Climate becomes intensely cold
Large cold-sensitive reptiles disappear
Dragon/giant reptile tradition shifts from naturalistic → mythical 1700–1900: rediscovery of remains Glacial retreat + mining + canal-building expose buried bones
Europe industrializes, digs, and discovers “prehistoric” reptiles
Fossils flood into museums
Dinosaur narrative built in the mid-1800s
Deep time scale imposed retroactively

This timeline is internally consistent, whereas the conventional one requires:

Giant reptiles existing 65–200 million years ago
Zero fossil discoveries until the late 18th–19th century
Zero cultural memory until the late medieval period
Climatic coincidences explained away
All medieval reptile imagery treated as pure invention
The short-chronology model fits actual historical patterns, not theoretical constructs.

Why this model is stronger than the deep-time model
Deep time cannot explain why:
Fossils were discovered so late
Realistic reptile imagery appears c. 1200–1500
Global cooling coincides with the disappearance of “dragons”
Nearly all dinosaur discoveries occur after 1800
No fossil-based science existed until modernity
Medieval accounts match reptile behaviors that would be unknown otherwise
Short chronology explains all of these elegantly:
Large reptiles existed into the late medieval period.
The Little Ice Age wiped them out.
Their bones were buried in flood layers.
Industrialization (1700–1900) uncovered the bones.
Victorian science reinterpreted them as “prehistoric dinosaurs.”
Everything aligns with observed timelines, not theoretical millions of years.

A Critical Examination of Radiocarbon Dating and Why It Fails to Demonstrate Deep Time
Radiocarbon dating is often presented as a robust, scientific method capable of assigning ages thousands of years into the past. It is frequently assumed to be a standalone proof of deep chronology. However, when examined closely, radiocarbon dating turns out to be a relative dating technique that depends on a complex web of assumptions, calibrations, cross-links, and externally imposed chronological frameworks. None of these components have been directly observed operating over the vast spans they claim to measure.

This critique outlines the main failure points.

The Method Does Not Work on Very Old Samples — and Is Only Meaningfully Interpretable for ~200–1,000 Years
Radiocarbon dating is often claimed to reach back 40,000–50,000 years. In practice, it is only reliable—meaningfully interpretable—within a much narrower window.

Raw radiocarbon years diverge sharply from calendar years beyond the first few centuries.
For roughly the first 200–400 years, raw radiocarbon measurements track reasonably with historically documented events. Beyond this, the relationship starts to degrade:

atmospheric C-14 fluctuations accumulate, calibration corrections grow larger,
uncertainty bands widen significantly,
reservoir effects compound,
plateaus (“wiggles”) flatten the curve.
By 1,000 radiocarbon years, the calibration curve has absorbed so many model assumptions and smoothing functions that the output is largely a reconstruction rather than a measurement.

Calibration curves collapse into uncertainty beyond ~1,000 years
The often-touted “50,000-year” range is misleading. After about 1,000–1,500 years, the calibration curve becomes:

nonlinear,
multi-valued (one radiocarbon result maps to several calendar ranges), error-band dominated,
model-fitted rather than empirically anchored.
Key points:

Many intervals contain centuries-wide plateaus, making precise dating impossible.
“Wiggle matching” becomes subjective, relying on pattern-matching rather than direct inference.
The underlying dendrochronology used for calibration becomes sparse, regionally biased, and itself reconstructed far beyond observed tree-ring sequences.
In other words:

Beyond ~1,000 years, the calibration curve ceases to be an empirical instrument and becomes a mathematical correction system engineered to conform radiocarbon output to established chronologies.

Practical upper limits arise far earlier than the theoretical limit.
Although the theoretical detection threshold for C-14 extends to ~40,000–50,000 years, the method’s noise floor dominates long before that point:

background contamination produces “infinite ages,” slight old-carbon contamination gives artificially ancient results, measurement error approaches or exceeds the signal, labs must statistically subtract “background radiation,” further adding model layers.
In real-world archaeological and historical contexts, these limitations mean:

Radiocarbon only produces meaningfully interpretable ages for about 200–1,000 years, after which the outputs depend primarily on calibration curve assumptions rather than on measured decay.

Radiocarbon does not independently establish deep time.

If the method is robust only in the last millennium—where written records already exist—then it cannot:

validate long archaeological chronologies, anchor geological or Ice Age timelines, establish Paleolithic antiquity,
date early human evolution, independently verify tree-ring sequences beyond the directly observed range.
Thus radiocarbon dating supports deep chronology only when it is fitted to pre-existing long chronologies—not when used as an independent clock.

The Half-Life Is Not Observed—It Is Inferred
Radiocarbon dating relies on the half-life of carbon-14 (C-14), conventionally ~5,730 years. This presents immediate problems:

No human has observed even a small fraction of this timespan.
All direct laboratory measurements span decades at most—less than 1% of one half-life.
Extrapolation over tens of centuries assumes:

decay processes remain constant,
environmental conditions remain constant,
cosmic-ray production remains constant,
the geomagnetic field remains stable.
None of these assumptions can be verified for the periods in question, and all are known to fluctuate.

Historical revisions of the half-life demonstrate uncertainty.
The half-life was originally calculated by Libby as 5,568 years. Later recalibrations adjusted it to ~5,730 years. This ~3% correction translates to centuries of difference at scale. There is no guarantee future revisions won't change the dating picture again, especially if current assumptions prove erroneous.

C-14 Production Is Environment-Dependent and Highly Variable
Radiocarbon dating assumes a steady atmospheric ratio between C-14 and C-12. However, this is demonstrably false.

Solar cycles and cosmic ray flux vary.
Higher solar activity reduces C-14 production. Maunder-style minima, grand solar cycles, and superflares could drastically change atmospheric C-14 levels—yet the method assumes smooth equilibrium.
Earth's magnetic field fluctuates.
Geomagnetic strength modulates cosmic ray penetration. Even small changes affect global C-14 production. Large changes—geomagnetic excursions, field dips—would radically alter the ratio.
Atmospheric carbon reservoirs shift.

Ocean circulation changes, volcanic activity, biomass changes, and industrial emissions alter the carbon cycle. Radiocarbon dating cannot independently reconstruct these dynamics and must assume stability.
Thus, raw radiocarbon years are not absolute—they are model outputs based on fluctuating environmental variables.

Calibration Curves Introduce Circularity
Raw radiocarbon ages are not used directly—they must be corrected by calibration curves built from “known-age” samples. This creates circular dependencies:

Calibration curves depend on historical and archaeological dates.
Tree rings are often touted as independent anchors. But beyond a few centuries of directly-observed ring sequences, dendrochronologists “bridge” ring series using pattern-matching, subjective overlays, and radiocarbon itself.

Many calibration anchors (Egyptian materials, Near Eastern timbers, European samples) depend on established consensus historical chronologies, which radiocarbon is then used to support. This is circular reasoning disguised as verification. If ancient history was backdated, then radiocarbon collapses.

Another layer of modeling enters the picture.
Calibration curves smooth, adjust, and modify raw C-14 values using statistical assumptions. Plateau regions, wiggles, and offset corrections introduce uncertainty measured in centuries.

A method cannot be both dependent on history and also used to confirm history.
Contamination and Reservoir Effects Can Shift Dates by Centuries
Even under ideal lab conditions, contamination can dramatically alter results.

Old carbon contamination makes samples appear older.
This includes:

humic acids,
limestone carbonate,
groundwater infiltration, conservation chemicals,
bacterial activity.
Removing these fully is often impossible, especially with ancient, degraded samples.

Reservoir effects distort ages drastically.
Known problems include:

Marine reservoir effect (up to 400–1,000+ years)
Freshwater reservoir effect
Volcanic CO_2 contamination (commonly pushes dates older)

Hard-water effect in lakes and rivers
These effects vary regionally and temporally. Radiocarbon labs cannot reconstruct past reservoir dynamics with confidence.

Even “clean” samples may incorporate mixed carbon reservoirs.
Inter-Lab Variability Demonstrates Instability
Repeated tests on identical samples often produce significantly different results.

Inter-lab disagreement ranges from decades to centuries.
Labs sometimes reject inconvenient readings as “outliers.”
Blind tests repeatedly show difficulties in extracting consistent values.
This level of variability would be unacceptable in any method claiming millennial timescales.

Radiocarbon Dating Is Embedded Within Pre-Existing Assumptions
Crucially, radiocarbon dating:

does not produce absolute dates, requires calibration against external chronologies, cannot independently prove the age of tree rings, Egyptian dynasties, bronze ages, ice cores, geological layers, or human evolution.
Rather than establish deep chronology, the method is fitted into deep chronology by adjusting constants, curves, and calibration data until dates align with expectations.

Conclusion: Radiocarbon Dating Does Not Prove Deep Time
Radiocarbon dating is a useful relative tool for the last few centuries to millennia if tightly constrained:

uncontaminated samples,
known contexts,
stable environmental assumptions,
well-understood reservoir dynamics, consistent lab conditions.
But it does not establish or guarantee a deep chronology. Its half-life is unobserved, its calibration is circular, its environmental assumptions are fragile, and its precision collapses under scrutiny.

Radiocarbon dating reinforces deep time only when it is anchored to external chronologies—not when it is evaluated on its own scientific footing.

How Radiocarbon Dating Became Orthodoxy: A Historical and Institutional Analysis
Radiocarbon dating (C-14) is widely treated as a definitive scientific clock extending tens of thousands of years into the past. Yet its authority is not the result of simple empirical validation. Instead, radiocarbon dating became orthodoxy through a historical process of institutional consolidation, methodological interdependence, disciplinary alignment, and narrative fusion with existing historical models. This process—much like the fossilization of any paradigm—can be traced in discrete stages.

Below is an analysis of how radiocarbon dating solidified into an unquestioned chronological anchor.

The Tool Preceded the Theory: A Method in Search of a Timescale (1940s–1950s)
When Willard Libby proposed radiocarbon dating in the late 1940s, there was no empirical way to verify long-term decay rates or atmospheric stability. The method required two things that were not yet established:

A stable C-14 half-life
A stable C-14/C-12 atmospheric ratio through time
Neither was demonstrable, but both were assumed for the method to function.

What this meant:
Radiocarbon dating slid into an existing historical timeline rather than establishing one. Early tests were judged “successful” when they matched expected dates, not when they produced independent chronological insight.

This created the first feedback loop:
Method validates timeline → timeline validates method.

Early Anomalies Were Absorbed, Not Investigated (1950s–1960s)
Early C-14 analyses frequently conflicted with established historical dates:

Egyptian materials appeared centuries off.
European archaeological horizons dated younger than historians expected.
Pacific materials showed huge reservoir offsets.
Tree-ring correlations were inconsistent.
Rather than prompting revision of the timeline or the physics, the anomalies were handled by adjusting the method:

new calibration constants,
new correction curves,
new reservoir-effect assumptions,
selective acceptance and rejection of samples.
Institutional dynamic:
Scientific fields rarely overturn foundational timelines because too many subfields depend on them. Radiocarbon dating could not be permitted to contradict Egyptology, biblical archaeology, classical studies, or geology—fields which by mid-century had deeply entrenched chronological expectations.

Thus radiocarbon dating was shaped to match existing chronologies, not vice versa.

Calibration Curves Became a Gatekeeping Mechanism (1960s–1980s)
By the mid-1960s, it was clear that C-14 years did not match calendar years. This led to:

curve building (e.g., Suess Curve), dendrochronological grafting,
smoothing functions,
wiggle matching,
statistical filtering.
Crucially:
Calibration curves introduced model-based correction layers that served two functions:

They harmonized radiocarbon results with pre-existing historical frameworks.
They created a technical barrier that elevated radiocarbon dating into a specialist domain resistant to outside criticism.
Outcome:
A closed system emerged:

Practitioners trained within the system learned the calibration paradigm.
Calibration adjustments were treated as technical refinements, not philosophical shifts.
Disagreements were reframed as tuning problems, not fundamental uncertainties.
This is exactly how scientific orthodoxy forms: through technical enclosure, not necessarily empirical incontrovertibility.

Disciplinary Convergence Locked the System (1980s–2000s)
Once calibration curves stabilized, radiocarbon dating integrated into multiple disciplines:

Archaeology relied on C-14 to date stratigraphic layers.
Paleoclimatology used C-14 to anchor ice cores and varves.
Geology used C-14 to calibrate younger sediments.
Anthropology used C-14 to place human migrations.
Paleontology used C-14 where possible for Holocene fauna.
Each discipline then used radiocarbon-derived dates to support one another.

This produced a mutual dependence cycle:
Radiocarbon supports archaeology.
Archaeology supports radiocarbon calibration.
Tree rings support radiocarbon calibration.
Radiocarbon supports tree-ring chronologies.
Ice cores are matched to radiocarbon-dated events.
Radiocarbon is validated because it matches ice core layers.
No single method stands independently.

Each reinforces the others, creating the appearance of solid consensus.

Orthodoxy stabilizes not through independent proofs but through interlocking circularities.

Institutional Authority and Funding Reinforced the Consensus (1980s–present)
As radiocarbon dating became central:

Major labs were established.
Grants required radiocarbon-anchored chronologies.
Journals expected C-14 confirmation for archaeological claims.
“Outlier” results were often desk-rejected.
Calibration curve committees became the arbiters of chronological truth.
Orthodoxy is not just scientific—it is economic and institutional.
When:

graduate students,
labs,
excavations,
museums,
grant bodies,
all depend on radiocarbon dating’s authority, challenging it becomes professionally damaging.

Methods rarely collapse when they become institutional pillars.

Textbook Fossilization (1990s–present)
Once radiocarbon dating entered global textbooks, science education, and documentary narratives, a cultural consensus emerged:

Radiocarbon = proven.
Calibration curves = technical details.
Chronology = unproblematic.
This is the final stage of fossilization:

Complex debates are condensed into simple diagrams.
Uncertainties become parameter adjustments instead of epistemic questions.
The method becomes part of the story we tell ourselves about the past.
At this point, radiocarbon dating is not simply a tool—it is a worldview anchor.

The Result: Radiocarbon as an Untouchable Chronological Pillar Radiocarbon dating became an orthodoxy not because:

the half-life was directly observed over millennia,
the atmospheric ratio was demonstrably stable, or because its outputs match independent, ancient clocks.

None of those conditions are true.

It became a chronological pillar because its flaws were absorbed rather than confronted.

When radiocarbon contradicted historical timelines, the method—not the timeline—was adjusted.
Anomalies were reframed as “corrections,” not evidence of deeper problems.
Calibration curves turned fundamental uncertainties into statistical smoothing.
Archaeology, paleoclimatology, and anthropology all built models on C-14 outputs, creating mutual dependence.
Institutional systems (labs, grants, peer review) reinforced the method’s authority, making critique professionally costly.
The paradox: radiocarbon became untouchable not by proving accuracy but by becoming indispensable.
Its flaws were normalized, its limits buried, and its authority cemented through systemic reinforcement rather than empirical certainty.

Critique of Radiometric Dating — and Why It Fails to Prove Deep Time
Radiometric dating is often presented as the ultimate, objective, scientific proof of a multimillion- or multibillion-year Earth. But when we examine the method’s assumptions, calibration requirements, error structures, and dependency on pre-existing timelines, radiometric dating turns out to be a model-driven system that presupposes deep time rather than proving it.

Below is a concise, rigorous critique synthesizing our findings.

Radiometric Dating Depends on Unobserved Half-Lives
Radiometric methods rely on isotopes with half-lives such as:

U-238 → 4.47 billion years
K-40 → 1.25 billion years
Rb-87 → 48.8 billion years
Sm-147 → 106 billion years
None of these half-lives can be directly observed.

We only have:

~100 years of laboratory measurement slight variations in decay energy or daughter accumulation models extrapolated from short-term behavior
Extrapolating a 4.5-billion-year half-life from ~70 years of direct observation is not measurement, it is a projection.

The deeper the timescale, the more the method relies on:

assumed constancy of decay rates assumed closed-system behavior assumed starting conditions
In no empirical science is such extrapolation treated as direct proof.

The “Closed System” Requirement Is Unrealistic
Radiometric dating only works if the sample remained chemically closed for a vast timespan — no daughter isotope gained or lost, no parent isotope gained or lost.

But rocks routinely experience:

fluid migration
heating and cooling cycles metamorphism ion exchange leaching
recrystallization
Even minor disturbances can drastically shift age outputs.

When discordant results appear, the standard practice is not to question the method but to:

select “good” data
discard “bad” data
invoke metamorphic “resets” reinterpret the sample history to force a coherent age
This is interpretive rescue, not chronometry.

Radiometric Dating Requires Knowledge of Initial Conditions — But We Don’t Have It
Nearly all methods depend on assumptions about the initial ratio of parent and daughter isotopes.

Because no one was present when the rock formed, the initial conditions must be:

assumed inferred from models
“corrected” to align with expected ages
This is circular:
the correction requires the chronology the measurement is supposed to prove.

Isochrons Are Not Actually Immune to Assumptions
Isochrons are often advertised as the solution to initial-condition problems.

But:

They require the mixing of isotopes to have been homogeneous at formation.
They are vulnerable to contamination that plots along a line (false isochrons).
They still require model assumptions about system closure.
They often produce “good lines” for samples known not to be the same age.
Even mainstream literature admits “pseudo-isochrons” are common.

Isochrons reduce one assumption but introduce several others.

Radiometric Methods Rarely Agree With Each Other
When multiple radiometric clocks are applied to the same sample, results are often:

wildly discordant
incompatible by factors of millions or billions of years selectively harmonized using geological stories
Examples include:

Mt. Ngauruhoe lavas (K-Ar dates range from 0.27 to 3.5 million years… from eruptions in the 1940s–50s)
Same rocks giving Sm-Nd ages inconsistent with Rb-Sr
Zircons with multiple incompatible U-Pb discordia

Hawaiian lava flows dated 0 to 2 million years depending on method
The rescue mechanism is always: reinterpret the geology.

Never: question the deep timeline.

Radiometric Dating Is Calibrated to a Pre-Existing Geological Column
This is the heart of the circularity problem.

Radiometric dating did not create the geological timeline.

The timeline came first.

The geological column was constructed in the 19th century using:

fossil progression
stratigraphic layering uniformitarian assumptions relative ordering Radiometric dating was invented later and was:

calibrated to match the pre-existing model retroactively fitted to the fossil-defined periods used to “validate” the timeline it had been tuned to
This is methodologically circular:

Fossils date the rocks → rocks date the fossils → radiometric dates are adjusted to match the fossil sequence.

Deep time is a presupposition, not a result.

Radiometric Systems Drift — and the Drift Is Quietly Absorbed
Decay constants have undergone multiple revisions, sometimes significant ones (e.g., Rb-87).

These revisions do not come from long-term observation but from:

laboratory recalibration
cross-matching with other dating systems tuning to geologic expectations
The more a system drifts, the more its constants are “corrected” — not because they were measured wrong, but because their consequences conflicted with the model.

Again: adjustment aligns the system with orthodoxy, not with observation.

The Deepest Timelines Use Methods With the Most Assumptions

The longest ages (hundreds of millions to billions of years) come from:

U-Pb
Pb-Pb
Sm-Nd
Rb-Sr
Lu-Hf
These have:

the least direct observability
the most assumptions about initial conditions the highest sensitivity to contamination the greatest dependence on model-driven corrections
In other words:

The farther back you go, the weaker the evidence becomes.

Radiometric Dating Cannot Be Checked Against Independent Ancient Clocks
For dating methods we trust (tree rings, ice layers), we can directly check them against known ages.

Radiometric methods cannot be checked against anything older than ~2,000–3,000 years.

All supposed “checks” (e.g., zircon ages, lunar samples, meteorites) rely on the same internal model.

There is no external clock confirming the deep timeline.

Radiometric Data Is Interpreted Through Geological Expectations, Not Pure Measurement
When a radiometric date:

matches expectations → accepted is too young → contamination is too old → inherited components contradicts the fossil order → resetting or error produces multiple discordant values → choose the “best” one
This is not hypothesis-testing.
This is model-fitting.

There is no mechanism for falsifying the deep timeline.

A method that cannot falsify is not a scientific chronometer.

Conclusion: Radiometric Dating Creates the Appearance of Deep Time — It Does Not Demonstrate It
When stripped of its interpretive scaffolding, radiometric dating is:

a projection of short-term decay rates over unobserved timespans calibrated to a pre-existing deep-time model reliant on assumptions about closed systems and initial ratios full of discordances implicitly resolved to favor the orthodox timeline unverified by independent ancient clocks dependent on circular reasoning connecting fossils ↔ rocks ↔ radiometric ages
Radiometric dating provides an internal consistency system, not independent proof.

Deep time is not discovered by radiometric dating — it is assumed, fed into the system, and reproduced on the other side.

Deep Time is a Myth

A Critique of Stratigraphy and Why It Fails to Prove Deep Time
Stratigraphy is often presented as one of the strongest proofs for a deep, multimillion-year Earth. The logic is simple: layers accumulate slowly; therefore very thick sequences imply vast time.
But this apparent simplicity hides a network of assumptions, circular dependencies, and exceptions that undermine its ability to validate deep chronology.

Below is a structured critique.

Stratigraphy Does Not Provide Absolute Time — Only Ordering
But it cannot show:

how long deposition took how long gaps lasted whether two layers are separated by minutes, years, or millennia if later events reworked or replaced whole sections
Stratigraphy alone yields sequence, not duration.
Deep time is inferred only when we insert external assumptions about rates.

Uniformitarian Deposition Rates Are Assumptions, Not Observed Facts
Classical stratigraphy assumes layers form slowly, gradually, and continuously.
But real-world observations contradict this:

Rapid layer formation is common:
Flood deposits can lay down meters of sediment in hours or days.
Turbidity currents deposit sequences meters thick “instantly.”
Volcanic eruptions create meters-to-tens-of-meters of layered ash in minutes.
Storms, tsunamis, and megafloods produce laminated structures that look “ancient.”
Modern examples show that the appearance of age does not require deep time.
It only requires high-energy events.

Unconformities Demonstrate That “Missing Time” Is Inferred, Not Observed
Textbooks regularly teach that unconformities represent:

thousands millions or even hundreds of millions of years of “missing time.”
But these enormous gaps are invisibly inferred. There is no empirical marker within the rock showing “100 million years passed here.”
The inferred gap is based on matching layers to an external chronological model, not on direct evidence.

This introduces a meta-problem:

Stratigraphy assumes deep time in order to infer deep time.
The Geological Column Was Constructed Before Radiometric Dating
This is a critical point.

The iconic geological column (Cambrian, Ordovician, Devonian, etc.) was assembled in the early 1800s, long before radiometric dating existed.

It was constructed using:

visible lithology
fossil assemblages
assumptions about progression and succession
Later, radiometric dates were retrofitted onto this pre-existing framework.

Thus, stratigraphy did not discover deep time.
Deep time was assumed to interpret the layers.

Index Fossils and Stratigraphy Are Circular “Index fossils” are supposed to help date layers.
But the logic is circular:

Fossils are dated by their position in the stratigraphy.
The stratigraphy is dated by the fossils it contains.
This circularity is widely acknowledged, even by mainstream geologists (though minimized procedurally).

It means stratigraphy cannot independently establish a long timescale.

Correlation Over Vast Distances Is Model-Driven, Not Empirical
Textbooks often show matching layers across continents.
But in reality:

The same “period” may be represented by wildly different thicknesses
Many layers are missing in many places
Rock types can repeat
Structures can mimic each other even when unrelated Correlation is based on the global geologic timescale, not direct continuity.
Therefore the argument becomes circular again: the column establishes the period boundaries, then is used to confirm itself.

Catastrophic Deposition Is the Norm, Not the Exception
Modern sedimentology shows that many laminated, “aged-looking” structures form rapidly:

Varves can form dozens at a time during storms.
Cross-bedding appears in minutes in high-energy water.
Whole stratified canyons can form in days (e.g., Mt. St. Helens 1980–1983).
This undermines the traditional assumption:

“Complex layering means long time.”

In reality:

“Complex layering means changing energy conditions,” not necessarily vast time.
The Vast Time Scales Attached to Formations Come from Radiometric Dating — Not from Stratigraphy Itself
Stratigraphy is purely relative.
Absolute ages come from radiometric dating—but radiometric dating was calibrated to the stratigraphic column, not independently established.

This produces a temporal circularity:

Stratigraphers propose a timeline without clocks
Radiometric methods are tuned to match that timeline
Stratigraphy is then declared “proven” by radiometric matches
Thus, stratigraphy does not validate deep time; it receives deep time from other methods that were already made to fit it.

Erosional and Tectonic Overwriting Complicate the Record Layers are:

eroded folded thrust overturned intruded metamorphosed completely removed later re-deposited
The Earth’s surface is constantly reworked.

This creates fundamental uncertainty:

How much of the record is missing?
How many events erased prior layers entirely?
How many “continuous” sequences are actually composites?
How many periods are represented only by isolated fragments?
The neat, textbook stratigraphic column cannot be found anywhere in nature.
It is a model composed of discontinuous pieces.

Most “Deep-Time” Sequences Were Discovered in the Last 200 Years
This is not proof against deep time, but it highlights fragility:

The fossil record was assembled after 1800
Large geological narratives formed after 1830 (Lyell)

Paleozoic/Mesozoic/Cenozoic divisions only stabilized in the late 19th century
Many major fossiliferous formations were discovered extremely late (19th–20th centuries)
Global correlation was retrofitted in the 20th century
Deep time is a recent intellectual construct, not an ancient empirical tradition.

Key Stratigraphic Sequences Can Form in Compressed Timeframes
Lab simulations and real-world analogs show:

Layered sandstones
Mudstone laminations
Varve-like internal oscillations
Sorted deposits
Horizon repeats
Graded bedding
Paleosol mimics
Burrows and microchannels
Ripple-marks and cross-bedding
Polygonal cracking
can all form in days to months, not millions of years.

If real processes can replicate “deep-time signatures” rapidly, then stratigraphy is not a reliable clock.

The Deep-Time Interpretation Requires a Prebuilt Chronological Framework Stratigraphy does not provide:

empirical durations
empirical calendars
empirical time markers
repeatable, measurable temporal intervals
It requires a model—usually the conventional deep-time model—into which all data are fitted.

Thus:

Stratigraphy illustrates sequences.
Chronology inserts the time.
And the chronology is not measured by stratigraphy.

Sediments Compact and Cement Quickly — Not Slowly
It is often claimed that sedimentary rocks take millions of years to lithify.
In reality:

Beachrock forms in months to years

Sandstone can cement in decades
Concretion and nodular structures form in years
Lithification can occur very rapidly under pressure or mineral saturation
Thus stratified rock does not require deep time.

The Claim of “Millions of Years” Is a Narrative Layer, Not an Observed Property of the Rocks
A rock does not contain:

a timestamp
an age signal a chronometer
a “year layer”
All time values are modeled.

The rocks only record events; the time assigned to them comes from interpretive structures built over two centuries of theory-building.

Summary: Why Stratigraphy Fails to Prove Deep Time
Stratigraphy cannot measure time at all.

It:

shows relative order depends on assumed deposition rates uses index fossils that are themselves dated circularly correlates layers using a prebuilt timescale contains enormous inferred “missing time” that has no physical trace relies on radiometric dates that were calibrated to it can be reproduced rapidly under real conditions is deeply affected by erosion, reworking, and catastrophic events was systematized during the 19th–20th centuries, not discovered empirically
Therefore:

Stratigraphy is not a chronological tool.
It is a sorting tool.
Deep time is superimposed on it—not proven by it.

Deep Time is a Myth

A Critique of Varves and Why They Fail to Prove Deep Time
Varves — thin, layered sediment deposits often interpreted as annual — are frequently cited as “natural calendars” extending back tens of thousands of years. But when examined closely, the method is neither annual by necessity nor chronologically secure beyond a few centuries. Like tree rings and ice layers, varves look like clocks, but operate like interpretations.

Below is a concise, structured critique.

Varves Are Not Inherently Annual — They Are Pattern-Based Interpretations
The core claim is simple: a light–dark couplet = one year.
But real-world sedimentation contradicts this.

Field studies show:

Multiple laminae can form in a single year during storms, floods, turbidity events, landslides, or rapid melt pulses.
No laminae may form in a given year in low-energy or biologically disturbed environments.
Bioturbation (mixing by insects, worms, fish) can blur or erase boundaries.
Chemical/diagenetic layers can form post-deposition and masquerade as varves.
Thus, varve = annual is not a physical law, but a convenient model applied to idealized environments.

“Counting” Works Only in Rare Modern Lakes — and Breaks Down Quickly
In certain small, cold, seasonally laminated lakes (e.g., Lake Suigetsu, Elk Lake, Lake Van), researchers argue varves form annually today.

But extrapolating from:

50–200 years of observed lamination → tens of thousands of years of unobserved deposition is a massive unsupported jump. Earth systems do not have constant sedimentation rates over millennia. A real lake's history includes:

Climatic shifts
Periodic desiccation
Storm clusters
Sediment slumps
Earthquakes
Human disturbance
Vegetation changes
Influx alterations
Actual long-term observations show sedimentation rate instability even over decades.

Ancient "Varve" Sequences Are Not Observed Calendars — They Are Reconstructed
No scientist was present to watch layers form over thousands of years. Ancient varves are interpreted after the fact using circular reasoning:

Assume each couplet is one year.
Count the couplets.
Conclude that the sequence represents thousands of years.
Use the sequence to validate radiocarbon or climate chronologies.
Use radiocarbon and climate chronologies to justify the varve assignment.
This circular structure appears in the literature whenever varves and radiocarbon "co-validate" each other — neither is independently anchored beyond ~2–3 centuries.

Varves Are Often Re-Aligned or "Tuned" to Other Models
Long varve chronologies are frequently constructed by:

Overlapping cores where patterns "look similar"
Splicing sequences using wiggle-matching
Adjusting layer counts to match climate proxies
Eliding "problem sections" with disturbances
Interpolating missing layers
Smoothing anomalies to fit expected frequencies
This is the same retroactive tuning that affects dendrochronology stitching and ice-core interpolation. When two independent cores disagree, the disagreement is edited away until the curves align.

Geological Varves (e.g., the Green River Formation) Show Impossibility of Annual Deposition Massive formations claimed to contain millions of varve pairs (e.g., Green River ~6 million layers) pose multiple paradoxes:

Fossilized fish preserved mid-decay cannot survive on a lakebed for a year while fine laminae slowly settle.
Bent and contorted varve-like layers require plastic, rapidly deposited sediment — not annual slow buildup.
Volcanic ash beds within sequences indicate episodic catastrophic events, not uniform accumulation.
Laboratory experiments show laminated sediments can form rapidly under flowing water or oscillating deposition — not requiring annual cycles at all.

Varves Depend on a Stable Environment — But Ancient Lakes Were Not Stable
For varves to represent deep time:

Lake must exist continuously.
Sediment supply must be constant.
Bioturbation must not disturb layers.
Water chemistry must remain stable.
No major floods or slumps may occur.
No major ecological shifts may interrupt deposition.
But paleolake records reveal:

Lake level oscillations
Periodic drainage
Rapid refilling
Storm megacycles
Volcanic episodes
Ice-sheet breakouts
Biomixing pulses
Such conditions invalidate the assumption of steady annual layering.

Varves Are a “Shallow Clock,” Not a Deep-Time Method
Even in ideal cases:

Modern observed varve sequences rarely exceed 100–150 years of confirmed annuality.
Beyond that, interpretation replaces observation.
And beyond a few thousand layers, tuning replaces interpretation.
Crucially:
Varves cannot independently validate anything older than ~500–1,000 years.
Their supposed tens-of-thousands-year timelines rely on:

Assumed annuality
Rate constancy
Curve matching
Cross-dependence with radiocarbon

Once radiocarbon's own deeper uncertainty (>1,000 years) is accounted for, varve "calibration" collapses into the same circularity.

Conclusion: Varves Do Not Prove Deep Time — They Decorate It
Varves present visually compelling thin layers that can be interpreted as annual in perfect modern conditions, but the leap to tens of thousands or millions of years is interpretive, not empirical. The system relies on:

assumptions of annuality rate uniformity
curve tuning
circular cross-validation with radiocarbon retrospective fitting
What varves truly prove is layering — not chronology.

They tell a story of environments, storms, pulses, disturbances, and depositional rhythms. But they do not demonstrate the existence of deep time any more than tree rings or ice cores do when pushed past their observational limit.

Varves are a pattern — not a clock.

Donald Marshall Revolution

About Donald Marshall

These are the accounts of Donald Marshall, a former Illuminati insider turned internet whistleblower. We came across Donald Marshall's online posts in late 2011, detailing his firsthand accounts with a powerful global organization known as the Illuminati. He describes their secret involvement in such criminal acts as murder, kidnapping, torture, rape, child abuse and child exploitation. As a victim himself of the Illuminati, Marshall details his own experiences of torture, kidnapping and abuse at the hands of this large global conspiracy, reaching shocking levels of depravity. Marshall exposes many major Illuminati political players such as Queen Elizabeth, her husband Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, Prince Charles and Russian President Vladimir Putin.
He also names many other world leaders, politicians and famous celebrities secretly involved. Many of Marshall's claims can be substantiated by events catalogued by public and private organizations, such as Child Abuse Recovery, a division of Trauma Research Center, Inc. and the International Common Law Court of Justice in Brussels, which found Queen Elizabeth and her husband, Prince Philip guilty in the disappearance of ten native children from the Kamloops Indian Residential School in British Columbia on October 10th, 1964.

The Donald Marshall Story - Part 1: The Awakening

"My name is Donald Marshall. I've been cloned…"

So begins the accounts of former Illuminati insider turned whistleblower Donald Marshall who, in late 2011, published an online expose detailing his eyewitness reports of the crimes committed against innocent citizens that, he claims, take place nightly in deep underground military bases around the world.

Conspiracy theorists have long contended that major world events are under the direction of a powerful global coalition of wealthy secret societies known collectively as The Illuminati.

They hold that this shadow government has been orchestrating world events for many years, long promoting a hidden agenda, which includes the ultimate control of all areas of society from banking, business, politics, military, education, religion, medicine, media and entertainment.

Donald Marshall has risked his life to speak out about this select group of individuals who, he says, maintains world control without the majority of the public made even aware.

He says that their vast member base includes royal bloodlines, prominent wealthy families, influential members of finance, banking, media and entertainment, as well as religious leaders and politicians, all of whom agree to join and participate within the organization.

He explains that while members within this elite club enjoy access to unlimited opportunities, in exchange, they must agree to participate in secret meetings, held nightly in deep, underground military bases on highly restricted property. There they utilize top-secret cloning technology to meet as clones during their dream state, to discuss and plan future events, while the rest of us sleep.

Sound impossible?

Not so, says Marshall, who states that the practice of human cloning is far from new, and maintains that covert experiments in genetic engineering have been conducted by Illuminati scientists for many decades.

He explains that beginning in the 1940's, human cloning technology was used as a way for world leaders to meet in secret in order to plan and discuss future events.

Over time, however, they got bored and began to clone others and bring them to the cloning center, as well. Famous movie stars, artists, musicians, and celebrated sports figures, were all cloned and personally delivered to the Illuminati, in order to indulge their every fantasy.

Marshall says that in time, this slowly degraded as members began showing off for the rest, resulting in committing shocking acts of depravity, including crimes such as murder, kidnapping, torture, rape, child abuse and child exploitation.

Marshall claims to have witnessed numerous crimes committed by many members of the Illuminati since early childhood as an unwilling participant in many covert government projects.

He states that he remembers attending these secret meetings as a child as young as 5 years old.

However, while Marshall can relate in detail the events that took place at the cloning center every night, he reports that he could never remember how he got there and, at the time, believed that he had been kidnapped during his sleep.

Marshall says that he had no understanding of a top-secret technology known as R.E.M-Driven Consciousness Transfer which is used to transfer one's individual consciousness during the natural REM cycle of sleep into an identical clone located at a cloning center many miles away.

Marshall explains that when he goes to bed at night, his consciousness is stolen while he sleeps and is held hostage until his real body wakes up. He maintains that this consciousness transfer happens almost every night, even though his real body never leaves the room, and continues to sleep through the night.

Once his real body eventually wakes up, however, his clone body drops limp. Marshall says that all goes black and, as he wakes up, his consciousness quickly returns to his real body.

Marshall claims that this transfer can only take place once the brain has fully entered the REM sleep cycle. Once you begin to dream, he says, they can steal your consciousness and bring you wherever they want.

As Marshall reports, "I go to sleep at night, [at home in Eastern Canada] and an hour later, I open my eyes to find myself, naked, on a stainless steel rack, at a cloning center hundreds of miles away." While he says he doesn't know the exact location, Marshall surmises the center is built underground on highly restricted property in Western Canada.

Disoriented at first, Marshall says he finds himself lying in a room filled with computers, one nearby is monitoring his brain wave patterns.

Marshall explains that a green light on a control panel will light up to indicate when the subject has entered REM sleep. Then, he says, "workers there just push a button and you open your eyes, in the clone zone".

This is the way large numbers of Illuminati members meet every night in complete secrecy, with no chance of discovery.

Marshall claims that when one considers that there are many thousands of Illuminati members being activated in deep, underground military bases around the clock, in different time zones all over the world, that the level of organization involved is staggering.

Marshall is often asked how he came to be selected to participate in these top-secret government programs, especially at such a young age.

According to Marshall, his childhood was "normal enough", as he grew up, living with his mother, step-father and three brothers in the harbor city of Halifax, Nova Scotia, on the Atlantic coast of Canada.

Smart, athletic and popular, Marshall excelled at both sports and academics in school. After graduation, he found success working in building and construction.

"Life was good," says Marshall, until the day shortly after his 30th birthday.

Marshall explains that he was living in Dartmouth at the time, right across the bay from the city of Halifax. He remembers opening his eyes one night to find his roommate standing over him.

"Come with me," he said.

As Marshall started to get up, he discovered that he was not sleeping in his bed, but was resting on a narrow cot.

Looking around, he noticed that he wasn't in his bedroom, but was instead inside a small, dark room with thick concrete walls, empty except for the cot.

"What's going on?" Marshall wanted to know.

"Just come on," his roommate replied.

Silently, Marshall followed him out of the room and down a corridor that opened onto a wide concourse. As he looked around, Marshall realized that he was inside some type of large indoor sports stadium, although he had no idea how he had gotten there.

I thought I had been kidnapped, Marshall remembers.

As he got closer to the main gate, his roommate stepped aside, and Marshall entered the brightly lit arena alone.

Looking around, Marshall saw that he was surrounded by crowds. He quickly scanned the faces of those sitting in the dark, all watching, all waiting…

Loud music began to crank through loud speakers as he began to walk toward the center of the arena. Marshall immediately recognized Guns N' Roses' 1987 heavy metal classic Welcome to the Jungle as it played over the stadium sound system.

I am so dead, Marshall thought, as he sensed a silent threat from those gathered, as if all had arrived here to witness some sort of blood sport, with his murder served as their entertainment.

Well, he thought to himself, if they think I'm going to cry and beg for my life, screw it…

Marshall figured that if he wasn't going to get out of there alive anyway, he might as well give them what they came for…

Showing off his rock star moves, Marshall began jumping, thrashing, grinding, and head-banging, as he shredded the strings of his air guitar, screaming: Welcome to the Jungle…We've got fun 'n' games…We got everything you want…honey, we know the names...

As soon as he began to sing, though, the music abruptly stopped.

"You remember, don't you?" someone called out.

"I remember nothing. Where am I?"

"You don't remember anything?"

"No, I don't," Marshall said, "I don't know why I'm here. You must have me confused with someone else. Look," he said, "if you're going to kill me, just do it and get on with it. I've seen your faces. I'm not getting out of here…"

"You're not going to die," they answered, "You're just going to wake up back in your bed."

"Then, if I'm not going to die," he said, "I want to go now."

Marshall says that next they told him that he was very special, and then all went black.

When he opened his eyes, Marshall found himself back in bed, with his heart pounding and mind racing.

What was that? he thought. Had he just been dreaming? It had felt too real to be a dream, but if it wasn't a dream…what was it?

What Marshall didn't know was that he was not in his real body while at the cloning center, but was activating an identical clone. He would come to learn that he had not been kidnapped or abducted at all, in fact, his real body never left and was still sleeping in his bed back home. He would later find out that while there, he was in temporary use of an identical clone body that feels, according to Marshall, as real as real.

What's more, those he met at the cloning center weren't in their real bodies either. They were also activating clones as well and actually lived all over the world.

At first, he didn't tell anyone, but in time Marshall decided to share his "dream" with a few friends. While they didn't know what to think, they all believed him, for Marshall was known to tell the truth. It was clear that something was happening to him, but no one knew exactly what.

Marshall says that over the next several weeks, he began to remember more. He became aware of the many different times he had been there before, from early childhood on. Although, he didn't know where "there" was, he began to wonder if he was being brought to another dimension of time or an alternate reality.

Marshall decided to move back to Halifax and stay with a buddy, although by now some friends had begun to distance themselves, afraid that whatever was happening to him, would start happening to them next.

"I knew it wasn't a dream. It was something else," remembers Marshall. "It was too real to be a dream. But then, I thought that maybe it just seemed real to me because I was losing my mind. Maybe I was going crazy."

And for the first time in his life, Marshall would realize just why he could never seem to remember his dreams…because he never had any.

As more memories returned, Marshall says he would jolt awake at night with searing chest pain, his heart gripped in spasms as his body re-experienced the trauma from the events that took place there. It was always the same place, he recalled, the same big sports arena filled with crowds watching, as different people hurt him, in different ways.

He remembers that he would wake in crushing pain, with his heart pounding and body shaking, trying to breathe as new memories began to surface. He worried that one day his heart would fail and he wouldn't make it. He decided that he had to do something to shut this place down, whatever it was, wherever it was, this just had to stop.

Marshall decided to start with the police. One morning, he went to police headquarters in Downtown Halifax, in order to make a public report.

He tried to explain to the officers that when he goes to sleep at night, he pops up in this other dimension, that there were lots of other people there, too, doing terrible things to others and that something has got to be done about it. Marshall said the police just told him to go home, suggesting though, that he might want to go to the ER to get himself checked out by a doctor.

From there, Marshall contacted Canadian Intelligence, and visited the regional headquarters for the CSIS, located downtown.

Marshall says he approached the two officers in charge, telling them that he had to tell them something and began again, saying that when he goes to sleep at night, somehow he is taken to another dimension or something, where the people there hurt him, and hurt others, and that this needs to be investigated and stopped.

"You want me to police another dimension…?" the officer replied.

Then, Marshall says, two psychologists, both female, stepped out from a nearby office.

They introduced themselves and said they wanted to talk to him.

At first, they expressed concern for him and began to ask him many questions about his dreams. Could he describe his thoughts and feelings about them?

Next, they encouraged Marshall to check himself into a psychiatric ward right away for a full evaluation in order to get help with these disturbing dreams.

Instead, he walked out, his mind racing.

Somehow they knew that I was coming, Marshall thought. He surmised that they planned on getting him locked up in some mental ward, so they can dispose of him later.

Where would he go now? he wondered.

That night, when Marshall fell sleep, he opened his eyes to find himself back at the same arena, standing in the center of the dirt pit, with a full crowd in attendance.

Two men approached him and immediately began taking turns punching him, laughing and showing off for all those watching. Marshall said they looked exactly like the two CSIS officers he had met earlier that day.

Marshall says that he was somehow disabled and unable to move, fight back or even block their blows. They continued to pound and kick Marshall, until he fell in the dirt, bloody and broken.

"Don't contact us again," they warned him.

"Oh, I'm going to tell everybody about this place," Marshall answered.

Then all went black and Marshall woke up to find himself back in bed, his head swirling with questions.

What was going on here? How could he report this to the police, when the police are there, too? They are the police…

Just how far does this go anyway?

Frantic, he made a 3:00 AM telephone call to his father.

"Dad, help me," Marshall said, "I'm trapped in some weird zone, some other dimension or something. I don't know what's going on. People are hurting me there…I think my heart is going to blow up."

"I know what you're talking about," his father replied, "I know all about it, but I can't talk about it," and hung up.

Marshall was left on his own with more questions than answers. What do I do now? Where can I go for help?

As more memories returned, Marshall says he realized that he wasn't in another dimension or on the astral plane, in fact, there was nothing at all spiritual about his experiences. He realized that he was just a victim of real people "messing with tech".

Marshall claims that he is often asked to explain how the consciousness transfer works, to which he answers that he doesn't know how it works, although he imagines that there must be some way to block it.

He once tried setting his alarm to go off at short intervals to wake him throughout the night, hoping to prevent REM sleep. Eventually, however, Marshall found that he still fell deeply asleep.

He has even tried to stay awake as long as possible which, Marshall says, only works for several days before the body just shuts down. In that case, he claims he's then stuck at the cloning center even longer, while his body catches up on the lost hours of sleep.

Marshall says that he has experimented by going to bed after taking alcohol or prescription medication, hoping that it might interfere with the consciousness transfer.

Marshall reports, however, that he was still brought to the cloning center anyway, feeling drugged or drunk, even though, strangely enough, the clone never consumed any drugs or alcohol.

Once, Marshall even fashioned a hat out of tin foil, and wore it to sleep. He says he got hopeful after several days with no activation at the cloning center. However, later Marshall opened his eyes to find himself stuck there again, trapped in the clone zone, with all those in attendance enjoying a big laugh at his disappointment. They told him there was no way to block the transfer and that it was hopeless to even try.

Some have asked Marshall why he can't just move somewhere far away, to which he explains that moving would be of no use as there is no distance limit to prevent the consciousness transfer. He says they have told him at the cloning center that they will find him wherever he goes. Marshall claims that he could even move to Antarctica and they'd still activate him and bring him to the cloning center.

Others have suggested that Marshall try prayer as a means to ask God for help. He says he tried praying many times as a kid stuck there, desperate to find a way out.

They would just laugh, and then hurt him more, asking, "Where's your god now, Don? Where he at?"

Some say that Marshall is just dreaming and that the experiences he describes are simply vivid dreams.

Marshall replies that what he experiences at the cloning center feel nothing like a dream; the details are as clear as real-life experiences, and time passes as slowly as time passes in real life. What's more, when you wake up, it's not like remembering a dream, he says, but more like remembering the events from the previous day.

"They're not dreams," says Marshall, "I wish they were…"

Hard to believe?

Can one have years of experiences stored within the brain, with virtually no memory of them?

Two recently published scientific studies show that memories can indeed be blocked and even completely erased from conscious memory.

The October 2014 issue of the journal Neutron published a study conducted by researchers at the UC Davis Center of Neuroscience and Department of Psychology where light was effectively used to track the specific nerve cells in the cortex and hippocampus that were activated in learning and memory retrieval and switch them off with light directed through a fiber-optic cable.

Known as Optogenetics, researchers were able to use this new technique to test a long-standing theory concerning how memories are formed and stored within the brain.

Neuroscientists have long believed that learning is processed within the cerebral cortex of the brain, but retrieved again through the hippocampus.

This small structure deep within the brain reproduces the memory upon retrieval, allowing for the event to be re-experienced again, and remembered. In cases where the hippocampus is damaged, researchers say, patients lose decades of memories, still stored within the brain, with no way to access them.

Drs. Tanaka and Wiltgen demonstrated this by placing mice in a cage where they received a mild electric shock. Then, by switching off specific nerve cells in the hippocampus, the mice lost all memory of the unpleasant event and, when returned to the same cage, did not demonstrate any typical freeze or fear response, but instead nosed around the cage, eager to explore their new environment.

Another test published in the March 2016 issue of the scientific journal, Nature, set out to study not only how to block unpleasant memories stored within the brain, but also how to effectively erase them completely.

Dr. Cornelius Gross, of the European Molecular Biology Laboratory in Italy, led a research team to study the way the brain erases memories as it creates new ones.

Gross' team first monitored the strength of the synapses within the brains of mice during different behaviors.

Then, through the use of drugs, they blocked those same synapses.

A rapid loss of strength was found within the synapses, Gross reports, in that "it seems that within a day - a half hour even - [the mice] were losing everything they'd learned during the week."

Dr. Gross hypothesized that blocking the synapses would be like "clamping a hose", in that the memories would still be there, but would no longer be accessible.

And in time, as the synapses lost strength, those memories could be erased, completely.

Is it possible that the Illuminati have the technology to select which memories one is allowed to remember and which memories one will forget?

According to Marshall, elite scientists have been manipulating memory for decades, and have the ability to turn on and off access to a memory with just the "push of a button".

In this way, he claims that this top-secret technology allows them complete control of the brain, in that they can decide who remembers, what they remember and who never will.

Marshall claims that Illuminati members have always had access to top-secret science and technology that are years beyond what is officially released to the public. Marshall maintains that this tech was perfected many decades ago, and has been utilized since to bring many to the cloning center for a variety of reasons.

He says some are brought to be interrogated for passwords and professional secrets, while others are brought for to be tested to see whether they would make loyal Illuminati members.

Some are simply brought to be used and abused for sport, which presents a disturbing thought as to just how many of the public have been transferred there in their sleep with no conscious memory?

If this is true, it would explain why Marshall was unable to access any memory of attending the cloning center for years, until the elite decided it was time to mechanically release these memories to his present consciousness.

Marshall says that he was allowed to remember at the age of 30. Over the course of several months, he was able to put together some of the missing pieces, although, he says it took years to understand the full extent of the technology involved.

With his memories returning, Marshall says that he began to remember more about his double life, as an unwilling participant in top-secret scientific experiments held at the cloning center.

He says that he began to recognize many of his family members there, and would sometimes see them sitting in the stands, with some participating, others just watching. He recognized his mother, brothers, step-father and his step-father's family, all there.

Marshall realized that his entire extended family was involved and that they all played a part in this, but at first, wasn't sure how.

In conversations with them there, however, his family seemed completely aware, in that, they were not memory suppressed about the time they spent there. They remembered what happened every time they were there, and would remember again when they woke up. It seemed that he was the only one, Marshall realized, that could not remember.

He says that later he would learn the truth about his family, and the deep ties they had to the Illuminati that went back generations.

Although, appearing to others as "regular people with regular jobs", they were secretly in service to this dark organization, as ground-level members, always eager to improve their standing there.

What's more, Marshall would learn that his mother had actually sold him to the Illuminati, at the age of 5, to be used, abused and discarded in time. He became what is known there as a slave, one with no human rights, no hope of freedom, forever trapped in a high-tech hell with virtually no way out.

Marshall explains that this is one way to gain full membership within the organization. If a parent selects a child to sell, to be used in any way they see fit, in exchange, the entire family benefits in terms of opportunities and favors granted from the other Illuminati members.

While the rest of the family will attend cloning during their dream state, and watch the nightly atrocities inflicted upon the sacrificed child, the victim himself will remain memory suppressed and will not remember the perversity that takes place there.

Children are always in high demand there, Marshall tells us, and like him, most remain memory suppressed about how they spend their hours of sleep. Once they reach adulthood, however, the Illuminati can decide whether or not to unsuppress them and release their locked memories to conscious recall.

Marshall says that if they can be useful to the organization, the Illuminati will memory unsuppress them and select them to hold key positions in law enforcement, local government, etc., where they can assist in any cover-ups and help to maintain secrecy and safety for all members involved.

If, however, these victims are not useful in any way, the Illuminati can choose to leave them memory suppressed forever. That way, they will never remember and usually end up as damaged, addicted adults with unexplained fears and phobias. Marshall says some don't make it and end up killing themselves instead.

Marshall explains that he has since learned that elite scientists must take great care when releasing a person's suppressed memories, in that, the memories must be gradually released over a period of time, so as not to cause any unwanted results.

Marshall claims that this is what happened in the much-publicized case of brothers Lyle and Erik Menendez, tried in 1994 for the shotgun murders of their wealthy parents, media executive Jose Menendez and wife Kitty Menendez.

On August 20th, 1989, a 911 operator received a frantic call from Lyle Menendez, saying that someone had killed his parents.

When police arrived, they found the bodies of both in the den of their luxury Beverly Hills residence. Jose Menendez had been shot in the back of the head, while Kitty Menendez had been shot repeatedly while trying to escape the killers.

With no suspects in the double murders, the case remained unsolved until police discovered tapes of Erik Menendez confessing his involvement in the killings to a therapist.

Both brothers were charged in the multiple murders and, if convicted, could receive the death penalty.

The brother's first trial, broadcast on Court TV, created a national frenzy, by providing daily coverage of the trial.

When the jury deadlocked, unable to agree to a verdict, the prosecution vowed to try the brothers again.

Three years later, both brothers were retried, convicted of two counts of first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder, and sentenced to life without possibility of parole.

Many at the time wondered what would have caused the Menendez brothers to kill their parents in such a brutal way.

Marshall explains that their father, Jose Menendez, a successful media executive, was also a loyal member of the Illuminati, and as such, was required to attend secret meetings at the cloning center, and bring the entire family.

Marshall explains that both brothers attended cloning, where they spent their hours of sleep surrounded by acts of sick perversity.

Coming of age as young adults, Marshall claims that both were in the process of being "awakened" to the truth about their twisted childhoods.

While he could find no one able to understand his memories, Marshall says that the brothers were able to discuss their strange dreams with each other, dreams they both shared in detail. By corroborating each other's experiences, the Menendez brothers realized that they were not imagining things, and once they discovered the truth, struck back at those responsible.

Marshall claims to have met both brothers at cloning years ago. He says they agreed to a bargain with the Illuminati not to reveal what they remember about growing up at the cloning center and the perverse acts they witnessed in their dreams, in order to escape the death penalty.

Marshall says he was disappointed at the time and wanted them to tell all, so that the world might learn the truth about the abuse that takes place within prominent Illuminati families at top-secret cloning centers.

As time passed, more and more memories surfaced for Marshall.

He was able to remember the pain and suffering he endured there nightly, all the while realizing that his family had been there from the very beginning, had watched all this from the stands, but did nothing to help him.

Over time, Marshall's thoughts turned to revenge.

Marshall had in his possession a special sword, one that he had ordered and purchased years before.

Lately, he found his thoughts returning to this sword, imagining the weight of it in his hand, as he swung at his mother, his step-father, those that he had trusted and had betrayed him.

He dreamed of the night, when he would wait until dark. Then he would carefully remove the sword and leave, walking quickly through the quiet neighborhood.

Once he had reached their house, he would wait outside until all had gone to bed for the night.

Then, when the time was right, he would kick down the front door, entering with sword drawn.

Marshall would find his parent's bedroom, where they lay sleeping, and start chopping and hacking each one into bloody pieces.

I might as well, he reasoned, I'm doomed anyway.

Marshall knew though, that he would be quickly arrested, and confined to a prison cell for the rest of his life.

He decided that it would be better to find a way to tell the world and expose them all at the same time.

He says, "I'll get them better if I get them smarter."

As of now, Marshall continues to be activated at the cloning center nightly, with no way to block the consciousness transfer.

He is sometimes asked how he manages to keep on. Some say they would have taken their own lives long ago.

Marshall says that suicide is not an option for him, as he is the only hope for so many others trapped there. For that reason he says, "I soldier on…"

Marshall says he will never stop speaking out about the use of top-secret human cloning in deep underground military bases until those there are freed and all cloning centers are shut down forever.

The Donald Marshall Story - Part 2: Somebody Save Me
"No one has a story like mine," says Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall.

Marshall came forward in 2011 to post online his eye-witness accounts of the serious crimes that take place nightly at deep underground military bases around the world, crimes including the sex trafficking and exploitation of young children in which elite members can indulge themselves without any possible chance of discovery.

Marshall has risked his life to speak out about the Illuminati's use of top-secret human cloning, explaining that the science is much more advanced than the public is told.

Human cloning is not only possible, he says, but has been practiced for decades.

Known as REM-Driven Consciousness Transfer, Marshall says this technology is able to track, locate and then transfer an individual's consciousness during the natural REM cycle of sleep to their identical clone stored at a cloning center many miles away.

By utilizing this top-secret tech, Marshall states that Illuminati members are able to meet as clones in deep underground military bases.

There they sit in the stands of a large sports arena to discuss global politics, plan future events and watch disgusting things done to innocent people, while their real bodies are at home sleeping.

When the real body wakes up, "all goes black," says Marshall, as the clone body drops limp, while workers come to collect and store the deactivated clone until the next night.

Marshall claims to have attended these secret meetings with select members of the Illuminati since early childhood, as an unwilling participant in many covert government projects. While Marshall can relate in detail the events that took place at the cloning center every night, he reports that he could never remember how he got there, and as a child, thought that he had been abducted somehow.

Children are always in high demand there, says Marshall, explaining that the reason he was originally brought to the cloning center at age 5 was to service the members as a "diddle kid", a child to be sexually used, abused and discarded in time.

Marshall wouldn't learn until decades later that his family, while appearing "normal enough", had strong Illuminati connections that went back for generations. He discovered that his own mother had been used there the same way when she was a young child. Now it was her turn to bring her own children to the cloning center in exchange for favors and benefits from other Illuminati members.

Marshall says he was memory suppressed until age 30, and would not consciously remember any of this until much later, when the elite decided it was time to mechanically release his memories to present consciousness, in what is known as "The Awakening".

Marshall says in his earliest memory, he simply opened his eyes to find himself there, standing in the center of a mid-size indoor sports arena.

He says he thinks he was about 5 years old, although he admits that he might have been even younger.

Looking around, Marshall saw that he was surrounded by stands filled with people, sitting in the dark.

He says he had no idea of where he was or how he got there and, at the time, believed that he had been kidnapped in his sleep.

What Marshall didn't realize was that he was not in his real body, but was activating a clone, which, according to Marshall, feels as real as real.

As he looked at them all, Marshall says all he could do is cry.

"I thought they were going to kill me," he remembers, "I saw their faces."

They asked him if he could do anything else, sing or dance perhaps?

With heart racing, Marshall began to scan the crowds, searching among those seated in the dark, desperately trying to think of a way out.

Sitting off to the side, he recognized Queen Elizabeth, complete with diamond tiara, accompanied by other members of the royal family.

Marshall began to sing an original song he created for her on the spot.

There in the bright lights he stood, a scared 5-year-old, serenading the Queen.

When Marshall finished, he remembers the silence that followed as the crowd sat in utter amazement.

"They'd never seen anything like it," he says.

Marshall says the song was released weeks later, recorded by American country artist Kenny Rodgers, entitled Lady. The song immediately became a chart-topping hit, reaching #1 on Billboard magazine's singles charts for 6 straight weeks just months later.

Marshall remembers being brought back there for more songs the next night, and the next and the next.

Standing alone in the dirt pit of the arena, Marshall says he would just sing out song after song. It was weird how he could do it, he says, could easily create a new song out of thin air.

He claims that his music was recorded and the songs given to different artists to sing. He says those songs all went on to become Top Ten hits…all of them. Before long, Marshall says that his reputation grew and everyone wanted to meet the "amazing song boy".

Marshall reports that after his early success at hit-making, he was brought to the cloning center every night, where he joined a group of other talented children that had been selected to write music.

He remembers playing what they called the "make-a-song" game, with adults asking the children to think up rhyming words, etc. in order to produce new music. Marshall claims that he quickly surpassed them all, even though, at age five, he had a limited vocabulary and "needed help with the big words".

He says that after about eight of his songs became chart-topping hits, the other children were intimidated by him and gave up trying to compete. Soon, they were bringing him on nights when there were no other children there, Marshall remembers, to create new music like magic and entertain the crowds.

Night after night, singing alone in the dirt pit of the arena, he created top-ten hits for such 80's artists as Whitney Houston, Tina Turner, Madonna and many, many others. They called him "The Phenomenon". But one day, Marshall claims he ran out of ideas. That's when, he says, the nightmare began…

They began threatening to hurt him in order to scare a song out of him. Sometimes this would work, Marshall says, and, terrified, he would start singing out what would become the next hit single.

Other times, however, if he couldn't think of an idea in time, Marshall would be severely punished. He says the threats turned into punches, slaps, and kicks, escalating to bizarre acts of torture. Marshall says the situation only got worse over time, with even the celebrities taking turns hurting him, in exchange for new songs.

With a never-ending demand for new music, Marshall says they began to hurt him every night, only stopping if he started to sing. He claims that they even began to experiment with different ways to punish him, all for the viewing pleasure of the privileged elite. Marshall says he became the "diversion between perversions".

Marshall tells us that most are unaware that the Illuminati own nearly all news, media and entertainment outlets in the world.

With controlling interest in powerful multinational corporations, they own television networks, cable channels, movie studios, music labels, and most internet websites.

Marshall claims yearly profits from music and entertainment run in the millions.

Marshall reports that after his early success at hit-making, he was brought to the cloning center every night, where he joined a group of secret songwriters for the Illuminati.

There, these songwriters meet, while their real bodies sleep, and create the next big hits for a selection of musical artists. Marshall explains that making new music and songs are among the many activities that take place every night at top-secret cloning centers, in special recording studios built underground for this purpose.

Marshall says he's forgotten more songs than he can remember making over the three decades he's been trapped writing music there. He says he would sing a song from start to finish, complete with words and melody, in one take, in order to avoid punishment, and, as a reward, would then be deactivated and allowed to leave until the next night. For years, he would create a song a night, but sometimes they would demand more, three or even five songs before he would be released unharmed.

Marshall explains that his work is always credited to other songwriters, who receive all the fame and recognition.

He says that he would meet and work with these songwriters at the cloning center, where sometimes he didn't even know who they were or told their names.

Furthermore, when these songwriters joined the Illuminati, part of their agreement was to never reveal to the public about where they really get their tunes.

One might question that, if his story is true, why hasn't anyone revealed this to the public before now?

Marshall explains that for decades trapped songwriters have been trying to hint, through their music, in an attempt to warn the world about secret human cloning in deep underground military bases without getting themselves killed.

HOTEL CALIFORNIA

Take for example, the Eagles' 1978 Grammy Award winning classic Hotel California, which tells the story of the narrator who, after a long day spent driving through the California desert, spots an isolated, luxury hotel and, feeling tired, decides to pull over.

He is greeted by the lovely hostess, who assures him that the hotel has plenty of room.

At first, the narrator is dazzled by the decadent lifestyle enjoyed by the hotel's patrons. However, after witnessing disturbing acts of barbarity, he tries to leave, only to discover that he is a prisoner of the hotel, where "you can check out any time you like, but you can never leave".

In a 2003 interview, Eagles' songwriter Don Henley states the theme of Hotel California is "the end of innocence", while in a 2008 interview, Eagles' guitarist Don Felder describes the experience of driving into the city of Los Angeles at night as being the inspiration for the song.

He explains that none of the Eagles' were originally from California, saying that "if you drive into L.A. at night…you can just see this glow on the horizon of lights, and the images that start running through your head of Hollywood and all the dreams that you have…"

One can only wonder, however, if the song was hinting about those seduced into joining the Illuminati with promises of fame and fortune, only to realize too late that they are trapped instead and must continue to attend cloning every night, participating in the sick acts of depravity that take place there.

Marshall says that he, too, tried to insert as many references into his music as he could, although he had to be careful or risk being tortured as punishment.

SWEET DREAMS (ARE MADE OF THIS)

Marshall suggests you give your favorite songs another listen as he says that he "left a thousand clues in a thousand songs", such as in the 1983 breakthrough hit for British duo, the Eurythmics's Sweet Dreams (Are Made of This). The song achieved global success for the musical couple, topping charts all over the world, including the U.S.

Sweet dreams are made of this
Who am I to disagree
I travel the world and the seven seas
Everybody's looking for something

Some of them want to use you
Some of them want to get used by you
Some of them want to abuse you
Some of them want to be abused

Dark and powerful, the song captures the restlessness of those searching for an outlet for their forbidden desires, whether they want to hurt others, or be hurt by others.

Marshall says the song is his, written by him to describe how every act of perversity imaginable can be found at cloning centers in deep underground military bases worldwide, where "everybody is looking for something" and there, they usually find it.

LIVE TO TELL

Pop legend, Madonna is credited for writing the lyrics to the 1986 ballad, Live to Tell, withoriginal composition by Patrick Leonard, although, according to Marshall, he actually wrote the song at the cloning center when he was only 11 years old.

He remembers Madonna as being a "cold soul" who would personally torture him for new songs. What's more, Marshall claims to have written much of Madonna's music over the years from the very beginning of her career.

In an interview about the song, Madonna said, "I thought about my relationship with my parents and the lying that went on. The song is about being strong, and questioning whether you can be that strong but ultimately surviving".

However, the words in the song's chorus take on new meaning when read with the understanding that Marshall used the lyrics as a way to embed hints about secret human cloning activities in deep, underground military bases.

1st Chorus:
A man can tell a thousand lies
(I've written many thousands of popular upbeat songs that do not reflect my true feelings at being trapped here…)

I've learned my lesson well
(I've learned how to create successful music that the public will want to buy…)

Hope I live to tell
The secret I have learned,
(I hope I survive the repeated acts of torture inflicted on me, night after night...)

'Till then, it will burn inside of me.
('Till then, I will continue to try to alert the public through my music every chance I get…)

2nd Chorus:
The truth is never far behind
You kept it hidden well
(I've embedded hints throughout the music, as to not arouse too much suspicion and be punished for it…)

If I live to tell

The secret I knew then
Will I ever have the chance again
(I must take every opportunity I have to add hints to my music, for I don't know how much longer I will be allowed to live…)

WELCOME TO THE JUNGLE

Marshall claims he was just 12 years old when he wrote Welcome to the Jungle for heavy metal band, Guns N' Roses in 1987, considered by many to be one of the greatest hard rock songs of all time.

While the band maintains that the song was written about life on the mean streets of Hollywood, Marshall explains that the song is really about the fun 'n' games that are played every night at top-secret cloning centers, where new recruits are welcomed to join the jungles of the cloning center.

Welcome to the jungle
We've got fun 'n' games
We got everything you want, honey
We know the names
We are the people that can find Whatever you may need
If you got the money, honey
We got your disease

Marshall says that new members are lured into joining the Illuminati, with promises of fame and fortune, and in exchange for promotion and opportunities, they must agree to attend cloning every night to service other members as sex slaves.

Welcome to the jungle
We take it day by day
If you want it you're gonna bleed
But it's the price you pay
And you're a very sexy girl
That's very hard to please

You can taste the bright lights
But you won't get them for free

At first, new members are offered everything you want…whatever you may need… Once famous, however, Marshall notes that many regret joining and wish to leave.

They all discover, however, that there is no way out and must continue to participate in sick perversity every night.

SILENT LUCIDITY

In 1990, at the age of 15, Marshall says that he wrote Silent Lucidity for metal band Queensryche. The song was their biggest hit, peaking at #9 on the Billboard Hot 100, was nominated for a Grammy award in the category of "Best Rock Song" in 1992 and is ranked #21 on VH1's list of Greatest Power Ballads.

Because of the lyrical content, and the title of the song, it is assumed to be based on the subject of lucid dreaming.

However, Marshall says that the song is really about the numerous senseless crimes he witnessed at the cloning center, where many are brought there in their dream state, to be victimized for entertainment.

Hush now, don't you cry
Wipe away the teardrop from your eye
You're lying safe in bed
It was all a bad dream
Spinning in your head…

What's more, Marshall claims that many were lured to the cloning center to meet the "amazing song boy", and were told that this was necessary in order for him to create music that would turn them into stars, when, in reality, these people ended up murdered for sport or profit…

…a soul set free to fly...

At one point, a recorded voice explains how to consciously direct your dreams.

Marshall says he whispered help me at the end while the song was being recorded, to be then passed on to other musical artists to produce.

However, he never expected his words to be included in the official version and was amazed to find out later that it was. This cry for help can be heard at 3:53.

ENTER SANDMAN

Marshall was 16 years old when he wrote Metallica's 1991 heavy metal hit Enter Sandman which, he says, describes the terror felt by those held hostage at top-secret cloning centers.

The song propelled Metallica to worldwide popularity. The single debuted at No. 1 on the Billboard 200 in the United States and nine other countries, and sold over 22 million copies worldwide.

Twenty-five years later, Enter Sandman remains one of Metallica's most played songs; loved by fans, acclaimed by critics, and considered by many to be one of the greatest hard rock songs of all time.

Credited for writing the song's lyrics, vocalist and rhythm guitarist James Hetfield has said the song deals with the concept of a child's nightmares, about "destroying the perfect family; a huge horrible secret in a family".

Say your prayers, little one
Don't forget, my son
To include everyone

Tuck you in, warm within Keep you free from sin
Till the Sandman he comes

The Sandman is a mythical character in European folklore that brings good dreams by sprinkling magical sand into the eyes of people while they sleep at night.

However, Metallica's version of the Sandman is something different altogether, a malevolent guide who enters your dreams at night, to escort you to a nightmarish Never-Never Land.

Sleep with one eye open Gripping your pillow tight

Exit: light
Enter: night
Take my hand
We're off to Never-Never Land

Marshall says that the chorus of Exit light, Enter night accurately describes the double life of those trapped there, knowing that, eventually, they must fall asleep, only to awaken in the cloning center; a horrific war zone filled with…

Dreams of war, dreams of liars
Dreams of dragon's fire
And of things that will bite.

Marshall explains he doesn't know how to block the top-secret consciousness transfer technology that that is used to track, kidnap and hold those hostage at the cloning center until their real bodies wake up.

For that reason, Marshall says that he "hates to go to sleep".

SMELLS LIKE TEEN SPIRIT

Marshall states that he wrote legendary rock band Nirvana's1991 Gen-X anthem Smells Like Teen Spirit.

The song was Nirvana's biggest hit, reaching number six on the Billboard Hot 100 and ranking high on music industry charts around the world.

In fact, the unexpected success of the lead single from their album Nevermind is often used to mark the point where alternative rock music entered the mainstream.

Both a critical and commercial success, Smells Like Teen Spirit was nominated for two Grammy Awards: Best Hard Rock Performance with Vocal and Best Rock Song, and was granted the "anthem of a generation" status by the music press.

Twenty-five years later,following lead singer Kurt Cobain's 1994 death and the band's breakup, Smells Like Teen Spirit is still widely considered to be one of the greatest songs of all time.

The song was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame's list of "The Songs That Shaped Rock and Roll", was awarded "Song of the Century" by The Recording Industry Association of America and ranked at the top of Rolling Stone Magazine's "The 500 Greatest Songs of All Time".

The lyrics to Smells Like Teen Spirit are often difficult for listeners to decipher, both due to their nonsensicality and because of Cobain's slurred, guttural singing voice.

This incomprehensibility contributed to the early resistance from radio stations to add the song to their playlists. MTV went as far as to prepare a version of the video that included the lyrics running across the bottom of the screen.

Rock critic Dave Marsh wrote, "Teen Spirit reveals its secrets reluctantly and then often incoherently".

Marshall, trying to decipher the lyrics of the song, felt after reading the correct lyrics from the song's sheet music that "what I imagined was quite a bit better (at least, more gratifying) than what Nirvana actually sang".

Some concluded that the song had no meaning and was just a collection of meaningless words, while others, such as The New York Times observed a "bitter irony" in the title, saying that the band knows only too well that "teen spirit is routinely bottled, shrink-wrapped and sold".

Smells Like Teen Spirit is widely interpreted to be a teen revolution anthem, an interpretation reinforced by the song's music video.

In an interview conducted the day Nevermind was released, Cobain stated the song was about his friends, explaining, "We still feel as if we're teenagers because we don't follow the guidelines of what's expected of us to be adults... It also has kind of a teen revolutionary theme."

As Cobain did more interviews, he changed his explanation of the song and rarely gave specifics about the song's meaning.

When discussing the song in Michael Azerrad's biography Come as You Are: The Story of Nirvana, Cobain revealed that he felt a duty "to describe what I felt about my surroundings and my generation and people my age."

According to Marshall, the lyrics to Smells Like Teen Sprit provide an accurate description of the atmosphere at the cloning center when he created new music, where it can be said that:

With the lights out, it's less dangerous,
Here we are now, entertain us…

Marshall explains that many at the cloning center have told him that watching him create new music was the most magical thing in the world. Marshall says that when he was singing, the crowds were entertained and, for a moment, not engaged in the acts of depravity that often occurs there in the pit.

Marshall states that the brutal acts of blood-sport, the perverse sex parties, and the free-for-alls available at the cloning center take place in the dirt pit of the cloning center arena; where some enjoy the wild debauchery, while others participate and just pretend to have fun.

For that reason, Marshall says that when he created new music on the spot, the others there would be allowed to return to their stadium seats, sit in the darkness and enjoy the show.

But, according to Marshall, he struggled to keep up with the constant demand to create new music at the cloning center or suffer brutal torture as punishment.

Some nights, Marshall says he wouldn't be able to think up a new idea in time, and for that reason, he sings,

I feel stupid and contagious,

Here we are now, entertain us…

Marshall explains that he just sings out the songs, making it up as it goes.

Sometimes, when he's at a loss for words, he just uses the first one that comes to mind, hence verses like:

A mulatto
An albino
A mosquito
My libido

Marshall says he laughs when he later reads of musicians who claim credit for his work, trying to explain the true meaning behind the lyrics of his songs, when actually he says it just means: Don couldn't think of a better word…

Later, the third verse reads:

I'm worse at what I do best
And for this gift I feel blessed

Marshall claims that even on the nights he struggled to create new music for the privileged elite, he realized that if it weren't for his ability to create hit songs that generated many millions, he would have been used, abused and discarded long ago.

For that reason he says: Music saved my life…

LOSING MY RELIGION

Marshall maintains that he wrote the 1991 song Losing My Religion, recorded by alternative rock band R.E.M. to capture the hopelessness of his situation there, trapped by his own success, with no chance of escape.

Marshall says that he hates the song, as he says hearing it brings back bad memories of being beaten in a small side room at the cloning center, where he was surrounded and kicked until he began singing out a song, broken bones and all.

Losing My Religion became R.E.M.'s biggest hit in the U.S., peaking at No. 4 on the Billboard Hot 100, and stayed on the chart for 21 weeks.

R.E.M. instrumentalist/composer, Mike Mills called the song "the phenomenon that [was] a worldwide hit… in almost every civilized country in the world."

Built on a mandolin riff, the song was an unlikely hit for the group, garnering heavy airplay on the radio as well as on MTV, due to its critically acclaimed music video.

The song became R.E.M.'s highest-charting hit in the United States, reaching No. 4 on the Billboard Hot 100 and staying on the chart for 21 weeks.

R.E.M. received seven Grammy Award nominations in 1992, while Losing My Religion alone earned several nominations, including Record of the Year and Song of the Year.

The song won two Grammys for Best Pop Performance by a Duo or Group with Vocals and Best Short Form Music Video.

In 2004, Rolling Stone listed the song on its' list of the "500 Greatest Songs of All Time". In 2007, the song was listed as No.9 on VH1's 100 Greatest Songs of the 90's. The song is also included on The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame's list of 500 Songs that Shaped Rock and Roll.

R.E.M. guitarist Peter Buck is credited with writing the main riff and chorus to the song, using a mandolin, while watching television one day.

In Johnny Black's Reveal: The Story of R.E.M., Buck relates how he had just bought the instrument and was attempting to learn how to play it, recording the music as he practiced.

Buck said that "when I listened back to it the next day, there was a bunch of stuff that was really just me learning how to play mandolin, and then there's what became Losing My Religion".

R.E.M. lead singer and lyricist, Michael Stipe told The New York Times that the song was about romantic expression. He told UK's Q magazine that the song is about "someone who pines for someone else. Its' unrequited love, what have you."

According to Marshall, the song is actually about his determination to destroy the Illuminati, a downfall he had carefully set up through the use of embedding references to top-secret cloning throughout his music over the decades.

Under these circumstances, the lyrics take on new meaning, especially the reference in the third stanza in which one is asked to consider the song to be the hint of the century...

Life is bigger
It's bigger than you
And you are not me
The lengths that I will go to
The distance in your eyes
Oh no, I've said too much
I set it up

Marshall reveals that his secret is "bigger" than you can imagine, for you are not me. Unlike most at the cloning center, who simply sit and watch him sing, he vows never to surrender in his quest to destroy the Illuminati, no matter the cost to him personally.

Oh no, I've said too much
I set it up

He knows he must be careful not to say too much or risk punishment, although by embedding hints in his music, he sets up their eventual downfall…

That's me in the corner
That's me in the spotlight
Losing my religion
Trying to keep up with you
And I don't know if I can do it
Oh no, I've said too much
I haven't said enough

That's me in the corner
(beaten and kicked in a small side room at the cloning center)

That's me in the spotlight

(of the cloning center arena, singing out,
losing hope that I will ever be set free…)

Losing my religion
Trying to keep up with you
And I don't know if I can do it

Oh no, I've said too much
I haven't said enough

Marshall speaks to the constant challenge where he knows that he will be punished if he says too much, or fail in his quest to destroy the Illuminati if he says too little…

I thought that I heard you laughing
I thought that I heard you sing
I think I thought I saw you try

Speaking to himself, Marshall thinks that he hears himself "singing, laughing, trying".

However, such carefree moments for him are "just a dream"...

Every whisper
Of every waking hour
I'm choosing my confessions
Trying to keep an eye on you
Like a hurt, lost and blinded fool, fool
Oh no, I've said too much
I set it up

Always planning the hints or "confessions" that he will insert into his music, Marshall must, at the same time, keep an eye on his abusers, in preparation for the next attack…

Consider this Consider this, the hint of the century
Consider this, the slip
That brought me to my knees, failed
What if all these fantasies come
Flailing around
Now I've said too much

Marshall asks us to regard the song as the biggest expose of the secret elite, knowing, however, that if this "hint of the century" should fail, the loss will bring him to his knees...

I thought that I heard you laughing
I thought that I heard you sing
I think I thought I saw you try

But that was just a dream
Try, cry, why, try
That was just a dream
Just a dream
Just a dream, dream

Written in a dark moment, Marshall doubts whether he will ever be able to succeed in his dream to destroy the Illuminati, considering that he is just one against the most powerful organization on Earth.

IT'S THE END OF THE WORLD AS WE KNOW IT (AND I FEEL FINE)

It's the End of the World as We Know It (And I Feel Fine), another song by the rock band R.E.M., appeared on their 1987 album Document, the 1988 compilation Eponymous, and the 2006 compilation And I Feel Fine…The Best of the I.R.S. Years 1982-1987. It was also released as a single in November 1987, reaching No. 69 in the US Billboard Hot 100 and later reached No. 39 in the UK singles chart on its re-release in December 1991.

This gleefully apocalyptic song is known for its' quick flying, seemingly stream of consciousness rant with a number of diverse references to end time prophecies.

The words in the title first appear in the 1972 film Conquest of the Planet of the Apes, where, in preparing to fight the apes, a human says: "If we lose this battle, that's the end of the world as we know it."

Explaining the song to Q magazine in 1992, lead singer Michael Stipe said: "The words come from everywhere. I'm extremely aware of everything around me, whether I am in a sleeping state, awake, dream-state or just in day to day life…along with a lot of stuff I'd seen when I was flipping TV channels. It's a collection of streams of consciousness."

Marshall claims that he wrote the 1987 song while trapped during his dream state in a deep underground military base.

He says the title actually means "It's the End of the Illuminati-Controlled World, as We Know It, and what's more, I Feel Fine", since Marshall maintains that destroying the Illuminati has been his dream since he was a young child.

He says the lyrics describe the Illuminati's plan to create a fake Armageddon by using top-secret HAARP (weather manipulation technology) to create global disasters (It starts with an earthquake) as well as the recreation of freaky acts straight out of the Book of Revelations (birds and snakes).

Then, after unleashing a series of manufactured global disasters, the Illuminati plan to sit back and watch the chaos as civilization breaks down, giving them the excuse to send in the military to restore order, confiscating all guns and disarming the populace, thus allowing them to completely take over the world.

It [the Apocalypse] starts with an earthquake [and the unleashing of] birds and snakes in a frightening act of God's fury

[And like the] Eye of a hurricane, [you] listen to yourself churn as you hopelessly watch the world, as you know it, spin out of control

[And with] a government for hire pretending to address the world emergency, while Team by team [of] reporters [pretend to be] baffled [on the] Six o'clock, TV hour covering such fake news stories as slash and burn, book burning [and] bloodletting

Every motive escalate[s][while] automotive[s] incinerate meanwhile, world leaders participate in a Tournament of Lies

[Offering] solutions [and] alternatives which, Marshall suggests,
[we] decline…

CREEP

Creep was released by English alternative rock band Radiohead as their debut single in 1992, and it later appeared on their first album Pablo Honey.

During its initial release, Creep was not a chart success. However, upon re-release in 1993, it became a worldwide hit. The song is included in the Radiohead: The Best Of compilation album.

Creep met with little success in the UK when it was first released in September 1992. Radio 1 found the song "too depressing" and refrained from playing the song. Creep reached number 78 on the UK Singles Chart, selling only 6,000 copies.

Toward the end of 1992, DJ Yoav Kutner played Creep incessantly on Israeli radio. The song soon became a national hit.

Creep had similar success in New Zealand, Spain and Scandinavian countries.

Around the same time, California radio stations added the song to their playlist, and other radio stations along the West Coast soon followed.

By the second half of 1993, the song had become a hit nationwide, charting at number 34 on the Billboard Hot 100.

Radiohead lead vocalist, Thom Yorke, who wrote Creep while studying at Exeter University in the late 1980s, says the song tells the tale of an inebriated man who tries to get the attention of a woman to whom he is attracted by following her around.

In the end, he lacks the self-confidence to face her and, subconsciously, feels that he has become her.

According to Radiohead guitarist Jonny Greenwood, the song was inspired by a girl that Yorke had followed around who showed up unexpectedly during a show by the band. He says the song was, in fact, a happy song about "recognizing what you are".

Marshall says he wrote Creep while trapped at the cloning center, singing directly to the Queen, as he found that "serenading the monster" would sometimes allow him to get away, unhurt, for one more night.

Many are unaware that Queen Elizabeth II, as head of state of the United Kingdom and of 31 other states and territories, is the legal owner of about 6,600 million acres of land, one sixth of the earth's non-ocean surface, making her the largest landowner and richest individual on Earth.

In fact, there is no way to easily assess the value of her real estate holdings, although a rough estimate places their value into many, many trillions of dollars.

For that reason, Marshall says no world leader ever opposes her in any way for fear of retaliation.

Marshall explains that for generations, royal families in the Illuminati have indulged their sick fantasies in wild sex parties, safe from discovery behind castle walls on remote estates.

However, with the advance of top-secret cloning technology, the royals were given the unimagined opportunity to meet every night in deep underground military bases, where, by activating identical clones, they can indulge every whim, while their real bodies sleep at night.

Marshall explains that the Queen holds much power and authority at the cloning center, where everyone treads lightly, as she is capable of nearly anything and there is no guessing what she might do next. Despite her carefully constructed public image of service and duty to crown and country, Marshall says the Queen is actually unstable and psychotic, caused by decades of participating in sick depravity underground.

This explains the first verse of Creep, which reads:

When you were here before,
Couldn't look you in the eye,
You're just like an angel,
Your skin makes me cry,
You float like a feather,
In a beautiful world,
I wish I was special,
You're so very special

Only at the end of the song does Marshall expresses his true feelings, as he searches for answers to explain how he ended up hopelessly trapped in a top-secret, hi-tech hell.

What the hell am I doing here?
I don't belong here
I don't belong here...

FOUR MINUTES TO SAVE THE WORLD

4 Minutes is a song by pop legend Madonna from her eleventh studio album Hard Candy (2008), featuring a duet with musical artist Justin Timberlake, with backing vocals by rapper/record producer, Timbaland.

According to Madonna, the song is about saving the environment and "hav[ing] a good time while we are doing it."

She also cited the song as the inspiration for the documentary I Am Because We Are (2008).

In the United States, 4 Minutes debuted at number 68 on the Billboard Hot 100 chart in April 5, 2008, based solely on airplay.

Within a week, the song had jumped 65 places, reaching number three on the chart.

The single was an international hit, topping the charts in over 21 countries worldwide, including Australia, Canada, Germany, Italy, Spain and the United Kingdom.

As of July 2012, 4 Minutes had become Madonna's best-selling digital single in the United States, with 3 million copies sold.

The song peaked at number three on the Billboard Hot 100, giving Madonna her 37th top-ten single, breaking the record previously held by Elvis Presley as the artist with most top-ten hits.

Almost five months after its release, 4 Minutes was certified double platinum by the Recording Industry Association of America (RIAA) for sales of two million paid digital downloads.

4 Minutes was the tenth most downloaded song in the United States in 2008 with sales of 2.37 million, and has sold over three million copies as of July 2012.

The song received two Grammy Award nominations for Best Pop Collaboration with Vocals and Best Remixed Recording, Non Classical at the 2009 ceremony.

The song's lyrics carry a message of social awareness, inspired by Madonna's visit to Africa and the human suffering she said she witnessed there.

In an interview with MTV News, Madonna further explained the meaning of the song: "I don't think it's important to take it too literally. I think the song, more than anything, is about having a sense of urgency; about how we are, you know, living on borrowed time essentially and people are becoming much more aware of the environment and how we're destroying the planet…so it's kind of like, well, if we're going to save the planet, can we have a good time while we are doing it?"

According to Marshall, the song is his, written by him at the cloning center. What's more, Marshall says the title actually refers to a sick game they would often play, where he would be allowed only 4 minutes to write a new song or suffer the consequences.

Most nights, Marshall would be able to scramble together some kind of song, but this time was different.

Marshall says that you can hear his desperation in the beginning of the song, as he searches for some idea, fully aware that time is quickly slipping away.

The song begins with Timbaland chanting the opening lines:

[Timbaland]
I'm outta time and all I got is 4 minutes, 4 minutes
I'm outta time and all I got is 4 minutes, 4 minutes
I'm outta time and all I got is 4 minutes, 4 minutes
I'm outta time and all I got is 4 minutes, 4 minutes
I'm outta time and all I got is 4 minutes, 4 minutes
I'm outta time and all I got is 4 minutes, 4 minutes
I'm outta time and all I got is 4 minutes, 4 minutes
I'm outta time and all I got is 4 minutes...

He says that he just kept repeating the phrase over and over again, until he had enough of an idea to begin singing.

Later verses make it clear that only 4 minutes are remaining in order to save the world:

[Madonna and Timberlake]
Time is waiting
We only got 4 minutes to save the world
No hesitating
Grab a boy, grab a girl
Time is waiting
We only got 4 minutes to save the world
No hesitating
We only got 4 minutes, 4 minutes.
Later, they trade choruses:
[Madonna]
The road to hell
Is paved with good intentions, yeah
[Timberlake]
But if I die tonight at least I can say
I did what I wanted to do
Tell me, how 'bout you?

Marshall is reminding himself that no matter what the personal consequences, he will never give up in his efforts to expose and destroy the Illuminati.

And, while he was able to crank out an original song in under 4 minutes, the next night, however, Marshall says he wasn't so luckyand was severely punished for it.

Marshall says he's surprised that people don't pay enough attention to lyrics and have no idea as to their true meaning.

As incredible as all this sounds, Marshall claims that he only mentions the music as it provides an explanation as to why he was allowed to live all these years, as he was simply too valuable to kill.

Marshall hopes that one day, people will understand what their favorite songs are really about and demand a complete shutdown of all top-secret cloning centers worldwide.

The Donald Marshall Story - Part 3: Rock Me Amadeus
In 1985, Austrian musician Falco scored a huge international hit with the pop song Rock Me Amadeus.

Inspired by the 1984 Academy Award winning film, Amadeus, about the life of prolific classical composer, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, Falco's music video imagines Mozart's return as a modern day rock god.

He appears to be living the high life, loved and celebrated the world over by the rich and famous, all hungry for the new music that will turn them into superstars.

According to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, the music video accurately portrays his bizarre double life as a top-secret songwriter for the privileged elite of the New World Order.

He claims that he wrote Rock Me Amadeus, as a 10-year-old kid trapped at the cloning center, where "Amadeus" was one of his many nicknames.

The video depicts the constant demand for new music there, where his songs launched many a successful career.

"You don't know it," he says, "but you've been listening to me for over 40 years…"

Marshall came forward in late 2011 to speak out about the Illuminati's use of top-secret human cloning technology which, he says, is much more advanced than the public is told.

He states that this top-secret tech allows members of the Illuminati to transfer their individual consciousness during the natural REM stage of sleep to their identical clones stored in a deep underground military base.

There they sit in the stands of a large sports arena to discuss global politics, plan future events and watch disgusting things done to innocent people, while their real bodies are at home sleeping.

Marshall has attended cloning since childhood, he says, as an unwilling participant in covert government projects.

Marshall explains that after displaying an early success at songwriting, he was brought to the cloning center night after night, in order to produce new music for such 80's artists as Whitney Houston, Tina Turner, Madonna and many, many others.

Standing alone in the dirt pit of the arena, Marshall says he would just sing out song after song.

It was weird how he could do it, Marshall says, could easily create a new song out of thin air.

Marshall's first song, entitled Lady, recorded by American country artist Kenny Rodgers, became a chart-topping hit, reaching #1 on Billboard magazine's singles charts for 6 straight weeks just months later.

He says his next songs all went on to become Top Ten hits… all of them.

Before long, Marshall's reputation grew and everyone wanted to meet the "Amazing Song Boy".

Marshall tells us he doesn't write songs down, but just "sings 'em out", making it up as he goes, in the dirt arena of the cloning center, sometimes stopping for a moment to think up the next line or verse.

Marshall states that his songs would be recorded and then given to other songwriters to claim credit.

One can only imagine the experience of sitting in the darkly-lit arena of the cloning center, watching, waiting as Marshall creates new music on the spot, knowing that his songs are a guaranteed hit, that just one of his songs could make or break your career, one song could change your life forever… Who's gonna get it?

Marshall explains that sometimes he would sing out a random song, and a celebrity would claim the song, saying that it sounded like something he'd sing.

Other times, he was asked to write custom songs for a specific artist or group, in which case, he had to write the song with their signature sound in mind.

But, he says that it's not just about making music, it's about making music that sells.

Through decades of trial and error, Marshall developed an uncanny ability to predict the music that people will like, and most importantly, people will buy.

His songs have made many millions of dollars for major record labels, musical groups, artists and bands the world over.

He had to make songs that were successful, because if a song failed, he would be blamed and tortured later as punishment.

Marshall says that now he doesn't even like listening to music, because of bad memories of how he had to sing for his life for so many years.

What's more, he finds that he can't lose himself in the sound, but instead is always thinking: Will it sell?

In song making, Marshall explains that the melody is key in creating hit songs. He has learned that people want a catchy tune with some repetition, as we psychologically crave listening to music with a repeating pattern of rise, climax and fall.

Marshall tells us that he also likes to add familiar melodies from nursery rhymes and children's songs in his music, as he has found that listeners will unconsciously remember the sound from their childhood and want to hear the song again and again.

Marshall points to the 2012 hit single Somebody that I Used to Know that he wrote for Australian singer-songwriter Gotye.

He explains that the song opens with a simple melody played on xylophone that he lifted from the nursery rhyme Baa Baa Black Sheep.

Marshall says that everyone subliminally remembers this familiar melody, although they won't consciously make the connection.

This technique worked as the chart-topping hit went on to receive both critical and commercial success, selling more than 13 million copies worldwide, to become one of the best selling singles of all time.

In fact, Goyte co-manager John Watson said, "We've never seen any song make a deeper or more immediate connection with so many people."

Marshall explains that using techniques like this helped him sell many records and kept him from facing torture… most times.

Even though Marshall's work has received numerous awards, honors and accolades over three decades, he has yet to receive any public recognition.

For example, Gotye won two Grammy Awards in 2013 for hit single Somebody that I used to Know for Best Pop Duo/Group Performance and Record of the Year.

And as for Marshall receiving any financial compensation for all the many millions his music has made in the last three decades?

Well, let's just say, he's still waiting on that first check...

For example, Marshall's first song Lady, written at the age of 5, has been singer-songwriter Lionel Richie's most profitable song ever.

Richie, who was given songwriting credit for the ballad, told Entertainment Weekly that he has an "estate that Lady bought".

In fact, one might say Marshall is the "most famous man you've never heard of".

So, what songs does he claim to have written in his over 30 year career as a secret Illuminati songwriter?

As he says, just turn on the radio...

Music industry insiders know that while they may have many talented performers under contract, ready for stardom, their careers go nowhere without that one catchy hit single that receives massive airplay on the radio, driving consumers to download and buy.

Because, even with talent and a fan base, singers still need that crucial hit song to launch their careers and keep them afloat.

But that was never a problem with the kid onboard.

Marshall says he's forgotten more songs than he can remember making over the three decades he's been trapped there, writing music.

Marshall claims that his ability to create instant hits launched the careers of such 80's superstars as Madonna, Whitney Houston, and Michael Jackson, all of whom were massively successful, with their music videos becoming a permanent fixture on MTV, gaining them a worldwide audience.

He says he remembers when Madonna was first introduced at the cloning center, having been discovered by Sean Penn as a dancer at a New York City strip club.

Penn saw her potential and requested she be brought to the cloning center, to meet other members of the Illuminati.

Marshall maintains that, in the beginning, he wrote all of her songs, (Holiday, Borderline, Lucky Star, Like A Virgin, Papa Don't Preach, etc.), songs that went on to top charts around the world.

In fact, by 1989, Madonna was named Artist of the Decade by a number of recognized industry sources.

Whitney Houston became the second best selling female artist of the 1980's, second only to Madonna, with her debut album becoming the best selling debut album of all time.

Houston was the first and only artist to chart seven consecutive No.1 songs on the Billboard 100, all songs Marshall created specifically for her at the cloning center (You Give Good Love To Me, Saving All My Love For You, How Will I Know?, etc.).

Marshall remembers Houston as being nice at first, however, in time she changed as she increasingly turned to drugs and alcohol to cope with the depravity she encountered at the cloning center every night in her so-called "dreams".

Music industry insiders soon realized that Marshall's music had the power to launch even big stars into superstardom, as in the case of the late King of Pop, Michael Jackson, who Marshall remembers well over his years at the cloning center.

Already enjoying the critical and commercial success from his 1979 solo album Off The Wall, Jackson's follow-up album, Thriller, released several years later, would become and currently remains, the best selling album of all time, with an estimated sales of 65 million copies worldwide.

Thriller was the first album to have seven Billboard Hot 100 top 10 singles, including Billie Jean, Beat It, and Wanna Be Startin' Somethin' and won a record-breaking eight Grammy Awards in 1984, including Album of the Year.

And even though Jackson is given songwriting credit for four songs on the album (Billie Jean, Beat It, Wanna Be Startin' Somethin', and The Girl Is Mine). Marshall claims that he actually wrote those songs for Jackson at the cloning center.

Marshall says he remembers Jackson and his entire family well, where he says the Jacksons were privileged members.

Marshall says he has to laugh at the late singer's reputation as a truther desperate to expose the Illuminati, when actually he says Jackson was "totally down" with them, and was not at all like his carefully crafted public image.

What's more, Jackson's 1996 hit single They Don't Really Care About Us is his song, that Marshall says he wrote to alert the public about how the world elite really feel about you and me.

Marshall's music not only created new superstars, his songs also supplied fading talent with powerful comeback careers, as in the case of the Queen of Rock 'n' Roll, Tina Turner, who launched a major comeback in the mid-80's with the release of her 1984 solo album Private Dancer.

The lead single What's Love Got To Do With It won three Grammy Awards that year, including Record of the Year.

Quickly recorded in London in just two months, Private Dancer became a world-wide success.

What's Love Got To Do With It reached the top ten within weeks and, two months later, reached number one on the Billboard Hot 100 in the U.S., selling over twenty million copies worldwide.

While Turner brought her powerful vocals and electric stage presence, Marshall provided the tunes (What's Love Got To Do With It, Private Dancer, Better Be Good To Me, etc.).

Another comeback kid, the late pop legend David Bowie, enjoyed massive mid-career success thanks, in part, to Marshall.

While known for decades as an innovator in music, art and design, Bowie had yet to write the pop song that would top charts in the U.S. and around the world.

Enter Marshall, who supplied the title track, Let's Dance, the hit single, Modern Love, as well as a remix of China Girl for Bowie's 1983 album, Let's Dance.

The title track became an instant hit, reaching No.1 in the U.S., U.K. and around the world, while Modern Love and China Girl, both reached No. 2 in the U.K., all courtesy of Marshall.

Let's Dance has sold 10.7 million copies worldwide, making it Bowie's best-selling album.

Let's Dance was nominated for the Album of the Year at the 1984 Grammy Awards, but lost to Michael Jackson's Thriller.

With his career revitalized, Bowie traveled the globe with the sold-out Serious Moonlight Tour, emerging as one of the most important artists of the day.

The success of the album surprised Bowie, who later attempted to write his own catchy pop songs with the follow-up albums Tonight (1984) and Never Let Me Down (1987), which critics dismissed.

Unable to duplicate the success he had found using Marshall's songs, Bowie returned to writing his own songs, experimenting with a wide variety of musical styles.

Not only did Marshall's music launch new careers and relaunch those not-so-new, his songs also guaranteed success, reassuring for the Illuminati-backed music industry, known for playing it safe musically and distrustful of anyone willing to take chances.

For example, take the case of the late legendary singer-songwriter Prince and his neo-psychedelic album Around the World in a Day, released just one year after the 1984 mega-hit, Purple Rain.

The new album reflected important steps in Prince's musical evolution, incorporating new instruments and musical styles which prompted critics to draw numerous comparisons to The Beatles' Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band.

However, the record-buying public didn't respond well to Prince's new sound, resulting in a dramatic record sales drop, from 13 million sold for Purple Rain to only 2 million sold for the new album.

The only song on the album still remembered today, is the successful hit single Raspberry Beret, a popular song that quickly reached number two on the Billboard Hot 100, and was played at every Prince concert thereafter.

At the time, critics commented that the sound of the song was different than any previous Prince track, with the incorporation of international instruments and middle eastern percussion cymbals.

Marshall claims that Raspberry Beret is his, that he co-wrote with Prince, guaranteeing the album at least one hit single.

Marshall explains that many of the songwriters for whom he provided music are actually bitter by the fact that Marshall's songs are usually the most popular tracks on any album, always the most requested and loved by fans.

Marshall contends that his music was not only used to create new superstars, his songs provided the jet fuel to launch new musical movements, such as the so-called Second British Invasion of the U.S. of the 1980's.

One might say that this Invasion's first lethal attack took the form of a single entitled Don't You Want Me by British synthpop band The Human League from their album Dare.

This song, written by Marshall, about the failed romance between a man and a cocktail waitress-turned-superstar, was released in early 1982, and by July, hit No.1 on the Billboard Hot 100, where it stayed for three solid weeks.

Scores of British synthpop groups followed such as the Eurythmics, Culture Club, Duran Duran, Wham!, Billy Idol, Tears For Fears, as well as the post punk rock sounds of The Police, U2, and the popular mega-hits of Phil Collins.

Marshall remembers meeting these artists at the cloning center and claims to have written all of their biggest hits.

He explains that musicians like Collins, Sting, and Bono are loyal Illuminati members and favorites of the Queen, who would reward faithful service with guaranteed hits from Marshall.

He even wrote Peter Gabriel's smash single Sledgehammer, he says, to describe an act of punishment he suffered at the cloning center using an actual sledgehammer. Marshall claims that he wrote all of the hits for such synthpop stars as ABC, a-ha, The Cure, Depeche Mode, the Eurythmics, A Flock of Seagulls, Frankie Goes to Hollywood, New Order, Pet Shop Boys, Simple Minds, Soft Cell, Spandau Ballet, Thomas Dolby, the Thompson Twins, Ultravox and many more.

This volume is not made up of my own words.There is no original commentary
here, no narrative, no analysis.This is simply me copying and pasting large chunks of text from my bookmarks—pages that were easy to extract, with no hyperlinks or formatting issues, saved from open tabs and archived corners of the web.
It's messy. It's unfiltered. It's chaotic.But it's valuable.
Each piece inside this volume was bookmarked for a reason.Not always because I agreed with it, but because it felt like a fragment of something larger—an insight, a worldview, a download.This is source material, plain and raw.
Fragmenta Ex Machina isn't about authorship.It's about preservation and system-building.It's about feeding the machine—laying bricks for the Operating System I'm constructing across these books.This is the raw intake phase. The memory dump. The zero layer.
Later volumes will be cleaner, more refined, more structured.But this? This is the foundation. The ether stream, bound and frozen before it vanished.
So if you're looking for polished prose, skip this one.But if you're here to explore the roots of something much bigger, this is where the signal begins.
Welcome to the fragments.

The mid-80's also saw an international musical movement known as the "New Wave of British Heavy Metal", where hard rock musicians from the U.K., infused the sound of heavy metal with the intensity of punk rock to produce fast, aggressive songs.

Two British heavy metal bands of the time, Def Leppard and Iron Maiden, are considered to be the most commercially successful and influential heavy metal bands of all time.

For example, Def Leppards' 1983 album, Pyromania peaked at No. 2 on the Billboard 200 chart, just behind Michael Jackson's Thriller, and sold more than six million copies in the U.S., turning Def Leppard into superstars.

Marshall claims that he wrote Pour Some Sugar On Me as a kid and, what's more, states that he practically IS Def Leppard, and has written all of their popular songs, songs that are still heard on the radio every day some thirty years later.

Glam Metal bands also had a run of commercial success with Bon Jovi's 1986 album Slippery When Wet topping the Billboard 200 and spending eight non-consecutive weeks there.

The single You Give Love a Bad Name, reached No.1 on the U.S. Billboard Hot 100 to become the band's first number one hit.

Another successful group from that era was Guns N' Roses who released the best-selling debut of all time, Appetite For Destruction, producing three top 10 hits including the No.1 Sweet Child O' Mine, while Poison's 1988 album Open Up and Say…Ahh! hit single Every Rose Has Its' Thorn, sold eight million copies worldwide.

According to Marshall, he wrote all of those songs, while a trapped, scared teenager, yes, all of them…

The 80's also saw a huge interest in heavy metal music, which Marshall says that he used to express his fury and rage at being caged at the cloning center, tortured nightly for new songs.

He says that his songs launched the successful careers of Metallica, Megadeth, Anthrax, Slayer, Queensryche, Quiet Riot, Cinderella, Twisted Sister and many more.

Marshall's music also revived the sagging careers of established hard rocks bands such as Aerosmith, Alice Cooper, KISS, Black Sabbath, Scorpions and Whitesnake.

Over the years, Marshall claims to have provided songs for many heavy metal bands, such as Avenged Sevenfold, Motorhead, Disturbed, Lamb of God, System of a Down, Godsmack, Killswitch Engage, Tool, A Perfect Circle, Korn, Drowning Pool, White Zombie, Skid Row, Suicidal Tendencies, Linkin Park and many others.

The end of the 80's saw the gradual decline of glam metal and the emergence of a completely new sound that came to be known as "Grunge".

Originating in the city of Seattle's active music scene, local guitarists fused elements of hardcore punk with heavy metal to create something raw and powerful, with lyrics that often spoke of social alienation, apathy, confinement and a desire for freedom.

By the early 1990's, the music's popularity had spread, with grunge acts performing in California and other parts of the U.S., building a strong following and leading to groups signing major record deals.

However, while professional scouts for the Illuminati-backed record labels signed many promising bands from the Pacific Northwest, they would still need those chart-topping hits to sweep the country and catch the attention of the mainstream consumer.

Marshall tells us that he was just a teenager when he met members from many grunge bands at the cloning center, where he wrote the signature hits for bands such as Pearl Jam, Alice in Chains, Soundgarden, Hole, and Stone Temple Pilots among others.

What's more, Marshall says that he IS Nirvana, having written every one of their songs, even providing the name for the band.

While the late Nirvana frontman Kurt Cobain had a compelling voice and stage presence, Marshall says it's really him you're listening to, in every song.

He explains that musicians like Cobain, despite their reputation as songwriters, are more like performers that play music.

And while Cobain might have had the talent necessary to propel him to stardom, make no mistake, he got there on the strength of Marshall's songs.

Marshall continued to provide the tunes for many alternative rock bands, such as Jane's Addiction, the Red Hot Chili Peppers, Radiohead, R.E.M., The Smashing Pumpkins, Bush, Candlebox, Creed, Nickleback, 3 Doors Down, Silverchair, Beck, Counting Crows, Soul Asylum, Cake, Garbage, Rage Against the Machine and a decade later for bands such as No Doubt, Paramore, Train, and Imagine Dragons.

Marshall even supplied the music for Britpop groups such as Oasis, Muse, and Coldplay as well as the post-punk sounds of The White Stripes, The Killers, Green Day, and The Offspring.

Marshall maintains that many musicians secretly try to recognize his uncredited contributions to their successful careers.

He explains that the Foo Fighters' 1998 hit single My Hero is not a tribute to "everyday, ordinary heroes" as former Nirvana drummer/Foo Fighers' frontman Dave Grohl states.

Instead, Marshall says that Grohl wrote the song about him and that he provided songs for both Nirvana and the Foo Fighters.

Marshall also claims to have written many songs for U.K.'s britpop group, Oasis.

He says that Noel Gallagher is mean, and he had to laugh about the time that Gallagher famously criticized the work of Phil Collins, whose mega-hits dominated the music charts in the 80's, calling Collin's music "boring", saying that it was "time for some real lads to get up there and take charge".

Gallagher's comment is especially ironic considering Marshall wrote all of Oasis's best tunes and, incidentally, all of Collin's biggest hits, as well.

Marshall says many singer-songwriters take credit for songs he wrote specifically for them, such as Mariah Carey, Adele, Norah Jones, Dido, Sarah McLachlin, Alanis Morrissette, Fiona Apple, Jewel, Natalie Merchant, Alicia Keys and Taylor Swift.

These so-called singer-songwriters are actually singing his songs, using his words, sharing his message.

Marshall claims that the Illuminati will recruit those of interest, and then bring them to the cloning center to meet him, so he can turn them into stars.

All they need to do is to find the performers, those with the right look and sound, while Marshall supplies the rest.

Marshall's music launched the careers of such megastars as Mariah Carey, Janet Jackson, Britney Spears, Christina Aguilera, Justin Timberlake, Beyonce, Lady Gaga, Katy Perry, Taylor Swift, Justin Bieber, Rihanna, Adele, Usher, Pink, The Black Eyed Peas, Selena Gomez, Carly Rae Jepsen, Kelly Clarkson, Kesha, Avril Lavigne, Enrique Iglesias, Lana Del Rey, Bruno Mars and on and on.

Marshall says he's written many of Britney Spear's hits from the beginning, including her 1998 debut single Baby One More Time which became one of the best-selling singles of all time, reaching No.1 in every country around the world.

Marshall explains that the lyrics are not about the feelings of a young girl after a break-up with her boyfriend, but instead refer to the constant threat of punishment Marshall faces should he not produce successful songs… hit me, baby, one more time… indeed.

Over time, the Illuminati-backed music industry insiders became so confident that Marshall's music could turn virtually anyone into a star, that they began to bring more and more to the cloning center to meet him.

Take, for example, international pop superstar, Lady Gaga, whose 2008 debut album, The Fame was a critical and commercial success around the world with its' chart-topping singles Just Dance and Poker Face.

She followed that in 2009 with an extended play (EP) The Fame Monster, with its successful singles, Bad Romance, Telephone and Alejandro.

Her second full-length album Born This Way, released in 2011, sold over one million copies in its' first week, topping the charts in more than 20 countries, with its' No. 1 single Born This Way.

Despite her reputation as a songwriter, Marshall says he wrote every one of Lady Gaga's songs from the beginning of her career. He says that all she brought was her arty costumes and hairstyles; Marshall supplied all the rest.

The same can be said for multi-Grammy Award winning singer-songwriter, Rihanna.

Marshall says he can remember when he first met Rihanna at the cloning center, fresh from the island of Barbados, eager to do whatever it took for fame and fortune.

Marshall claims to have written all of her hit singles, such as Umbrella, Take A Bow, Disturbia and Diamonds.

With sales exceeding 200 million records sold worldwide, Rihanna became one of the best-selling artists of all time, with 14 number one singles on the Billboard Hot 100.

Rihanna must have made many influential friends there, because Marshall says that, for a time, they just kept giving her every song he wrote, one after another.

Marshall explains that while some are brought to the cloning center to meet him, others have attended since childhood, as members of privileged Illuminati families.

He says they were selected as kids to be the next big thing, with their success guaranteed.

Even though these "cloner-kids" create fake bios filled with stories of how they struggled until they were discovered singing at local county fairs and coffee shops... don't fall for it, says Marshall.

Truth is, they were favored from childhood to be big stars, as a reward to their Illuminati parents for years of faithful service.

Whether it's pop, country, hard rock, heavy metal, electronica, hip hop, rap ... you name it. Marshall simply writes the music that sells.

Marshall says that he's known underground as the Rainman because of the untold millions of dollars his music pours into profits worldwide.

And as for that other Rainman, legendary rapper Marshall Mathers…?

Well, let's just pretend he never picked up a pen… for according to Marshall, he is Eminem and has written all the rapper's songs.

Marshall tells us that Eminem was promoted by the Illuminati in the late 90's as a way to introduce black rap music to middle-class white kids across the country, which was then a lucrative, underdeveloped market.

Marshall says that at first he was writing songs for Miami-born white rapper, Vanilla Ice, who, with his 1990 hit single Ice Ice Baby became the second white rapper in history to top the charts.

His debut album To The Extreme, became the fastest selling hip hop album of all time, spending sixteen weeks at No.1 on the Billboard 200 selling over eleven million copies.

However, unlike New York white rappers the Beastie Boys, Vanilla Ice had no street credibility, and with overall negative reviews for his next two albums, interest in the rapper soon dropped.

Marshall maintains that music industry insiders were looking for a replacement for Vanilla Ice when they discovered Detroit rapper, Marshall "Eminem" Mathers, who had recently moved to Los Angeles in 1997 to compete in an annual nationwide battle rap competition.

Placing second, the Illuminati took notice and quickly recruited Mathers into their ranks, with promises of fame, fortune, and guaranteed success with the use of Marshall's music.

Forget any official versions you've heard of Eminem as just another struggling young rapper pushing his demo CD before being discovered by Interscope Records founder, Jimmy Iovine and famed record producer, Dr. Dre.

Truth is, Mathers is "Illuminati made and paid", says Marshall and adds that he's "not the nice, cool guy everyone thinks he is".

Thanks to Marshall, Eminem went on to become the best-selling hip hop artist of all time, with twelve No.1 singles worldwide, and eight No.1 albums on the Billboard Top 200.

In 2009, Billboard Magazine even named Eminem the "Artist of the Decade".

Marshall says that he has written songs for many rappers such as Public Enemy, Run-D.M.C., Master P., OutKast, N.W.A., LL Cool J., MC Hammer, Snoop Dogg, Ludacris, the Fugees, Salt 'N' Pepa, the Beastie Boys, DMX, Jay-Z and many more.

Marshall says he even collaborated with the late rapper, Tupac Shakur, in writing his best songs.

Imagine if the public found out that their favorite ghetto anthems were actually penned by a white kid straight outta Halifax…

Marshall says that many rappers manufacture fake bios of growing up in "da 'hood" when, in reality, they were born to lives of wealth and privilege, selected for fame from influential Illuminati families.

Marshall reports that artists like Lil' Wayne and Kanye West owe him a "chunk of change", as he's been writing most of their music since the very beginning of their careers.

For the over three decades that Marshall has claimed to been trapped at the cloning center writing music, he says that he made a "whole lot of bad people a whole lot of money".

Marshall maintains that many at the cloning center are jealous of him and his talent for creating hit songs "outta nowhere, like magic".

They say that it is unfair that they struggle for months to write one song with poor results, whereas Marshall can write a song in minutes that is guaranteed to sell millions of copies worldwide.

He remembers several years ago, one songwriter bragging about his big win for the "Best Record of the Year" that he won the at the Grammy Award ceremony the night before, a triumph he achieved using one of Marshall's songs.

As the songwriter addressed the audience at the cloning center, and went on and on about his win, Marshall finally spoke up.

"Yeah," he said, "But what did you do?"

"Well", the songwriter quickly replied, "I play the piano…"

The crowd roared in laughter.

Marshall had made his point, although, he remembers, the songwriter punished him later for making the remark.

Marshall claims that in speaking out, he is not looking for fame or riches.

His only aim is to tell the public the truth about the top-secret human cloning that takes place in deep underground military bases around the world.

He says he will never stop until all those trapped there are freed and all cloning centers are shut down forever.

Secret Human Cloning

In 1997, embryologists at the Roslin Institute in Scotland, announced that they had successfully cloned a young sheep, "Dolly", from a cell taken from the mammary gland of an adult sheep. Public reaction to the news was swift. The story was on the front page of the New York Times and dominated television newscasts and talk shows around the world. Did it mean, people asked, that this could be done in humans? Were we nearer to cloning human beings?

U.S. President Bill Clinton reacted immediately, stating that the cloning of Dolly the sheep raised "serious, ethical questions, particularly with respect to the possible use of this technology to clone human embryos". Clinton called for legislation to ban human cloning, as did thirteen European countries, including the UK House of Commons Science and Technology Committee (STC) which said that British law needs to be amended to ensure that human cloning is illegal. President Jacques Chirac of France and German Research Minister, Juergen Ruettgters, also called for an international ban on human cloning.

What the public did not realize at the time, according to Illuminati whistleblower, Donald Marshall, was the fact that top-secret experiments in human cloning had already been conducted for many decades in deep underground military bases around the world.

Marshall claims to have seen human cloning first hand, as an unwilling participant in human cloning since early childhood. Marshall says that elite scientists in every country all over the world use top-secret cloning technology to create identical human clones to be used in a variety of ways. These near perfect look-alikes can be used as stand-ins for top government leaders and elected officials, or sent to perform secret spy missions and dangerous acts of espionage.

Marshall explains that the public never sees any of this because all cloning activity takes place many levels down in deep underground military bases on government-owned property, with highly restricted access. World leaders won't even acknowledge the existence of these deep underground military bases, hundreds of which are built at strategic points all over the world, therefore, they are never called upon to explain to the public about what really goes on down there.

Marshall remembers visiting secret military bases as a young child, though he didn't realize that he was a clone at the time, since clone bodies feel as real as real. It wasn't until Marshall was much older that he was given a tour of the grow rooms, a deep level underground of entire floors where human clones are grown in the dark, suspended in water, in stacked glass tubes. Marshall reports that the grow rooms are dark, dirty, and reek of the smell of urine. He explains that elite scientists usually create a series of the same clones at a time, selecting the best and disposing of the rest, since each body requires only 5 months and 30 bucks to reach full completion.

Marshall further explains that there are many kinds of cloning technology used to grow different types of clones.

In replication cloning, top-secret scientists create the ideal conditions in the lab for new life to grow, resulting in a perfectly formed baby clone. However, this process is time-consuming, as the baby clone will still need to grow and develop as any other human baby.

Instead, duplication cloning is preferred, whereby manipulating certain gene mutations, clone bodies can be quickly grown to full maturity in a matter of months, and can be used immediately.

An example of duplication cloning can be seen in the 2005 futuristic scifi thriller, The Island, where wealthy sponsors invest millions of dollars in the care and feeding of their clones, who live in an isolated compound, unaware that they are clones created for the sole purpose of organ harvesting.

However, in reality, clone organs are grown too fast, according to Marshall, and are not viable for use in organ transplant. What's more, he claims the science of human cloning is deeply flawed, with serious side effects, as clone behavior tends to be unpredictable and erratic, with little impulse control.

This can be seen in the 1982 scifi classic, Blade Runner, by director Ridley Scott, where special police operatives or blade runners, are used to hunt and extinguish replicants, genetically engineered workers so perfectly designed, as to be indistinguishable from real humans. In an early scene, a blade runner attempts to administer the "Voight-Kampff" test to Leon Kowalski, a suspected runaway replicant. The test consists of a series of hypothetical questions designed to provoke an emotional response. When Leon becomes frustrated by his inability to understand the test questions, he reaches for a gun, and shoots the blade runner dead.

According to Marshall, replicant Leon displays typical clone behavior. When confronted with what they don't understand, clones panic and react with violence. For that reason, all clones seen in public require special minders, or handlers to travel with them and monitor their behavior. This is why it is common to see politicians, surrounded by their private aides and advisors, as well as famous celebrities, flanked by personal assistants, as part of their entourage.

Apparently even Dolly, the cloned sheep, suffered serious side effects from the flawed science of cloning. Soon after news of the successful experiment in cloning was released, Norwegian daily newspaper Dagbladet headlined "Dolly is Eating Herself to Death", claiming that Dolly the sheep could not stop eating and was more than twice the size of her litter mates.

Marshall claims that news articles, like the cloning of Dolly the sheep, are purposely released as a way to gauge public reaction and encourage tolerance to the issue of human cloning, even though doctors and scientists around the world agree that cloning technology is untested, unsafe and morally unacceptable. Donald Marshall calls for a global ban on all human cloning experimentation.

To Be Human

In the 2009 scifi drama Moon, actor Sam Rockwell plays astronaut Sam Bell, who, in the futuristic world of 2035, is responsible for maintaining operations at Sarang, a remote mining facility located on the far side of the moon. Bell looks forward to returning home as he nears the end of a three-year solitary stint mining and shipping Helium-3, an alternative fuel used on Earth. However, when Bell accidentally crashes his lunar rover into a harvester and is rendered unconscious, the onboard system computer, GERTY, believing Bell to be dead, activates another astronaut, sleeping in hibernation, to replace him. Bell manages to survive the crash and, returning to the space facility, finds that the new astronaut activated to replace him is his identical clone.

In time, the two men discover that they are both clones of the original Sam Bell, manufactured to avoid hiring costly new astronauts. They find that they are only copies of the original Sam Bell, complete with detailed memories of his life, loves and family back home on Earth. The film asks us to consider: What does it mean to be human?

This question is difficult to answer since, according to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, it can be hard to tell if you are a clone or not, since as a clone, your body, memories, and feelings seem real as real. He claims to have been an unwilling participant in top-secret cloning projects since he was a young child. He states that all world governments have engaged in covert human cloning for many, many decades. He reports that he was cloned by members of a powerful organization known as the Illuminati.

Marshall explains that he was activated as a clone against his will numerous times and forced to attend secret meetings in cloning centers, located in deep underground military bases. He says that members of the Illuminati feel that they can use your clone in any way they choose since they believe that clones are not natural-born humans, and therefore, have no human rights.

In truth, many people don't realize the fact that they don't actually own their DNA. As of 2013, the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office have assigned the ownership of a variety of human genetic codes to private corporations and universities in the United States.

According to editor Mike Adams of NaturalNews.com, more than 4,000 human genes so far, up to 20% of our complete genetic code is owned by someone else. The corporation that owns the most patents, Incyte, a biopharmaceutical company based in Delaware, owns patents on over 2,000 human genetic codes. While most people would not be willing to sell their DNA, it is now legal for dozens of private corporations to claim ownership over every cell in our bodies, and those claims would be completely upheld if challenged in a U.S. Court of Law.

One can only wonder what the future will hold, if private corporations have the legal permission to use DNA to clone any member of the population for their own purpose.

According to Donald Marshall, human cloning is immoral, and needs to be stopped, as it is in direct violation of our inherent human rights.

To Sleep, Never to Dream: REM - Driven Consciousness Transfer

James Cameron's 2009 scifi film Avatar is set in the year 2154, in which humans, having depleted Earth's natural resources, travel in space to colonize Pandora, a lush habitable moon orbiting a gas giant in the Alpha Centauri star system, in order to mine the valuable mineral unobanium. Pandora, whose atmosphere is poisonous to humans, is inhabited by the Na'vi, a race of 10-foot tall, blue-skinned humanoids, who live in harmony with nature and worship a mother goddess called Eywa.

To explore Pandora, scientists create genetically-engineered Na'vi-human hybrids called Avatars, which are surrogate bodies that look and move like the indigenous Na'vi of Pandora, but are actually uploaded using the mind of a human in a remote location. In this way, Avatars are safe to be attacked, even killed, without any actual harm coming to the controller, since their real bodies are never in any danger.

Many futurists predict that this type of mind uploading will someday be possible, where information, memories and experiences can be downloaded from one brain and then transferred into another. According to the science editors of the Genetic Literacy Project, however, "mind uploading won't work because consciousness can't be transferred".

Not true, according to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, who says that there is no need to look to the future for mind uploading; the future is already here.

Marshall explains that when he goes to bed at night, his consciousness is stolen while he sleeps and is held hostage until his body wakes up. Known as R.E.M-Driven Consciousness Transfer, Marshall claims that elite scientists use this top-secret technology to transfer his individual consciousness from his residence in Eastern Canada, into his identical clone at a cloning center hundreds of miles away.

He maintains that this consciousness transfer happens almost every night, even though his real body never leaves the room, and continues to sleep through the night. Once his real body eventually wakes up, however, his clone body drops limp. Marshall says that all goes black and, as he wakes up, his consciousness quickly returns to his real body.

It might seem unbelievable, but Marshall claims that covert experiments in genetic engineering and human cloning have been conducted by Illuminati scientists in deep, underground military bases for decades.

Marshall says that he was an unwilling participant in secret cloning experimentation since early childhood. Growing up with a seemingly normal family, Marshall was forced to lead a double life, spending his nights trapped at the cloning center, where he was held against his will by top-secret technology.

Marshall claims this consciousness transfer can only take place once the brain has fully entered the REM sleep cycle. He explains that once you begin to dream, they can steal your consciousness and bring you wherever they want.

REM or Rapid Eye Movement sleep has, since its discovery, been closely associated with dreaming. REM sleep is defined as "a unique phase of sleep characterized by random movements of the eyes, low muscle tone throughout the body, and the propensity of the sleeper to dream vividly".

As Marshall reports, "I go to sleep at night, and an hour later, I open my eyes to find myself, naked, on a stainless steel rack, at a cloning center in Western Canada". Disorientated at first, Marshall looks around to find himself lying in a room filled with computers, one nearby is monitoring his brain wave patterns. Marshall explains that a green light on a control panel will light up to indicate when the subject has entered REM sleep. Then, he says, "workers there just push a button and you open your eyes, in the clone zone".

According to Marshall, members of the Illuminati have clones and attend the cloning center at night. While their real bodies are at home, sleeping, they sit in the stands of an arena the size of a hockey stadium, and watch disgusting things done to innocent people.

When their real body wakes up at home, the clones slump down in the seat and workers come to haul them out on a hand truck. Immediately, someone new takes their place. Marshall says it's like that, people in and out, coming and going, all night long.

When not in use, the clones are stored many levels deep underground, where they sleep on stainless steel racks, intubated with feeding tubes down their throats, supplying them with a liquid nutritional supplement. The clones are monitored and cared for, while they wait for their turn to be activated.

For some reason, Marshall explains, once your real body wakes up and comes out of REM sleep, your consciousness immediately returns to your real body. He says that it can be easy to get injured because sometimes when you wake up in real life, your clone suddenly drops limp and falls on the concrete floor of the stadium. For that reason, everyone usually stays seated in the stands, Marshall continues, because no one ever knows when their real body will wake up and deactivate the clone.

Marshall claims that there are thousands of Illuminati members being activated at different time zones, in deep, underground military bases all over the world; the level of organization involved is staggering.

Marshall claims that he is often asked to explain how the consciousness transfer works, to which he answers that he doesn't know how it works, although he imagines that there must be some way to block it.

He has set his alarm to go off at short intervals to wake him throughout the night, hoping to prevent REM sleep, but Marshall found that eventually, he still fell deeply asleep.

He has even tried to stay awake as long as possible which, Marshall says, only works for several days before the body just shuts down. In that case, he claims he's then stuck at the cloning center even longer, while his body catches up on the lost hours of sleep.

Marshall says that he has experimented by going to bed after taking alcohol or prescription medication, hoping that it might interfere with the consciousness transfer. Marshall reports, however, that he was still brought to the cloning center anyway, feeling drugged or drunk, even though, strangely enough, the clone never consumed any drugs or alcohol.

Others have asked Marshall why he can't just move somewhere far away, to which he explains that moving would be of no use; there is no distance limit to prevent the consciousness transfer. He says they have told him at the cloning center that they will find him wherever he goes. Marshall claims that he could even move to Antarctica and they'd still activate him and bring him to the cloning center.

Others suggest that Marshall is just dreaming and that the experiences he describes are simply vivid dreams.

Marshall replies that what he experiences at the cloning center feel nothing like a dream; the details are as clear as real-life experiences, and time passes as slowly as time passes in real life. What's more, when you wake up, it's not like remembering a dream, he says, but more like remembering the events from the previous day.

Marshall claims that his mission in life is to alert the public about REM consciousness transfer, so they learn the truth about exactly what goes on in deep underground military bases around the world. He says that he will never stop until all the people trapped there are freed and all the cloning centers are permanently shut down forever.

Life... Only Better

What if you could fulfill any fantasy you ever had, do whatever you want, be whoever you want from the comfort and safety of your home?
In fact, Why even leave the house at all if you can just send a surrogate instead? asks the 2009 scifi thriller Surrogates. Set in the year 2045, when most of the population employ enhanced human-looking androids to engage the world in their place.

Virtual Self, Inc., the global manufacturer of Virtual Reality products promises "Life... only better". Through the use of surrogates, humans are given the option to work and play without the risk of injury or disease. Can you imagine having perfect looks without plastic surgery or going to the gym? By controlling their surrogates while plugged into hi-tech STEM chairs, the operators can become anyone they want from the comfort and safety of home.

While the fantasy of escaping into a virtual world can be compelling, the reality of engaging in a simulated environment, while wearing a clunky helmet, attached by a thick cable to a computer is awkward at best and does not create a lifelike experience for the user.

There is no need for any special helmet and gear, though, because according to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, escaping into another reality is exactly what thousands of Illuminati members from around the world do every night when they go to sleep. Known as R.E.M-Driven Consciousness Transfer, Marshall claims that when he goes to sleep at night, his consciousness is stolen and held hostage until he wakes up the next day.

Marshall maintains that elite scientists use this top-secret technology to clone members of the Illuminati and bring them at night to the cloning center. There they sit in the stands of a large hockey arena and watch disgusting things done to innocent people, while their real bodies are at home, sleeping. In this way, members can indulge every fantasy they can imagine. What's more, there is no possibility of the public ever finding out what goes on in deep underground military bases, so... let the fun begin!

Learning to appreciate your new clone body can, apparently, take some getting used to. Marshall explains that in the beginning, members new to the cloning center often test the limits of their new clone bodies. He reports that clones have built-in pain sensors which can be set from 0 to 10, with total numbness at zero, all the way to full pain reception at a setting of ten. The clones of Illuminati members are usually set to zero and, since they feel no pain, they can do crazy things like jump from tall heights and crash to the floor, destroying their clone in the process. Since they can't feel pain or get hurt, there is no reason not to take risks because their real body is sleeping safely far away. Marshall states that if your clone is destroyed, then all turns to black, but you don't die. Technicians simply transfer your consciousness and you wake up in a new clone, with full memories intact.

Marshall remembers the time he carved up his own arm while he was a pain-numbed clone, just for the experience. Marshall claims that he could feel the vibrations as the knife went through, but it didn't hurt at all. Then for a second, Marshall forgot and thought that he had cut up his own arm. Then he remembered: It's just a clone...

So, now that you have permission to do whatever you want, the real question becomes: what do you want to do?

Marshall states that anything goes at the cloning center, where they do everything and anything you can imagine and more. No perverse act is taboo or off-limits. It seems that they have no shame, for nothing they do seems to embarrass them. The celebrities and world leaders sit and watch people get victimized, raped and tortured for sport, night after night.

Marshall says that it's even difficult to describe some of the acts of perversion he's witnessed there. He surmises that inflicting pain on others makes members of the Illuminati feel powerful and instills a sense of fear in those watching to never talk or step out of line.

For those at the clone zone, every high-octane night is packed with sex, drugs and rock n roll, where attendees are encouraged to be sexually free and indulge every fantasy in the dirt pit of the arena while they all watch. What's more, the fun is videotaped and sent by military satellite to other cloning centers in deep underground military bases all over the world, where it is projected on bigscreens for the viewing pleasure of the global Illuminati.

According to Marshall, these perverse sex parties take place all the time at the clone zone, with attendees coming and going, joining in as soon as their clone is activated. Here in the pit, you can find your favorite celebrities leading double lives as Illuminati sex slaves, ready and willing to service other members, which, he says, tend toward the fat, bald and ugly. It's a downright free-for-all, with some sex slaves so popular and in such high demand, that their clone suffers from wear and tear. In that case, they simply order up a replacement, transfer into the next clone, so they can party all night long.

Marshall maintains that in the beginning, REM-driven cloning technology was used as a convenient way for world leaders, top scientists and military leaders to meet in secret in order to plan and discuss world events. Over time, however, this got boring, so the Illuminati began to clone others; bringing movie stars, artists, musicians, celebrities and sport stars to the cloning center during their dream states, and over time, the acts of depravity got worse and worse.

Marshall reports that if you want to be famous or make it big in Hollywood, you have to agree to come to the cloning center every night and bang the pigs in the pit. There are no exceptions. Most successful actors, models and musicians agree to be sex slaves in order to service members of the Illuminati, who are always looking for fresh, young talent. If you show promise, they will approach you and invite you to join them, with an offer you can't refuse. And if you do refuse, Marshall has seen times when they will take the refusal as an insult and kill you.

At first, the new members are brought to the cloning center about once a week, where they think they've joined a global organization that aspires to maintain social order and contributes much good in the world. They think, as members of the Illuminati, that they're in the power club for the elite, elevated and privileged. Marshall claims that they don't see what else goes on there on different nights. And once the celebs find out what kind of "club" they're in, they wish they weren't famous anymore. Marshall explains that then even famous people don't want to be famous anymore, they just want to stay alive.

According to Marshall, the promise of "Life... only better" as experienced by those trapped at the cloning center, is more like a horrible nightmare in which they pray to wake up.

Gladiators of the Pit

The public never seem to tire of gladiator epics such as the recent Starz cable TV series Spartacus, inspired by the true account of a Thracian warrior who led a major slave uprising against the Roman Republic in 73 B.C.E. The series appealed to loyal fans in the United States and around the world. It was nominated for many prestigious awards, winning the Saturn award in 2011 for Best DVD/Blu-Ray TV Series.

The glorious days of the gladiator are far from over, according to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, who says that the spectacle of fighting to the death is alive and well, and takes place every night in deep underground military bases around the world.

Like Spartacus, Marshall must also battle to the death, only his arena is the dirt pit of the cloning center and his opponents are warriors who never die; if killed, they just get activated into a new clone body.

Marshall claims that he hates to go to sleep at night and open his eyes to find himself standing in the pit, dressed for battle. He knows that he is in for yet another night of sword fighting for the pleasure of this elite crowd of spectators. Marshall maintains that members of the Illuminati attend the cloning center at night, while their real bodies are at home, sleeping. They sit there in the stands of the arena and watch the spectacle of blood-sport, night after night, year after year.

Marshall calls it murder theatre for the rich and famous.

Marshall reports that he is activated against his will and forced to fight, or face torture if he refuses. He says that members of the Illuminati feel that they can use your clone in any way they choose since, they state, that clones are not natural-born humans, and, therefore, have no human rights.

According to Marshall, elite members like to watch the slaughter of clone warriors battle to the death, all of which is videotaped and shared for the enjoyment of others in military bases around the world. They tell themselves that no harm is done since none of this is real.

Nevertheless, Marshall claims that sword fighting in the pit is very disturbing. "You wonder why you didn't swing your sword" explains Marshall "and you look over and you no longer have an arm, it's chopped off at the elbow and spurting blood with every beat of your heart."

Marshall explains that there can be some confusion at first if you think you're in your real body and you look at your bloody stump and think "Oh shit, now I'm an amputee...", before you realize that you're at the cloning center.

What's more, since there is virtually no possibility of the public ever finding out what goes on in deep underground military bases... let the games begin!

On any given night, the center pit recreates the gladiator arena of ancient Rome, the grounds of a Medieval tournament, or even the Samurai battlefields of feudal Japan as spectators sit and watch bloodsports from around the world ordered up for their secret entertainment.

It's time to do or die for gladiators in the pit, where refusing to fight is not an option, and warriors can face brutal punishment for not cooperating. Marshall tells of the time he refused to fight. His opponents skinned him and then rolled his bloody body in the dirt of the pit arena. "Next time," Marshall says "I fought."

As a warrior in the pit, Marshall has battled, won and lost again and again, for as long as there are backup bodies. He claims that on any given night of sword fighting, he can go through multiple bodies at one time, each one being activated right after the other.

Marshall claims to have died many times, as a clone, describing the stages of death by blood loss as feeling drunk for a short time, then incredibly sick, then immobile and finally all turns to black, until he open his eyes in a new body.

Marshall explains that when he wakes up in a new body, he immediately feels what is known as pain echoes, which are physical sensations from the last death he suffered. He describes it as a feeling of intense pain upon first awakening, which begins to lessen in waves until all that remains is some shakiness from body shock. Then, as soon as he recovers, it's back to the battlefield.

Marshall says that he's been sword fighting since he was 5 years old, when they first handed him a short sword called a shoto, pushed him into the pit and told him to fight, saying that he had to grow into a big sword, just keep working and he'll get the sword. Marshall didn't want the sword or to sword fight but they would just chop him on full pain sensors again and again. Marshall remembers the first time they put him in the pit with another kid, and told them to fight. Marshall says he refused and threw down his sword, after which his young opponent hacked him to pieces. Each time, someone would just push him back in the ring, saying block and fight. Over time, Marshall says that blocking and trying to de-limb or decapitate his opponent became second nature to avoid pain of torture.

So began Marshall's sword fighting career, all videotaped and shared for the viewing pleasure of audiences around the world. He says that he remembers the cameras being bigger when he was young, but as he got bigger, the cameras got smaller.

Marshall maintains that for years he was trained by experts in different forms of combat sports including wrestling, fencing, and the martial arts of Japanese sword and spear fighting. He says hated his senseis, where all instruction was reinforced with pain and threat of torture. Marshall claims that over time, he eventually surpassed his teachers, and then they began to throw all types of experts at him, Spanish fencers, Swedish musclemen with 2 handed broadswords, who, Marshall claims, practically cleaved him in two with one stroke. It seemed that everyone wanted to take him down.

Marshall explains that because of his reputation as a musician, he had became legendary among the secret fight clubs located in deep underground military bases world wide. Everyone wanted to meet Marshall, and then beat Marshall. That proved to be difficult, as he had been sword training for most of his life, so he claims that they began to resort to dirty tricks in the pit, like shocking him with electrical current to disable him during a match, or pre-drugging the clone, so once Marshall opened his eyes, he found himself unable to move, let alone fight.

Marshall says they do these things to humiliate him, so celebrities could brag about how they beat him in the ring. Strangely enough, Marshall believes that most of the crowd knew these battles were set up, but still wanted to fight him anyway. Marshall explains that sometimes when he would be struggling to fight under the influence of some drug, he would pretend to be more incapacitated than he really was, so when the celebrity came in close, he would slice off an arm, and then, give him a big chop. Victory was sweet for Marshall, although, he says they always got him back later.

Marshall remembers the time he was told that one well-known celebrity wanted to sword fight him in the ring front of the crowd, but Marshall was told to block, make it look good, and then let the celebrity win. Marshall says he began to fight at first, but soon sliced the celeb's head cleanly off. Afterwards, the celeb retaliated by stabbing him repeatedly in a small private room, while Marshall was in restraints.

Not all the fighting at the clone zone happens in the pit. Today, Marshall is engaged in a different kind of battle, where he fights to alert the public about the deadly brutal games that take place nightly in top-secret military bases around the world. Marshall vows to keep fighting until all cloning centers are shut down permanently.

Luka Magnotta: Canadian Psycho

The world first learned of Luka Magnotta on May 30, 2012, when he was named as a prime suspect in a grisly killing in Montreal, Canada which involved the shipping of human body parts to the headquarters of two political parties. The day before, staffers at the Conservative Party headquarters in Ottawa called police after receiving a package containing a human foot. Ottawa police later intercepted a second package en route to the Liberal Party headquarters containing a human hand. Meanwhile, Montreal police discovered a human torso found in a trash dumpster.

Days before, a video showing a man's murder and dismemberment was uploaded on the internet. The murderer was identified as Magnotta, a 29-year old model and adult film actor from Toronto, while authorities identified the victim as Jun Lin, a 33-year old Chinese national who was studying at Concordia University in Montreal. Police announced that Magnotta left Canada for France on May 26th, sparking an international manhunt which ended June 4th with Magnotta's arrest in an internet cafe in Berlin. On December 23, 2014, Magnotta was found guilty and convicted of first degree murder. He is currently serving a life sentence in Quebec's Archambault Penitentiary with no possibility of parole until 2037.

While media coverage of the case dominated headlines around the world, in fact, Luka Magnotta was even chosen as 2012's Newsmaker of the Year by the Canadian Press, what never was fully explained was: what possible motive did Magnotta have to mail human hands and feet to prominent public officials?

According to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, dismemberment is a form of punishment enacted at cloning facilities in deep underground military bases around the world. In these secure locations, elite members of the Illuminati use top-secret cloning technology to bring unwilling participants to the center to service the members as sex slaves.

Marshall claims clone dismemberment is a common form of punishment he's witnessed many times, designed to demoralize the defiant sex slave and train them to be more compliant. Marshall explains that with just stumps for limbs, its hard to fend off a brutal attack. If you fall in the pit, it's hard to get back up, as you can't use your feet to push off the ground. What's more, its painful when dirt comes into contact with the ends of the stumps.

Marshall maintains that there was even a song written about clone dismemberment. Marshall claims the punk rock band the Misfits attend cloning and talk about it in their

1999 song "Helena" which begins with the lyrics "If I cut off your arms and cut off your legs, would you still love me anyway?" which Marshall explains actually means, "Why must I dismember you in order to love you?"

Marshall says he remembers Magnotta from the same cloning center he attends and says he's talked to him many times. According to Marshall, Magnotta was a pretty boy all the men wanted, but he was a fighter and fought back, so to teach him a lesson, they started to chop his clone hands and feet off. Elite Illuminati members would sit in the stands of the arena and watch the action in the pit filmed and projected on the bigscreen for their sick viewing pleasure.

In order to gain a better understanding of Magnotta's motives, it might be helpful to review the contents of the handwritten notes included with the body parts he mailed to both headquarters of the Federal Conservative and Liberal parties in Ottawa, and two schools in Vancouver.

The Conservative Party of Canada headquarters in Ottawa received a package with a severed foot addressed to Prime Minister Harper and his wife, with the note, "Stephen Harper and Laureen Teskey will know who this is: They fucked up big time!"

Ottawa police intercepted a package containing a human hand at a postal center on the same day before it reached the Liberal Party of Canada headquarters in Ottawa. The note inside read: "You need to speak with Laureen Teskey & her family! Lots to Hide!"

A week later, Vancouver police say a human hand was discovered in a package sent to False Creek Elementary School in Vancouver, with the poem:

"Roses are red,
Violets are blue.
The police will need dental records
To identify you. Bitch."

Hours later the same day, a box with a human foot was found by staff at St. George's School, a private boys school, with a note that read "Die Bitch. Soon"

What was the purpose of sending the notes? What does it all mean?

According to Marshall, Illuminati members all over the world understood why Magnotta sent severed hands and feet to elected officials and school administrators throughout Canada. Since the public is never included in these conversations however, no one ever learns the true meaning behind many news stories.

Marshall claims that in the days before Magnotta's capture, many top public officials at the cloning center were in a state of panic, fearing for their lives.

Once arrested, Magnotta never had the chance to speak to the public, never took the stand or spoke during his criminal trial, so no one had the chance to hear his account of being repeatedly raped and mutilated by top elected officials in his so-called dreams, that had become a living nightmare.

Marshall maintains that the public has a right to know what their elected officials do during the night while the rest of the world sleeps. He calls for an immediate shutdown of all cloning centers and justice for those trapped there.

Severed Feet in the Pacific Northwest: Anyone Missing a Foot?
In 2007, on Jedediah Island in British Columbia, while walking along a beach, a 12-year-old girl stumbled upon a man's sneaker. Looking inside, she found the remains of a human foot.
Six days later and 30 miles away, on Gabriola Island, a couple discovered another foot. The two did not match. They were both right feet.

Five months later, on nearby Valdes Island, forest workers find a third shoe. It was a man's right foot. Nine months after the first foot was found, the caretaker of Kirkland Island found a decomposing foot wearing a woman's right shoe.

Over the period of about a year, seven human feet in sneakers washed ashore in British Columbia and Washington State. After the discovery of the fifth foot, the story began to receive international attention. Theories of serial killers, plane crashes, and tsunami victims became tabloid fodder. Clearly, something grisly was washing ashore. Human feet...

Years later, many questions still remain. In fact, The Mystery of the Disembodied Feet made Time Magazine's Top 10 Unsolved Mysteries, just below the Case of Jack the Ripper and the Zodiac Killer. People are still trying to understand: How can 7 human feet wash ashore in less than a year?

What they do not realize, according to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, is the fact that top-secret experiments in human cloning have been conducted for many decades around the world. Marshall explains that the public never sees this because all cloning activity takes place many levels down in deep underground military bases built on government-owned property with highly restricted access.

Utilizing top-secret cloning technology is the primary way the Illuminati communicate with each other in secret, without any chance of discovery.

Marshall maintains that elite scientists use top-secret cloning technology to transfer his individual consciousness from his residence in Eastern Canada, into his identical clone at a cloning center hundreds of miles away, even though his real body never leaves the room and continues to sleep through the night.

Even though Marshall claims to have attended the same cloning center since he was young, he doesn't know its actual location. He believes that the cloning center is located on the private grounds of a large wildlife nature reserve, somewhere within the province of British Columbia, Canada.

Furthermore, it is possible that the cloning center is located within a 5-hour drive by car from serial killer Robert Pickton's pig farm. Marshall claims that Pickton was a low-level member of the Illuminati, filming the murders of prostitutes under the direction of prominent high-level members. Marshall explains that they arranged to have the murders videotaped and brought to the cloning center, where he was forced to watch each and every video recording of the slayings, which left many there psychologically damaged. A worker at the cloning center would pick up the video tapes immediately after the murders and drive them to the cloning center. Marshall states that he would pretend that he couldn't wait to see the next video and would pester them as to when it would be available. Marshall said one time someone told him to relax, that the Pickton pig farm was a "5-hour drive" from the cloning center. Marshall says he knew then that he could use that information in the future to determine the location of the cloning center.

Marshall claims that he's been activated into different military bases all over the world, although he says that he wouldn't necessary even know since, he says that all cloning centers look alike. "I could be activated in a base in Russia, and I wouldn't know", although he says he sometimes notices signs written in a different language or notices that the vending machines are designed to accept a different currency.

According to Marshall, there are many deep levels under the arena of the cloning center; levels reserved for the growing and storing of thousands of clone bodies. Marshall maintains that "you don't walk or fly or drive to the cloning center. They grow you there." He explains that a clone never leaves the cloning center; they grow and dispose of you on-site.

Marshall claims to have seen the grow room, where the clones are grown. These rooms are filled with rows and rows of large, glass tubes, double-stacked and filled with water. There the clones develop, floating in the dark. In addition, Marshall says there are also rooms for storage, where stacked stainless steel racks hold thousands of clones. They are fed a nutritional drink through feeding tubes and rest on shelves with a drain at the bottom for urine. There they sleep, fully dressed, waiting to be activated.

Marshall explains that the care and feeding of the clones continues to the arena concourse where concession stands offer real food for the hungry. Marshall reminds us that time spent in the cloning center is in real time, this is no dream, and people get hungry there after so many hours and need more than a liquid nutritional drink. According to Marshall, they eat a lot of hot dogs and french fries in the clone zone, where even health conscious celebrities enjoy a late night hot dog. They figure, who cares? it's not my real body anyway...

While he claims that there are cloning centers built in deep underground military bases all over the world, Marshall says his cloning center is reserved for only very elite members of the Illuminati and come with special privileges, such as the arena is built above ground, allowing access to fresh air and natural light, as opposed to those built deep underground.

What's more, since only the very famous attend this center, all activities are videotaped and sent by military satellite to the other cloning centers around the world. And even though Marshall has been activated here nightly since he was very small, he was only allowed to go outside on two different occasions. "I looked around," Marshall remembers, "I saw nothing but grass, a dirt road, and trees. No sign of any civilization, no air traffic, no smoke on the horizon, nothing..."

And forget trying to search the location using Google Earth. "They blocked it," says Marshall, who said he was at the cloning center when this happened. "They showed us a satellite view of the cloning center on the bigscreens in the arena and then they just masked the center by overlaying images of nearby trees, so it just looks like more trees. The center completely disappeared. They did it in front of everyone."

Marshall maintains that cloning centers are driven by reals, powered by clones, who do all the work, maintenance and clean-up. These clones are stored on-site and activated to work at the cloning center during their dreams, without any pay or compensation...and you thought your job sucked.

Marshall claims that there are a few "reals that run stuff, but you barely ever see them. They stay out of harm's way because clones can malfunction and attack at any time."

While the "reals" need to always be careful, there are safeguards in place should a clone start to display erratic behavior. Marshall explains that each clone has a built-in auto shut-off and can be quickly deactivated. What's more, in the case of an emergency, they can utilize a mass shutdown feature and shut down all the clones with the push of a button.

Marshall explains that all clones start degrading and need to be replaced from time to time depending on how much wear-and-tear is inflicted on the clone. In other words, if you drive it like a rental, many back-up clones will be needed, but those that just sit and watch will need only about one replacement a year.

But either way, clone disposal is an on-going chore at the cloning center, where human clones are disposed daily, some due to degradation, some due to lost battles in the pit and, according to Marshall, even too much sex can ruin a clone.

One convenient method of disposing of many clone bodies is to toss them into a chipper, which Marshall describes as a huge garbage disposal set up on a big dumpster.

This is where they toss in the discarded clones and gears grind them down. Marshall says he doesn't know what happens to the leftover waste material.

When one considers the number of deep underground military bases around the world, all disposing of many clones on a daily basis, the scale of this clean-up operation is staggering.

So, could it be that The Mystery of the Disembodied Feet could be explained with the realization that there is a secret cloning center located in the province of British Columbia? Is it possible that someone didn't bother to remove the shoes from the clones before tossing them in the chipper? That way, the rest of the clone was crushed, leaving behind the shoes, with the feet still inside, and someone just dumped a bunch of sneaker-clad feet off the coast, where they slowly started to resurface, one by one by one...

Sound too far-fetched? Let's re-examine the findings of the official investigation as to why human feet suddenly began washing up on remote beaches in British Columbia and Washington state.

The first foot was discovered by a 12-year-old girl on Jedediah Island off the coast of Vancouver. Six days later, another foot washed ashore on nearby Gabriola Island.

Authorities were mystified. "It was a regular foot with the skin intact," Royal Canadian Mounted Police Cpl. Garry Cox told Alberni Valley Times, "It didn't appear to be there too long because it wasn't that decomposed" Cox told reporters from the Vancouver Sun that "Finding one foot is like a million-to-one odds, but to find two is crazy."

Then came the third... discovered by beachcombers on February 8, 2007 on the east side of Valdez Island, just south of Gabriola. The finding of the third foot made it the first time in forensic history three such discoveries had ever been made so close to each other.

Soon, this strange news story caught fire and quickly spread around the world, causing many to speculate as to the possible origin of the feet. Many theories were floated as to why feet were washing ashore, from belonging to missing fishermen, drowning victims or victims of a plane crash, to the work of drug dealers, serial killers, human traffickers, or even organized crime using the coastline as a body dump. And strangely enough, while early reports referred to the feet as severed, this would soon change to more general terms, e.g., mysterious feet, disembodied feet, detached and even, disarticulated feet.

Within four months, two more feet would surface, and the story began to receive international media attention, with major headlines from newspapers in Australia and South Africa. The case of the feet-on-the-beach were called astounding and almost beyond explanation, especially when no other body parts turned up.

Less than a month later, a fifth foot surfaced, discovered by two hikers, floating in water near Westham Island. People wanted to know: What was happening here?

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police decided to hold a press conference in Delta, B.C. a month later to announce that they had successfully matched two of the feet to the same missing person. A right foot found on Valdes Island on February 8th and a left foot found on June 16th on Westham Island were determined to belong to the same male. What's more, RCMP Constable Annie Linteau said that there was no evidence that the feet had even been severed, and that it looked a "natural process of separation," even though earlier reports claimed that the feet appeared to have been deliberately severed with the bones "cut clean across".

Less than two years later, six more feet would surface from such places as Whidbey Island in Washington state to floating in water off the Vancouver Marina. Reports continued to claim the feet had articulated naturally due to the water.

It wouldn't be until February 18th, 2012 when the British Columbia Coroner's Office announced that they had cracked the Case of the Disembodied Feet when they were able to identify one foot as belonging to a Vancouver resident who had been missing since 1987.

These feet, said the Coroner's Office, most likely belonged to suicides, some of whom jumped from bridges spanning the powerful Fraser River, which flows into the Pacific Ocean at Vancouver. Once the bodies sink, the police explained, it begins to decompose, limbs begin to separate and marine life begins to feed. "It's very explainable", said coroner Steve Fonseca, who worked each case, "The unusual nature of this is that the feet were found in a very short period of time." He goes on to claim that many suicides go unreported due to the shame involved or uncertainty over cause of death.

Fonseca told the Huffington Post Canada that feet are often found because the shoes of the victims are often buoyant. When the body decomposes the shoes, as well as the remains inside, float to the surface. "I don't think there's a soul out there that doesn't check every shoe they find on a beach," he said.

There you have the official explanation of this puzzling case by the B.C. Coroner's office, that is, that the feet belong to suicides that jumped to their death from bridges, where their feet naturally disarticulate at the ankle due to being submerged in water. What's more, finding feet-on-the-beach is more common than one would think, in fact, is there anyone who doesn't feel compelled to look for a missing foot while walking on the beach? I know I do!

This is why, according to Marshall, top-secret government crimes never reach the public. As in "The Case of the Disembodied Feet", all evidence is explained away by a vast network of experts, sold as truth by the media, and then quickly forgotten.

Marshall claims that nothing will change unless the public demands to know the truth about what really goes on in top-secret underground military bases. He calls for an immediate shut down of all cloning centers worldwide.

The Secret of Vril

Marshall claims that there is a secret that has been kept by members of the Illuminati for more than 70 years, a secret of such great importance, as to effect the lives of every man, woman and child on the face of the planet. Marshall states that his mission in life is to share this secret with the world, so that all can know the truth and plan for the future. In order to fully understand this secret, it will be necessary to return to the events of Postwar Germany, following the end of World War I, where, in 1923, Hitler was named the leader of the new Nazi party. Following a failed attempt to overthrow the federal government, Hitler was arrested for treason. While awaiting trial in Landsberg prison, he read Bulwer-Lytton's 1871 novel: Vril: The Power of the Coming Race about a master-race of beings who call themselves the Vril-ya. They claim to be the descendants of the inhabitants of ancient Atlantis, with access to an extraordinary force called Vril, an unlimited source of energy that supplies all their needs and can be controlled at will. Hitler believed the novel to be true and once made Chancellor of Germany, he would send teams of spelunkers into caves and mines all over Europe searching for the Vril-ya. He dispatched regular expeditions to Asia, especially Tibet, where Nazi explorers made significant connections with influential Tibetan lamas, who had expert knowledge about the underground tunnel and cavern systems around the world. Legend was these Tibetan lamas guarded a secret entrance to the Inner World, known as the Red Door, hidden within the Potala palace in the mountain city of Lhasa. Once a Nazi-Tibetan alliance was formed, the lamas agreed to share with them that for centuries, they had been helping to hide an indigenous race of lizard living deep within the planet since prehistoric times, known as Vril lizards. It seems that these lizards knew the location of an abandoned military base dating back from the time of Atlantis, filled with ancient aircraft, weaponry and technology hidden within the tunnels and caverns of Antarctica. The lizards had no use for the tech, but they were willing to trade for something else they wanted. The lizards were carnivorous and preferred to consume fresh human flesh. And so, a deal was made. The Nazis got the ancient Atlantean tech and sold out the human race.

But according to Marshall, this is not the first time Vril lizards have interacted with humans. He claims that for centuries, royalty, powerful heads of state and trusted religious leaders around the world have kept a secret pact with the malevolent lizards. World leaders would receive valuable resources buried deep within the planet, such as gemstones, gold and other minerals and, in exchange, these leaders would conceal all evidence of the Vril from the surface population, so no one would learn of their existence. In addition to helping them hide, Vril lizards required that they be provided with a steady supply of humans to consume.

However, Marshall says that keeping the Secret of Vril not only refers to hiding the lizards and denying their existence, but also refers to an even bigger secret. Being a parasitic race, Vril lizards have the unique biological ability to invade the human body, take over the brain, and by accessing their memories, they can look, act and seem human in every way. After a period of recovery, the human is able to return to its normal activities, except the brain is now under the complete control of the Vril parasite.

Much like the 1956 scifi classic The Invasion of the Body Snatchers, in which the inhabitants of a small California town are replaced, one by one, with identical copies of themselves, Marshall warns us that we've already been invaded, we just don't know it. Marshall explains that Vril lizards are essentially parasites, and like all parasites, have a biological drive to invade, dominate and take over. Marshall refers to this biological takeover as "bodysnatching" and explains that the human victim dies once the Vril lizard takes over.

Marshall says that with the help of the Illuminati, bodysnatching Vril lizards have infiltrated all levels of society and hold positions of power all over the world.

This is done in order to remove key people and replace them with Vril hosts. Marshall states that Vril hosts can be found everywhere, in all levels of government, business, banking, military, law enforcement, journalism, media and entertainment.

Just how is this bodysnatching process accomplished?

According to Marshall, Vril lizards have a natural proboscis at the top of their head, from which they eject a type of thick cerebrospinal fluid. When this fluid enters the human, usually through the eye and from there, to the brain, a chemical transformation immediately begins to take place. The victim essentially dies, leaving the lizard parasite in complete control of all brain function. After a period of recovery, the Vril host can return to its' regular activities, looking, acting and seeming completely normal.

Marshall reports that the Illuminati even hold a special bodysnatching ceremony to celebrate this Vril lizard takeover. Guests watch as the victim, conscious, though usually bound, is restrained and forced to sit still, until the lizard transfer is complete. Marshall claims to have seen this sick bodysnatching ceremony many times.

Marshall claims that the Illuminati bodysnatch many people, in every country, all over the world. They sometimes choose victims from incarcerated prisoners or longterm patients in hospitals and medical facilities; anywhere they have easy access to people, they will bodysnatch and replace them with a Vril host.

Anyone can be bodysnatched and, according to Marshall, he's even seen this done to young children. Furthermore, Marshall claims that all loyal families within the Illuminati are expected to offer one of their children to be replaced by a Vril host. They comply since there is the unspoken threat that should they prove to be difficult, they can be bodysnatched at any time. Marshall says he has even seen bodysnatching done with just a couple of guys holding someone down while the victim is screaming, no ceremony required.

According to Marshall, the Illuminati utilize this unique parasitic ability of the lizards to further their own dark agenda. They are able to remove those resistant to their goals without anyone even noticing, and with Vril bodysnatching, the troublesome person is now replaced with an Illuminati spy, infinitely loyal and willing to report back everything they see and hear.

It is crucial to understand Vril lizard psychology, since Marshall maintains that all Vril lizards want to be human. They admire human intelligence and the beautiful human form. They want to crawl out from deep underground into the light and walk unnoticed among humanity. However, they are not human and have no capacity to feel human emotions. In fact, as malevolent lizards, they enjoy causing pain and suffering. Marshall reveals that Vril hosts are responsible for much of the senseless crimes and spree killings that occur. However, Vril hosts are excellent mimics and make convincing humans. And since there is no way to detect the presence of a Vril host, except with an MRI scan of the brain, most members of the Illuminati pretend to like the lizards and are friendly to Vril hosts, since no one is ever certain if they are talking to a host or human.

According to Marshall, prehistoric Vril lizards have been bodysnatching humans throughout history, even during ancient times. He claims that they are, in part, responsible for the destruction of the island of Atlantis, where legend tells lived an advanced civilization that existed in the Atlantic ocean. Marshall reports that Vril hosts had bodysnatched and infiltrated their way into positions of power throughout Atlantean culture, where they destroyed themselves with advanced weaponry, causing cataclysmic flooding and earthquakes.

Marshall asserts that Vril lizards often infiltrate human societies, by targeting individuals in the ruling class, royalty or priesthood. Once they are in positions of power, Vril lizards attempt to convince the humans to worship them as either gods or demons; something to be feared and obeyed without question.

As gods, Vril lizards would demand human sacrifices as a show of loyalty and devotion. In these cultures, it was considered an honor to be bodysnatched and chosen to become a god. The people didn't understand the biological nature of the takeover of the brain, and thought it was some kind of mystical or magical transformation.

As demons, Vril lizards were deeply feared. Old legends warn travelers against going into certain haunted caves and mountains, and to beware when darkness falls as this was the time when demons would creep about, stealing babies and livestock. When Vril lizards would bodysnatch a victim, the person was later said to be demon possessed and various means would be attempted to drive the demons out.

Many cultures around the world attempted to limit Vril lizard infestation, and Marshall says most, at some point, "start sharpening pointy sticks". For example, The Hopi Indian culture successfully drove off Vril lizards, while the ancient Anasazi Indians of New Mexico, were forced to leave behind their elaborate cliff dwellings in order to relocate far away from nearby Vril infested caves.

Throughout history, the lizards stayed hidden underground, in dark caves and tunnels, trying to avoid discovery. Some royal families kept Vril lizards as pets, and used them to instill fear in those not showing the proper loyalty to the crown. Some world religious leaders also knew of the lizards, had secret alliances with them, and agreed to help them.

In the 1940's, a secret pact was forged between the Nazis and the lizards making them mutual allies. Conditions of the pact required directing tremendous resources to assist the Vril lizards, including the building of deep, underground military bases worldwide. This would allow the lizards a way to interact directly with humans which, in turn, would permit the massive, government sponsored bodysnatching so prevalent around the world today.

If we can assume that all this is true, that bodysnatching malevolent lizards have infiltrated human society and are replacing us, one by one, without raising any alarm, one might ask: Wouldn't someone try to tell people and save humanity?

According to Marshall, President Ronald Reagan tried to warn the public on numerous occasions from 1985 to1988. In an important speech to the United Nation General Assembly on September 21st, 1987, at the height of the Star Wars space race with Russia, Reagan mused, "In our obsession with the antagonisms of the moment, we often forget how much unites all the members of humanity. Perhaps we need some outside, universal threat to make us recognize this common bond. I occasionally think how quickly our differences would vanish if we were facing an alien threat from outside of this world. And yet I ask: is not an alien force already among us? What could be more alien to the universal aspirations of our people then war and the threat of war?"

Marshall states that the Illuminati forgave Reagan's comments at first, but when he continued to talk about aliens living among us, they "blew his mind and called it Alzheimer's".

Marshall encourages us to remember the ultimate Vril lizard agenda, which he claims has remained unchanged for centuries: to infiltrate human society and take over the planet. Marshall warns us to act quickly to spread the news, as anyone can be bodysnatched. As the ending from "The Invasion of the Body Snatchers" warns us: They're already here. You're next.

E.T. Phone Home: Unlimited talk, text and no roaming charges
Steven Spielberg's E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial is a 1982 scifi blockbuster about a lonely boy who befriends an extraterrestrial stranded on Earth. The story begins in a California forest, where a group of alien botanists land their spaceship in order to collect plant samples, but when government agents appear on the scene, the aliens flee, leaving one of their own behind. Ten-year-old Elliot discovers the alien in the family tool shed and decides to help hide the creature in his bedroom. The E.T. "phones home" by building a makeshift communication device using toys, appliances and other household objects to send a call for help to his home planet.
However, one could say, no need to phone home when you already are home...

According to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, we are not alone, but secretly share the planet with an ancient race of aliens, who have occupied Earth for many millions of years, and could hardly be regarded as alien, considering their ancestors have thrived here since prehistoric times.

Unknown to the public, this race of intelligent lizard, known as the Vril, have built secret colonies deep underground, in essence, living a parallel existence to humanity, and rarely coming into direct contact with them.

Scientists agree that geological evidence around the world support the theory of an extinction event some 66 million years ago that extinguished the life of a wide range of plants and animals on the planet. Many agree that the impact of a massive asteroid caused world-wide devastation. Marshall claims that the Vril survived this event due to the fact that they lived so far below the surface. He says the lizards still remain there today, as they have for centuries, in deep tunnels, caves, and caverns all around the world.

Over eons of time, Vril lizards successfully evolved to life deep underground, Marshall explains, since they do not require much oxygen to breathe and are not affected by the intense pressure found at deep subterranean levels. Essentially diggers, they use their claws to create vast networks of tunnels criss-crossing large territories deep underground.

The Vril form highly organized colonies, that range in size from relatively small to those with masses of lizards collectively working together to support the colony. With millions of years in existence, colonies of Vril lizards can be found all over the world under almost every landmass on Earth.

Due to a complete absence of light, the Vril depend on sonar to see and use sound to navigate their underground world. With a language consisting primarily of clicks and whistles, the Vril have secretly lived for centuries, in total darkness, deep underground.

There is virtually no possibility for the public to ever encounter a Vril lizard, since the lizards are not allowed to surface and live completely enclosed in deep underground military bases which, officially, do not even exist. Constructed on government-owned land with restricted access, one would need a high security clearance to even come within range of an underground base.

According to Marshall, the Vril are evil and malevolent by nature. He says that they think of the planet as belonging to them with humans as merely surface grazers. Marshall claims to have had numerous encounters with the ancient lizards since childhood. As an unwilling participant in top-secret government black projects, Marshall explains that he was forced to attend secret meetings in cloning centers located in deep underground military bases. Here, members of the Illuminati privately mingle with the Vril and allow the lizards direct access to humans.

In these bases, the Vril live a life of privilege, where they are catered to and their every desire indulged. Marshall reports that on many occasions, he has even seen organized hunts arranged for their pleasure, as the Vril are aggressive predators whose favorite prey is fresh human.

Marshall tells how in ancient times, Vril lizards would emerge from underground late at night to hunt. Since they cannot tolerate sunlight, night was an ideal time for packs of Vril to raid nearby communities. Marshall explains that the lizards have been stealing humans and animals from the surface for millions of years.

Now that the lizards have moved up in the world and no longer need to hunt for survival, it seems that they sometimes miss the good old days of hunting in the wild so, to accommodate the creatures, governments the world over recreate the same conditions in deep underground military bases.

Marshall has witnessed this many times in the arena theater at the cloning center, where the lights will dim, to allow for the Vril's sensitive night vision. Some poor unfortunate soul is released into the pit, scared and confused. Slowly, a pack of Vril lizards advance forward, while the victim drops and curls up, terrified at the sight of the deadly monsters. The lizards then go into attack frenzy as they swarm, bite and drain the victim dry.

According to Marshall, Vril lizards have a toxic saliva , that has evolved over the centuries to bring down big game. On a human scale, it's poison overkill; one bite and you drop.

Marshall claims that there's even a song written about this by legendary rock band Nirvana. In their 1991 song "Drain You", a victims's deathly high-pitched screech can be heard at 2.32. Marshall claims this sound is commonly heard as Vril toxins speed through the victim's body just before dropping dead. Although Marshall says sometimes it's just a silent scream, as the victim's muscles seize up in seconds; no time to even scream...

Incidentally, Marshall also explains that the strange squeaks heard in the song at 1:46 are not caused by a rubber duck toy, as reported, but are the recorded sounds from young Vril hatchlings.

One might ask: Why would any world government agree to this?

Marshall maintains that, in order to fully understand why, it would be necessary to return to the events surrounding World War II where, throughout the 1930's, German Chancellor Adolf Hitler sent teams of Nazi explorers to scour the planet, in search of a secret entrance to the fabled inner Earth where, he believed, lived an ancient race of Supermen known as the Vril-ya. In time, the Nazis forged an alliance with Tibetian monks, who understood exactly what they were searching for and, deep within their fortress monasteries, introduced them to the prehistoric Vril.

According to Marshall, the lizards knew where a treasure trove of Atlantean technology lay forgotten over many centuries. They were willing to disclose the secret location, for a price. In exchange for the ancient technology, the Nazis agreed to build underground structures where the lizards could interact with humans and, in addition, they would provide the Vril with fresh supplies of humans to terrorize and consume.

While the public will most likely never get the chance to see a Vril lizard, members of the Illuminati the world over have seen the Vril on numerous occasions. Protected by the terms of a secret alliance, the Vril no longer hide in the shadows, but are welcomed to interact with humans in deep underground military bases all over the world. This is where members meet in top-secret cloning centers to plan future events and watch disgusting things done to innocent people. There, the prehistoric lizards' sick fantasies are indulged with unlimited freedoms and special privileges. Marshall reports that the terms of this secret alien pact would extend in time to include the involvement of all members of the Illuminati in nearly every country of the world.

Marshall explains that only high-level Illuminati members are allowed to meet them, since once you learn the Secret of Vril, you are bound to honor the terms of the pact; there is virtually no way out. Forget about alerting the public. Seems a quick introduction to the fearsome creatures have turned many a potential whistleblower silent. Marshall maintains that fear of the lizards are instinctual to humans, with many needing to be medicated just to tolerate their presence.

Donald Marshall believes that the public has a right to know about Vril lizards and speaks out to expose this alien pact that has secretly enslaved humanity for decades.

Aliens Among Us: They're here...
The Invasion is a 2007 scifi thriller and the latest film adaptation of director Don Siegel's classic 1956 Invasion of the Body Snatchers, in which alien spores arrive on Earth to form pods that grow and replace humans with exact copies of themselves. In this version, the alien spores contaminate a space shuttle as it returns to Earth. The shuttle crashes, scattering debris from Dallas, Texas to Washington, D.C., spreading the alien virus to all who come into contact with it. Soon, news reports of a fast-acting flu spread throughout the capital, with the sick in numbering epidemic proportions.

Soon after, Psychiatrist Dr. Carole Bennell begins to notice a change in the behavior of those around her, from a patient who claims that "my husband isn't my husband anymore", to her own son who notices that his dad is "different".

Later, Bennell witnesses a fatal car accident, where a woman is struck and killed moments after running through lanes of stopped traffic, pounding on car windows in an attempt to warn others saying that "They're coming...! We got to warn people...!" When she reaches Bennell's car, the woman screams, "They're among us. They're here..."

The idea of an alien invasion is a common theme in science fiction films and novels, involving aliens landing on Earth, killing or abducting people, fighting and defeating it's military forces, and then destroying major cities. The aliens come from many places, from the depths of hell to the center of the planet, or even the distant future. The aliens usually arrive to steal, kill human life and destroy the planet's resources. In some cases, the aliens even take human form, allowing them to move freely throughout society and assume command positions in order to fulfill their ultimate purpose: total world domination.

According to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, we are currently under a state of alien invasion, only no one is aware of the attack because they look just like us. He claims that they live among us now, undetected. "They could be your friend, neighbor or coworker. They look human, but they're not..."

We are not alone, Marshall says, but secretly share the planet with a ancient race of intelligent lizard known as the Vril. He maintains that they have occupied Earth for millions of years, living in tunnels, caverns and caves deep underground, making little contact with the surface population. Marshall claims that most world governments have made agreements with the Vril to hide their existence from the people and, in exchange, world leaders are given the opportunity to utilize the lizards in a unique way.

Marshall explains that the Vril are essentially parasites and have the natural ability to invade and steal the brain in a process that Marshall calls bodysnatching.

This begins when the lizard ejects it's quill, containing the brain and spinal cord through a proboscis located at the top of it's head. The quill then enters the eye of the victim, where it travels around the eyeball to a specific location of the brain. Once there, a chemical reaction begins immediately, resulting in the complete parasitic domination of the victim's brain.

According to Marshall, they "stick their spinal cord in your eye and turn you into a walking lizard".

Apparently, the Vril have been using this process to steal bodies for millions of years. Vril bodysnatching has been ritualized and romanticized by various religions around the world, who believed that this allowed the transformation of ordinary mortals into supernatural gods.

Marshall reports that the tremendous rate of bodysnatching currently being practiced is off the scale and could not be possible without the cooperation of governments world-wide; your tax dollars at work...

Marshall claims that the lizards proved to be surprisingly useful to the Illuminati, as a way to replace problem people without the general public even suspecting. Furthermore, Vril hosts are infinitely loyal to the Illuminati, and operate as secret, undercover spies, reporting back everything they see and hear. Hosts are willing to help in any way since, as Marshall says, "They're just happy to be human."

If this sounds too incredible to be true, one can turn to the natural world to find many examples of parasites and parasitic behavior. National Geographic recently published "Mindsuckers: Meet Nature's Nightmare," showing a variety of ways that parasites mind control their hosts, turning them into the walking dead. "Some parasites can alter the behavior of their host in ways that give the parasite a better home, or provide more nutrients, or cause the host to move to a different environment," says Janice Moore, a biologist at Colorado State University in Fort Collins. These masters of mind control manipulate their hosts from within, causing them to act in self-destructive ways that ultimately benefit the parasite.

In the case of the Vril, the primary drive is to invade, infiltrate and take over. Marshall warns that Vril hosts might look human, but are not and would "kill you in an instant, without remorse..."

According to Marshall,Vril hosts are responsible for much of the vicious, senseless crimes reported in the news. They lack compassion and have no capacity to feel.

What's more, Marshall claims that there aren't many ways to detect Vril hosts, since they look and act human in every way. However, he reports that an MRI can detect the irreparable brain damage sustained during the bodysnatching process.

Marshall confirms that there are many Vril hosts in society, pretending to be human, from all walks of life, including world famous rock stars, U.S. senators and other politicians, even some U.N. delegates are actually secret Vril lizards. And don't relax around the guy next door, Marshall claims there's more hosts out there than you think.

Marshall maintains that since anyone can be bodysnatched and turned into a host, no one is safe. He says that Illuminati members are threatened that they will be bodysnatched themselves, should they even attempt to speak out. For that reason, Marshall says that "no one is going to tell you about the Vril, but me".

According to Marshall, the danger of Vril bodysnatching is an urgent global crisis that needs to be exposed. He says they plan to take over the world, one by one by one...

Extraordinary Proof: The Search for the Existence of Vril
In this photo from the 1950's, Spanish surrealist painter, Salvador Dali presents an unknown creature for our consideration while in the background, a patient recovers from surgery in a hospital bed, with head wrapped and eye bandaged.

Dali was well-known for bizarre, arresting artwork and public stunts. However, one can only wonder as to the message delivered in this disturbing photograph; what does it all mean?

Is it possible this shows the artist with the discarded remains of a Vril lizard moments after an act of Vril bodysnatching?

According to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, we share the planet with an ancient race of intelligent lizard that have occupied Earth for millions of years, known as the Vril. Marshall claims that world governments have agreed to hide the lizard's existence, in exchange for the opportunity to utilize their natural ability to invade and steal the brain in a process that he calls bodysnatching.

Marshall explains that the process begins when the lizard ejects it's quill, a sticky material containing the brain and spinal cord through a proboscis at the top of the head. The quill then needs to enter the eye of the victim, and from there travels to the brain, where a chemical takeover immediately begins, resulting in the complete parasitic domination of the brain. Marshall says that the human victim dies in the process and, after a period of recovery, the Vril host can return to its' regular activities, looking, acting and seeming completely normal.

Could this image be photographic evidence of the Vril bodysnatching that Marshall contends secretly takes place in hospitals, military bases and other government facilities all over the world?

American astronomer Carl Sagan once said, "Extraordinary claims require extraordinary proof." In order to substantiate this, we need to ask the question: Where is the proof?

Marshall explains that it would be near impossible to find any physical evidence of Vril lizards since, under the terms of their agreement with world governments, the lizards are not allowed nor are provided with any access to the surface.

However, interestingly enough, an image surfaced on the internet that Marshall claims is the partial remains of a Vril Lizard. He reports that the skull and ribcage are intact, with the proboscis at the top of the head, as well as the eye cavities, where there were eyestalks at one time. Missing, states Marshall, is the lower body, including arms and legs. He says that the wings, torso and tail seen in the video have been added.

This specimen resembles a Jenny Haviner which is, supposedly, the dried carcass of a ray or skate, stretched and modified into a bizarre creature. Several can be still be found in private collections, with one on display at the Natural History Museum in London. It's said that long-ago sailors would create and sell these oddities as "mermaids" from far off lands, even though in their time, many believed they were the remains of miniature dragons or monsters.

Marshall explains that occasionally the carcass of a dead Vril is discovered, usually in some isolated area, as mummified remains from the past. If reported, various government agencies will immediately confiscate the specimen for "scientific research" and remove it from public view.

Aside from the lack of physical evidence, the search for any historical evidence to support the existence of the Vril will also be difficult to find since, in the past, Marshall reports the lizards have always hid in the shadows, spending their lives tunneling in deep underground caverns and caves.

However, one can find a few examples from the past, such as this apparent depiction of a Vril lizard feeding from a plant in a hand-drawn illustration from the Voynich Manuscript.

This medieval book surfaced when Wilfred Voynich purchased a collection of rare illuminated manuscripts in 1916 and discovered one volume to be entirely written in an unknown code. Now known as the Voynich Manuscript, the book consists of over 200 pages of parchment, richly illustrated with plants, stars and alchemical secrets.

In this case, one can see what has been described as a "cute little dragon" feeding in a garden. However, since the Voynich Manuscript appears to be written to preserve scientific information, one can rule out that the illustration was meant to be fanciful. Could these be instructions on what plants to grow to order to deter Vril lizards from invading your property?

Voynich brought the manuscript to eminent codebreaking experts around the world, who were unable to decipher a single word. Today the manuscript is preserved at the Yale University Library, where it remains as much a mystery as ever.

Another depiction of the lizards might be found in this authentic 16th-century English woodcut of a village witch engaged in the care and feeding of a trio of strange pets, which she stores in a cabinet for safe-keeping. Could this be a medieval representation of Vril lizards?

It remains difficult to find much physical evidence to support the existence of the Vril since Marshall claims that all references were intentionally wiped from historical record after the 1930's.

The Ahnenerbe was a research institute in Nazi Germany whose official mission was to find new evidence of the racial heritage of the German people. Created by Reichfuhrer Heinrich Himmler in 1935, the Ahnenerbe (meaning "inherited from the forefathers") would fund and send scientific teams all over the world, in search of the culture and history of the Aryan race.

For example, in the course of five years, expeditions were sent to study petroglyph rock carvings in Sweden, prehistoric rock inscriptions in Italy and ancient cave systems in Bavaria and France. Furthermore, members of the Ahnenerbe also seized priceless objects of historical interest from numerous exhibits throughout Europe, looting museums by the trainload. This also extended to works of scholarly interest, where witnesses claim the Nazis ravaged and seized whole libraries.

According to Marshall, many early depictions of Vril in cave paintings or rock art were destroyed, old books and manuscripts burned, as part of the agreement to hide all knowledge of the Vril from the populace.

In fact, the Voynich Manuscript was acquired as part of private collection that had been recently discovered locked in a chest in a European castle. Essentially buried for centuries, the manuscript escaped the mid-century Nazi purge. One can only wonder how many other representations of Vril lizards were destroyed in an attempt to conceal their existence from the public.

Marshall believes his mission in life is to inform the world about the ancient lizards, since he says, "no one's going to tell you about them but me".

Gods and Monsters

These ancient stone statues, located on the island of Nuku Hiva, part of the Marquesas Islands of French Polynesia, are considered some of the strangest ever seen, in that they seem to represent beings that aren't human. Their disproportionately elongated heads, wide mouths and huge eyes have caused some to speculate whether they are representations of ancient aliens who, some claim, visited Earth long ago and influenced cultures all over the world.

While some liken the statues to aliens, others might find a reptilian resemblance as well. According to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, we share the planet with an ancient race of intelligent lizard that have occupied Earth for millions of years.

Marshall explains that prehistoric Vril lizards have co-existed with humans since ancient times, where they were seen either as gods worthy of worship or demons to be feared and obeyed. He claims the lizards have played many different roles in the history of mankind and have been called by many different names, pretending to be our gods, demigods, guardians or even distant ancestors.

By interacting with only a select few, the public would rarely see or come into direct contact with the lizards, unless one was a member of the inner circle of the temples or those of the highest orders of the priesthood.

In addition, the Vril would also enjoy the protection of many generations of royal families, privileged politicians and spiritual leaders, who would agree to assist the lizards and keep their presence a secret.

He maintains that world governments have agreed to help hide the existence of Vril lizards, in exchange for the opportunity to utilize their natural ability to invade and steal the brain in a process that Marshall calls bodysnatching.

In some cultures, the Vril's ability to bodysnatch took on a spiritual significance, as it was seen as a divine transformation, where one began life as a mere mortal to then transcend into becoming a god. Centuries ago, there was no understanding about parasites and the parasitic process. Many devoted followers submitted to the process of bodysnatching, discarding their former lives, and surrendering themselves to the gods. Other cultures, Marshall reports, thought of bodysnatching as a type of demonic possession, and engaged in holy rites to try to drive the evil out.

Marshall claims that whether seen as gods or demons, Vril lizards have a drive to bodysnatch, infiltrate social groups, and then systematically take over, with each new Vril host assisting the others in finding more to bodysnatch.

For that reason, some cultures around the world used various methods in an attempt to control Vril infestation, from the building of housing structures high on cliffs as in the case of the Anasazi Indians of New Mexico, to the construction of pyramids that act as secret Vril traps.

The ancient Egyptians were expert Vril slayers, says Marshall, with ingenious solutions, such as the construction of the Great Pyramid of Giza in El Giza, Egypt. Believed to have been built as a tomb for the Pharaoh Khufu around 2560 BC, the Great Pyramid is the oldest and largest of the three pyramids in the Giza Necropolis and the only one to remain largely intact.

Egyptologists have long been mystified by the presence of narrow shafts built within the thick walls of both the King and Queen's Chamber. The purpose of these shafts is not clear. They were once to be air shafts for ventilation, but this idea has now been widely abandoned in favor of the theory that the shafts serve a ritualistic purpose associated with the ascension of the King's spirit to the heavens. According to Marshall, however, the shafts were designed to drive Vril lizards deep into a lower chamber, from which there was no exit. Vril lizards would enter the pyramid and once trapped, had no escape.

This helped keep the Vril lizard population under control for a long time.

Marshall informs us that the Vril survived throughout the ages with the assistance of powerful royal families, from select Illuminati bloodlines. These families secretly hid the Vril in their dungeons, fortresses, and castle strongholds for generations, where they were regarded with affection as pets, useful as spies, unmatched as weapons. The royals found the lizards remarkably useful in the replacement of problem people, in a time when one could simply go missing from the court; no questions asked. What's more, if there was difficulty establishing favorable relations with a neighboring kingdom, all one would have to do, is invite the entire royal family to visit for a feast in their honor, to celebrate a royal wedding perhaps...? After several weeks of festivities and Vril bodysnatching, it's extraordinary how close one can become with one's new in-laws.

Marshall reports that the Vril will also bodysnatch animals, given the opportunity. One can only wonder if this explains the medieval belief that cats were evil and thought to be in league with the devil. The witch's familiar, a concept common throughout the middle ages, consisted of the use of enchanted animals, typically cats, owls, or toads, to assist the witch in her craft and spellwork. The familiar would offer protection for the witch as a loyal servant and secret spy. Perhaps this suspicion of witches using Vril-hosted cats as familiars and companions can provide an explanation for the massive witch hunts beginning in 15th-century Europe. Over the course of three hundred years, over 50,000 so-called witches were accused of worshipping the Devil, tortured into confessions and then executed. For safe measure, their familiars were often killed along with them.

Furthermore, the persistent belief that local cats were demon possessed not only led to the point where cats were driven out of towns and villages, but encouraged the public torture of cats as of a form of popular entertainment, with some towns holding such bizarre spectacles as yearly cat festivals where live cats were thrown from high towers and some even ritualistically set on fire.

Naturally, this practice of killing cats led to a decline in the cat population of Europe, which indirectly may have led to one of the most devastating epidemics in human history.

In the early 1330's, an outbreak of deadly bubonic plague originated from the trading posts of Imperial China, and spread throughout Western Asia and Europe. Believed to have been caused by infected rats, traders unwittingly carried the rats aboard merchant trade ships to spread the disease westward from Asia along trade routes. Known as the Black Death because of the black spots it produced on the skin, an estimated 25 million people, one-third the population of Europe, were dead after just 5 years. Medieval medicine had nothing to combat the spread of the disease, and doctors were at a loss to explain the cause which, at the time, was attributed to the affects of God's wrath on the populace. Perhaps this degree of devastation could have been avoided had more cats been allowed to live and naturally control the rodent population.

In fact, one may be able to re-evaluate most major events in human history in search of the contributions of Vril hosts and their human allies. For example, could the Vril be in part responsible for fostering the mass hysteria that led to the Inquisitions that raged for centuries throughout Europe and the Americas, resulting in the deaths of millions?

According to Marshall, the very nature of the parasitic Vril is to invade, bodysnatch, and take over. One can only wonder how many events in human history were secretly manipulated from the shadows by lizards, in order to further their agenda to bodysnatch and take over the world. He claims the Vril aren't gods, demons or monsters; they're just a bunch of stinky lizards; they bleed red and die.

Selling Immortality

According to their website, the main goals of the Avatar 2045 Initiative is to create technologies enabling the transfer of an individual's personality to a more advanced non-biological carrier, extending life to the point of immortality. They state that they hope to realize a new strategy for humanity's development, and in so doing, create a more productive, fulfilling and satisfying future.

According to Marshall, Avatar 2045 is just another well-funded PR campaign using drip-feed disclosure to introduce the science of human cloning and microchip brain implant technology to the public which Marshall claims, members of the elite have secretly utilized for many decades.

According to Marshall, human cloning is not only possible, but has been practiced by the Illuminati since the 1940's, when world leaders would send their human clones in public as a safety measure against assassinations. Today, he explains that a type of cloning technology called R.E.M. Driven Human Cloning is used to transfer full human consciousness into a clone copy during normal R.E.M. sleep cycles.

Marshall claims that this is accomplished by using blood or tissue samples to create an identical clone body stored in a remote location, and once that person is asleep, secret technology is used to transfer their consciousness to their clone double, complete with personality and memories intact. Marshall explains that this is the primary way the Illuminati communicate, by using the hours of sleep to meet in underground military bases, to discuss and plan future world events. Furthermore, he tells us that there are entire floors at each base where clone bodies are grown in large glass tubes, stored on stainless steel racks and activated when needed.

Marshall explains that once he falls asleep at night, and enters natural R.E.M. sleep, he opens his eyes to find himself in an identical clone body at a top secret military base, and he says he is trapped there until his anchor body wakes up, at which time, his clone body deactivates and drops to the floor. According to Marshall, he was 5 years old when he remembered being brought to the cloning center by his mother for the first time. He says he never remembered how he got there, only remembers being there. In fact, Marshall claims that many of those at the cloning center don't fully understand how they get there, as only some are told the truth. Many are told that they are in another dimension, or on the astral plane. Very few are informed that they have been cloned and have had their consciousness transferred to a clone body kept and maintained at a top secret military base. In fact, when Marshall first posted his online expose in late 2011, many members read this and were angry to learn the truth for the first time.

According to Marshall, R.E.M. Cloning began as a way for world leaders to meet secretly and plan global events. However, these meetings gradually devolved into a sick, nightly spectacle where hundreds of Illuminati members gather to watch children and adults get hurt, tortured and murdered in bizarre ways. Marshall says that it makes Illuminati members feel powerful to watch horrible things done to innocent victims. Some members just pretend to enjoy the show, but secretly want out. Trapped by cloning technology into attending the cloning center every night, they see no way out. According to Marshall, every once in a while someone will speak out and say they don't want to attend anymore. The Illuminati will then use them as an example for the others and they end up ruined, destroyed and in some cases, dead. Marshall hopes that by exposing the perverse activities that go on in underground military bases, the public will be outraged and demand an immediate stop to this depravity.

PROJECT AVATAR

According to Project Avatar, in less than 30 years, the public will embrace both human cloning and microchip implant technology, in which, they say, a human brain is transplanted at the end of one's life into the body of an avatar, presumably, an enhanced clone version of yourself.

According to Marshall, this has already been done. He claims that in addition to human cloning, microchip implant technology was developed in order to attain immortality. In the 1940's, a group of powerful elite wanted to live forever and they funded the research that led to microchip implant technology. By recording a person's consciousness on a chip before they died, scientists were able to insert this microchip into a precise location and upload all of their memories into a clone brain. They found however, that using clones for microchip brain implants was not ideal, as clone behavior can become erratic and unreliable. The problem was solved by stealing the body of another. The stolen brain uploads the inserted memories and new programming begins to run. The victim has been successfully bodysnatched by microchip technology, allowing the dead to live on and on. These microchipheads now live among us, hopping from body to body, in essence, living forever.

As shown in the 2015 science fiction film Self/Less whereby using advanced technology, a wealthy, dying man uploads his memories into the brain of another, giving him more time to fulfill his potential. However, he discovers that immortality has some side effects when he begins to access his new brain's previous memories and learns that a man was murdered in order to supply his new body.

It's not science fiction, Marshall claims, but reality among elite members of the Illuminati who never die, but simply go on to the next body, this includes powerful world leaders, the rich and powerful, many royals and many well known celebrities who, according to Marshall still slither the earth wearing new bodies and identities.

However, according to Marshall, microchip implant technology is a dead-end tech, deeply flawed and cannot be corrected, despite decades of efforts by Illuminati scientists all over the world. For some reason, microchipheads have difficulty controlling basic impulses, and revert to primitive, caveman-like behavior, with a tendency to attack small children and engage in depraved acts of cannibalism. Which begs the question: What kind of legacy do you want to leave behind? How do you want to be remembered? According to Marshall, dead is better.

Marshall calls for a complete ban on all microchip brain implant technology, calling it immoral and unethical. One can only wonder why those that endorse the Avatar 2045 initiative would try to promote a technology they know is hopelessly flawed, unless they simply want to profit by creating a billion-dollar market selling immortality to those afraid to die.

Bodysnatching for the Rich and Famous

What would you do if you could live forever? asks the 2015 scifi thriller Self/less, in which dying billionaire Damian Hayes (Ben Kingsley) undergoes a radical medical procedure that transfers his consciousness into the body of a healthy young man (Ryan Reynolds). By "shedding" his sick, aging body for a new, artificially-grown model, Hayes is offered, for a price, more time to fulfill his potential.

Who doesn't want to live forever? asks Dr. Albright of Phoenix Biogenics, a research facility specializing in the science of human consciousness transfer. He explains to Hayes that by "shedding" his consciousness into an empty vessel, he will be able to access the very best of the human experience. When he hesitates, Dr. Albright replies that Hayes never asks the right question: what would you give to achieve eternal life?

If we were able to "shed" our old, sick bodies at the end of our lives, and start over with new healthy ones, would we?

According to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, this technology exists today for the privileged members of the Illuminati who never die; they just steal someone's body and live forever. Marshall calls it bodysnatching, and claims that this has been in practice within elite circles around the world for decades.

Marshall claims that by utilizing top-secret microchip technology, scientists can download the consciousness from the brain onto a microchip and then transfer the data by implanting the microchip into another brain and simply uploading the information. This way, the world elite never die, they simply snatch a new body and live on.

Known as mind uploading, the microchip allows them access to the memories of the new brain, which helps them interface with their new body, but make no mistake, the original personality has been replaced, shut down while the new upgrade completely takes over.

According to Marshall, the Illuminati are always searching for fresh young bodies they procure from anywhere and everywhere, from places such as hospitals, long-term healthcare facilities, rehab centers, prisons, in fact, anywhere people are locked in, drugged up, or tuned out, can provide opportunities for bodysnatching. Marshall claims all this takes place with the support of the Illuminati members embedded within all levels of law enforcement, legal and medical professions.

And don't think you're safe from being bodysnatched just because you're one of them. The Illuminati even steal bodies from among their own member base since there are always fresh new faces joining all the time. Marshall explains that young people agree to join with the promise of fame and fortune. What they are not told, Marshall says, is that their physical body can also be included in the deal.

Should a privileged member decide that your body looks fun and lively, they might just bodysnatch you and hand over your body as a reward for faithful service. This is especially true should your fame and popularity start to fade over time. Your TV show get cancelled? Not selling out stadiums anymore? Well, you still look mighty cute to the old and sick shopping for their next body.

Marshall claims that many famous celebrities and well-known politicians are still with us, in a manner of speaking, unrecognizable however, wearing the body suit of some poor, unfortunate soul.

According to Marshall, life as a microchiphead comes with quite a few surprises. For reasons unknown, elite scientists have been unable to design out the tendency for chipheads to revert to a primitive state and take sport in hurting, hunting and eating people, including children. So, you come back alright, explains Marshall, but you come back as a sick, twisted pervert. How's that for a legacy to leave behind?

Marshall says that the world elite don't get too hung-up over questions about right or wrong; it's more like what can they get away with and since they place their members within all levels of every field in society, they can get away with a lot.

So, to return to the premise of the film: What does immortality feel like? Perhaps we are still asking the wrong question; just because we can, doesn't mean we should.

Donald Marshall exposes the practice of bodysnatching and calls for the immediate deactivation of all microchipheads worldwide.

The Man Who Sold the World

"The Man Who Sold the World", a song written by pop legend David Bowie, and the title track of his third album, was released in the U.S. in November 1970. This song has been covered by a number of artists, notably by Lulu in 1974, and Nirvana in 1993. Bowie has never explained the meaning of the song. When asked about the song during a interview on BBC Radio 1 in 1997, Bowie replied, "I guess I wrote it because there was a part of myself that I was looking for... You have this great searching, this great need to find out who you really are."

In the song, the narrator passes a man upon the stair, they speak briefly and, shaking hands, they part. However, the narrator does not return home, but continues to roam for years and years, until, in his searching, he loses himself to the point where he wonders if he himself has died, alone, a long, long time ago.

We are left wondering who is the man on the stair? What, in the course of their conversation, did he say that would affect the narrator so profoundly that he embarks on a search for meaning that would take him the rest of his life, and even beyond...

We believe this song describes an encounter the young pop star may have had at the cloning center as a REM-driven clone, and it is our opinion that the man on the stair is none other than the late German Chancellor Adolf Hitler.

According to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, top-secret experiments in human cloning have been conducted for decades in deep underground military bases around the world. Marshall claims that when he goes to bed at night, his consciousness is stolen while he sleeps and held hostage until his body wakes up.

Known as R.E.M-Driven Consciousness Transfer, Marshall maintains that elite scientists use this top-secret technology to transfer his individual consciousness from his residence in Eastern Canada, into his identical clone at a cloning center hundreds of miles away. He explains that this consciousness transfer happens almost every night, even though his real body never leaves the room and continues to sleep throughout the night.

We imagine that David Bowie would have been required to attend cloning as a famous young pop star in the 1970s. According to Marshall, all members of the Illuminati have clones and attend the cloning center nightly, including celebrities, star athletes, politicians; in fact, any person of influence in every field you can imagine. Marshall claims they are forced to meet every night to discuss business, plan future events and engage in perverse sex parties and sick acts of depravity.

Perhaps the song describes the events that occurred one night at the cloning center, as Bowie was about to climb the stadium steps to return to his seat in the arena, when the singer is surprised to find Hitler descending the same stairs.

We passed upon the stair

We spoke of was and when
Although I wasn't there
He said I was his friend
Which came as a surprise
I spoke into his eyes
I thought you died alone
A long long time ago

We believe this provides the correct interpretation of the song's lyric: even though I wasn't there... because, in truth, Bowie's real body was not there, but back home, sleeping.

The young singer speaks of was and when, believing the official account that Hitler committed suicide in 1945 alone, a long, long time ago.

Even at the time, there were questions as to whether Hitler was alive or dead. Hours after Joseph Stalin was informed of Hitler's suicide, he wanted the corpse found. Although the apparent remains of Hitler and wife, Eva Braun, were later discovered in a shell crater by Red Army Intelligence, questions remained: Was this actually Hitler's corpse?

In the years immediately following 1945, the Russians maintained that Hitler was not dead, but had fled and was being shielded by their former western allies. The chief of the U.S. trial counsel at Nuremberg, Thomas J. Dodd, when asked about Hitler's death, said: "No one can say he is dead." When President Harry S. Truman asked Stalin at the Potsdam Conference in August 1945 whether or not Hitler was dead, Stalin replied bluntly, "No".

Some believe that Hitler did not commit suicide, but instead escaped from Berlin to Argentina, where he lived in hiding until the early 1960s.

"Oh no, not me," The man exclaims, "We never lost control..."

In the song, the man brags that not only did he not die, but we never lost control. Who is the we the man refers to?

We believe the man is referring to the Nazis of the Third Reich.

According to Marshall, the Nazi Party is alive and well today, with many members within the Illuminati, including royal families, Heads of State and even U.S. Presidents, all secretly loyal to the Nazi Party.

It is well known that many brilliant Nazi scientists relocated to the United States directly after the war. Operation Paperclip was a U.S. Intelligence program in which over 1,500 German scientists, technicians, and engineers from Nazi Germany were brought to the United States after World War II.

Public records were expunged of any Nazi Party affiliations and false employment histories and political biographies were created for the scientists in order to obtain security clearances from the U.S. Government to work in the United States. Marshall claims the Nazis never lost the war and are still in control today.

But what to make of the line "You're face to face with the man who sold the world...?"

For how can one sell the entire world, and to whom would he sell it?

Is it possible that the lyrics refer to an agreement that the Nazis are reported to have made with an ancient race of aliens toward the end of the war, in exchange for advanced technology?

According to Marshall, the Nazis would receive valuable technology, e.g. flying aircraft, ray-gun weaponry and in exchange the Nazis would build deep underground military bases to provide the aliens with easy access to humans, whom they hunt, terrorize and consume. This agreement is still honored today, where aliens interact with humans deep underground, far away from public knowledge.

When the Nazis made a pact to partner with this ancient race of aliens, they, in effect, sold out the world...

After speaking for a few moments, the narrator bids farewell to the man on the stairs:

I laughed and shook his hand
And made my way back home
I searched through foreign lands
For years and years I roamed
I gazed a gazeless stare
I walked a million years

I must have died alone
A long, long time ago

The song ends with the narrator, not returning home, but instead wandering through foreign lands, unclear if he, himself, has died a long, long time ago.

One might ask: How is it possible that someone like Hitler, could be dead for years, yet still live on in deep underground military bases?

Marshall explains that the Illuminati can decide who they wish to keep alive by utilizing top-secret technology, not disclosed to the public. In these cases, elite scientists use microchip technology to download one's memories, abilities and personality onto a microchip, which is then implanted into the brain of a fresh, new clone grown specifically for this purpose. As each clone degrades with time, one simply body-hops to the next clone.

It's not just Hitler, Marshall claims, but many world leaders from the past, live on as chipheads at the cloning center, where they still control the world from the shadows.

Marshall cautions, however, that this microchip implant technology is deeply flawed and comes with serious side effects. However flawed, though, Illuminati members still use the tech to cheat death so that they can, theoretically, live forever.

Marshall reports that many are stuck there at the cloning center, held hostage by advanced science and technology, under the control of a secret alien race. Artists and musicians like David Bowie do what they can to embed references into their work, hoping the public will one day put the pieces together and recognize their cry for help.

Obama Says U.S. Under Alien Control?
In the 1996 scifi blockbuster, Independence Day, a race of powerful aliens launch an all-out invasion against the human race. The story begins when communication systems worldwide are sent into chaos by a strange atmospheric interference. The military soon learns that a number of enormous objects are on a collusion course with Earth. First thought to be meteors, the objects are later revealed to be gigantic spacecraft. Piloted by an alien species with vastly superior technology, their goal is to invade and destroy Earth. Within hours, the aliens have all but obliterated major capitals around the world: New York, Washington, D.C., London and Moscow.
The idea of an alien invasion is a common theme in science fiction stories and films in which extraterrestrials invade Earth to exterminate human life, to harvest humans for food, steal the planet's resources, or destroy the planet altogether.

Most well-known alien invasion scenarios involve aliens landing on Earth, destroying or abducting people, fighting and defeating Earth's military forces, and destroying Earth's major cities.

There is no need to search the skies for invading aliens. Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall says that we're already invaded, only the aliens are already here, or rather, they never left.

According to Marshall, what the vast majority of the public don't know, is that all world events are orchestrated by a secret race of alien overlords that control every aspect of human life from the shadows. Far from new to the planet, they are in fact, an ancient race of sentient beings who have been interacting in the affairs of man since ancient times. Throughout history, they have been called a variety of names, and acknowledged as our gods, guardians, and creators.

As in the past, these aliens still interact with select groups of individuals who are chosen to further their plans for humanity. These groups include royal bloodlines, prominent wealthy families, influential members of finance, banking, media and entertainment, and the leaders of religions and political parties. They decide who wins every election, who holds any position of power, and which country wins any war.

PRESIDENT GERALD FORD

In early 1966, Gerald Ford's home state of Michigan experienced a variety of unusual UFO sightings. Ford, then congressman, became outraged with the Air Force's investigation of the reports and called for a full Congressional UFO inquiry. In response, Congress held an open hearing on UFOs and promised to conduct an impartial, civilian investigation. Later, however, the investigation was bungled and determined a "fiasco", presumably because of apparent bias against UFOs. Once elected president 8 years later, Ford would not publicly address the issue of UFOs again.

PRESIDENT JIMMY CARTER

While on the campaign trail, presidential candidate and Georgia Senator Jimmy Carter told a reporter for the National Enquirer, "If I ever become President, I'll make every piece of information this country has about UFOs sightings available to the public, and the scientists". Carter was known as the "UFO President" for reporting his own sighting of a strange craft and for his full support of NASA programs to search for intelligent extraterrestrial life. However, once elected in 1977, President Carter never did make classified reports on UFOs available to the public, and while in office, never mentioned the subject again.

PRESIDENT RONALD REAGAN

In 1985, President Ronald Reagan, President Mikhail Gorbachev of the U.S.S.R. and other world leaders met for the first summit in Geneva, where Reagan told soviet leaders that if we were to discover "some alien life form that was going to attack the Earth,... then that knowledge would unite all the peoples of the world".

One year later, President Reagan, addressing the United Nations, said "And yet I ask: is not an alien force already among us? What could be more alien to the universal aspirations of our people then war and the threat of war?"

According to Marshall, Reagan tried to warn the public on numerous occasions, referring to alien threats and alien invasions. He states that the Illuminati forgave

Reagan's comments at first, but when he continued to talk about aliens living among us, they "blew his mind and called it Alzheimer's".

PRESIDENT GEORGE BUSH

Who better qualified to know top-secret classified information about UFOs and aliens than President George Bush, former Director of Central Intelligence for President Ford, in charge of giving intelligence briefings to the President during the Carter Administration and during the Reagan Administration as Vice-President.

During his presidential campaign in 1988, George Bush was once asked by a reporter if he intended to tell the truth about UFOs? He replied that he would, if he could find it. Bush asked the reporter to send him some information about it. The reporter responded that since Bush was a CIA man, he should already "know all that stuff". Bush agreed saying, "I know some. I know a fair amount."

PRESIDENT BILL CLINTON

In a 2014 appearance on Jimmy Kimmel Live, President Clinton talks about possible alien life in the universe and explains how an alien invasion would unite mankind.

Kimmel:
If I were president, and I won't be, let's be honest... the first thing I would do, after putting my hand on that bible and taking that oath to serve the country is, I would probably not even finish the oath... I would run to the White House, I'd demand to see all the classified files on UFOs 'cause I want to know, I'd want to know what has been going on. Did you do that?

Clinton:
Sort of (studio laughter)

Clinton:
We had... I think it was at the beginning of my second term, we had the anniversary of Roswell...

Kimmel:
You waited that long...?

Clinton:
I did

Kimmel:
Wow...

Clinton:
Well, I did and didn't. There's also Area 51. You remember there was a great scifi movie where there was an alien kept deep under the ground in Area 51..?

Kimmel:
If you saw that there were aliens there, would you tell us?

Clinton:
Yeah

Kimmel:
You would?

Clinton: (nodding)
I would.
(studio applauds)

Clinton:
So, I said Look, what do we know? We know there are billions of stars and planets, literally, out there. And the universe is getting bigger. We know from our fancy telescopes that in the last two years, more than 20 planets have been identified outside our solar system that seem to be far enough away from their suns and dense enough that they might be able to support some form of life, so it makes it increasingly less likely that we're alone.

Kimmel:
Oh, you're trying to give me a hint that there are aliens...
(studio laughter)

Clinton:
No, I'm trying to tell you that I don't know... If we were visited someday, I wouldn't be surprised. I just hope it's not like Independence Day, the movie... you know... a conflict... the only way to unite us in this incredibly divided world of ours. If they're out there, we better think of how all the differences among the people on Earth would seem small if we felt threatened by a space invader. That's the whole theory of Independence Day.

Kimmel:
You're right, you're right...

Clinton:
Everybody gets together and makes nice.

PRESIDENT GEORGE W. BUSH

During the 2000 presidential campaign, George W. Bush was asked by a reporter if he were elected President, would he disclose the truth about UFOs. Bush replied "Sure. I will... It will be the first thing he (pointing to vice-presidential running mate, Dick Cheney) will do. He'll get right on it." However, once in office, President Bush would not make UFO disclosure a high priority, and, during his administration, no new evidence or information would be released to the public.

PRESIDENT BARACK OBAMA

In March 12, 2015, President Barack Obama was a guest on Jimmy Kimmel Live, where he talks about the recent police shootings in Ferguson, Missouri and race relations in America. As he wraps up the interview, Kimmel does his best to get the President to talk about aliens.

Kimmel:
So, this is something I feel like, if I was president... it's unlikely that is ever going to happen, you never know, if I was the president...

Obama:
It was unlikely that I was going to be president...
(studio laughter)

Kimmel:
The moment I was inaugurated... my hand would just be... still be hot from touching the bible and I would immediately race to wherever they have the files about Area 51 and UFOs and I'd go through everything to find out what happened... Did you do that?

Obama:
That's why you will not be president...
'cause that's the first thing that you would do...
(They both laugh).

Obama (con't.)
The aliens won't let it happen... You'll reveal all their secrets... They exercise strict control over us.

Kimmel:
Now, you know there's a lot of people who will examine your facial expressions here, every twitch and everything and say, of course...

(Obama laughs. Kimmel continues)

Did you look, did you see, explore...?

Obama:
I can't reveal anything.

Kimmel:
Oh, really? Because President Clinton said, he did go right there and he did check and there was nothing.

Obama:
Well, you know, that's what we're instructed to say...
(studio laughter)

Kimmel:
All right, all right

Could it be possible, that once in office, these U.S. Presidents discover the truth about who really controls the power in this country? Have they been threatened into silence and now follow orders to stay alive?

Marshall states that our planet has been ruled for centuries by aliens who hide in the shadows. He claims that the only hope for humanity lies in spreading this news far and wide: We are not free and never were.

Queen Elizabeth Found Guilty in Case of Missing Children
On February 25, 2013 six international judges found Queen Elizabeth and her husband, Prince Phillip, guilty in the disappearance of ten native children from the Catholic-run Kamloops Residential School in British Columbia. The children left for a picnic with the Royal couple on Oct. 10, 1964, and their grieving parents haven't seen them since.
The order to arrest the Queen was issued by the International Common Law Court of Justice in Brussels, after nearly a year of litigation. This prosecution concerned 50,000 missing native Canadian children and included a 1964 kidnapping case that implicated the Queen.

The four month long trial found Pope Joseph Ratzinger, Queen Elizabeth and forty other global elites guilty of crimes against humanity. The guilty verdict may have even influenced the surprising resignation of the Pope, which was announced later that same week.

In 2011, forensic evidence of at least 31 mass grave sites with human remains had been discovered on the grounds of former Indian Residential Schools. Despite government efforts to discredit and conceal evidence from the public, Kevin Annett, founder of The International Tribunal into Crimes of Church and State, maintains that this evidence provides proof that the Crown of England, the Vatican and the Canadian government are directly responsible for the deaths of more than 50,000 children across Canada. At the time of their disappearance, the children were attending church-owned Indian Residential Schools, which were in operation from the 1840s to the 1990s.

It would seem that several incarcerations and even a death appear to surround the Queen Elizabeth 1964 kidnapping case.

Former Kamloops School resident William Combes died after a 2010 radio interview where he discussed witnessing Queen Elizabeth and Prince Phillip leave the school with ten friends and fellow Kamloops residents.

Combes was the sole survivor of a group of three native boys who claim to have witnessed the abduction during a royal visit to a residential school in mid-October 1964, when both the Queen and Prince Philip were in Canada.

According to Combes, "In October 1964, when I was 12 years old, I was an inmate at the Kamloops school and we were visited by the Queen of England and Prince Philip. I remember it was strange because they came by themselves, no big fanfare or nothing. But I recognized them and the school principal told us it was the Queen and we all got given new clothes and good food for the first time in months the day before she arrived.

The day the Queen got to the school, I was part of a group of kids that went on a picnic with her and her husband and some of the priests, down to a meadow near Dead Man's Creek. I remember it was weird because we all had to bend down and kiss her foot, a white laced boot.

After a while, I saw the Queen leave the picnic with ten children from the school, and those kids never returned. We never heard anything more about them and never met them again... they all vanished."

Directly after this interview, Combes, in apparent good health, was ordered to report for tests at the Vancouver St. Paul's Catholic Hospital. There he was given an injection that put him into a coma. Within hours and without the consent of family members, Combes was pulled off life support and died of a still-undisclosed cause. The Vancouver Coroner's Office refuses to comment on Combes' death.

Apparently, even inquiring into the status of the case against the Queen can be hazardous to your health, as British soldier Vivian Cunningham discovered when he innocently questioned a senior officer about the Queen's outstanding arrest warrant. Cunningham was immediately committed to a mental care unit in Stafford, England where he was injected with an anti-psychotic drug olanzapine. The soldier then spent six months at the St. George Hospital Psychiatric Unit with a diagnosis of suffering from an acute psychotic episode. Cunningham was released after public outcry.

According to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, elite members like the Royal family never face prosecution, even if found guilty of a crime. What's more, the public never finds out about these crimes because they would be covered by a complete media black-out of all news outlets.

Marshall explains that this is because the Illuminati believe that they are above the law and are essentially untouchable. By placing those loyal to them in positions of power, elite members can commit any crime they want with impunity, knowing that they will never need to answer for it. Marshall reports that there is a vast network of Illuminati members employed as high-ranking police officers, judges and doctors ready and willing to hide any crime from ever reaching the public.

Marshall claims that years ago, Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip told him about how they would visit native orphanages in Western Canada and kill kids for sport. They described how they would strangle the children and watch them die. Philip even described how he would tie a boy up and crush his testicles in one hand, while choking the boy to death with the other. Marshall realizes that this sounds unbelievable; how could someone do something like that to children? Marshall replies that he doesn't know why they did this, only that they said they target native children because they receive less attention when they go missing.

Marshall maintains that Illuminati members are not above the law and cannot be allowed to get away with murder. He calls for immediate justice for the tragic loss of so many innocent young lives.

The Fast and Furious Death of Paul Walker
On November 30, 2013, actor Paul Walker was killed when the car he was riding in crashed into a light pole and burst into flames. He was 40.

Walker gained international fame for his portrayal of Brian O'Conner, an undercover police officer infiltrating a street-racing gang in the 2001 blockbuster "The Fast and the Furious." The box-office success of the surprise summer hit yielded numerous sequels to become Universal Picture's biggest franchise of all time. At the time of his death, Walker was working on the seventh installment of the series, due out later the next year.

Walker and friend, Roger Rodas, had just left a fundraising event in Valencia, California held by Walker's charity, Reach Out Worldwide, to benefit victims of Typhoon Haiyan in the Philippines. The high speed crash caused a huge explosion that could be seen for miles, all recorded on a security camera that captured the precise moment of impact. The bodies were so badly burned they could only be identified by dental records.

Both deaths have been ruled an accident, although speed may have been a factor, according to the Los Angeles Times. Walker's family proceeded to sue Porsche for negligence, wrongful death and product liability, claiming that faulty mechanics of the high-performance sports car, the Porsche Carrera GT, caused the tragic crash.

Almost immediately, however, conspiracy theories about the accident began to surface on the internet and other online news sources, speculating as to whether Walker's death was truly an accident. The various theories ranged from the belief that Walker had been silenced before he had the chance to reveal crucial information to the public to the possibility that his death served as a warning to others who might be tempted to speak out as well.

In fact, for years rumors had circulated during the filming of the "Fast and Furious" series that members of cast and crew had been threatened to alter the ongoing story line as they had revealed too much about the operations of various C.I.A. "black money" projects such as the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives' "Operation Fast and Furious" which allowed the sell of weapons to illegal straw buyers, in order to track the guns to Mexican drug cartel leaders. As of 2011, none of these targeted high-level cartel leaders have ever been arrested.

Another theory as to a motive in the possible murder of Walker focuses on his supposed interest in Bitcoin, a virtual currency exchange that can be traded online without using names and are, therefore, difficult to trace to an individual. Some say that Walker was a huge proponent and investor in Bitcoin, with the unsubstantiated claim that he had invested over $40 million in the company. Conspiracy theorists explain that Bitcoin currency could possibly derail the Illuminati-backed Federal Reserve, who make massive profits from the money printed, as well as other Federal Reserve policies. Therefore, companies like Bitcoin have the potential to wrest the world economy from Illuminati control.

Many speculated that the Illuminati was in the process of shutting down these companies with the arrest of the CEO of Bitcoin, Charlie Shrem and may have led to the suicide of Autumn Radtke, the CEO of First Meta, another virtual currency exchange company. Some believe Walker was just another causality in a bloody war to protect Illuminati control of the world economy.

Other theories range from the belief that Walker was planning to expose information about tainted vaccines being used in the Philippines to the idea that possibly Rodas was the target of a hit ordered by Colombian drug lords he angered by refusing to use the charity to launder drug money in El Salvador. Others even claim that the crash might have been caused by a remote-controlled drone attack and, as evidence, point to the car wreckage blown to pieces.

While it is unknown whether there is any truth in these theories, according to Illuminati whistleblower Donald Marshall, Walker led a double life as a celebrity Illuminati member and was involved in top-secret cloning operations held in deep underground military bases. Marshall reports having seen Walker in attendance at these secret meetings on numerous occasions over many years.

Marshall explains that all celebrities, politicians and world leaders must agree to join the Illuminati and participate within the organization. This includes attending secret meetings at the cloning center, the location of which is highly-classified information.

Marshall maintains that elite scientists use this top-secret technology to clone members of the Illuminati and bring them at night to the cloning center. There they sit in the stands of a large hockey arena to discuss global politics, plan future events and watch disgusting things done to innocent people, while their real bodies are at home sleeping.

Donald Marshall has risked his life to speak out about the crimes he claims to have witnessed that take place nightly in deep underground military bases around the world. As a unwilling participant in black military operations since a young child, Marshall has come forward to post his eye-witness accounts of the human cloning technology that he says members of the Illuminati use to meet secretly in high security military bases.

He reports that elite scientists have perfected a technology known as REM consciousness transfer, which allows them to target, capture and transfer an individual consciousness during the REM dream state into an identical clone at a cloning center many hundreds of miles away.

Marshall explains that every night when he goes to sleep, he opens his eyes to find himself at the cloning center. with his consciousness activated in his identical clone body. He claims that his clone body feels "real as real" and that he is stuck there, until his real body wakes up. When that happens, Marshall says that "all goes black" as his clone body drops limp while his consciousness is returned to his real body, and he wakes up back in bed.

It might seem unbelievable, but Marshall states that covert experiments in genetic engineering and human cloning have been conducted by Illuminati scientists in deep, underground military bases for decades. Marshall explains that all celebrities are required to join the Illuminati in exchange for promotion and benefits. Some later regret that decision and wish to leave. However, those are threatened with severe punishment should they even try.

When news of Walker's tragic death spread around the world, many turned to Marshall with questions: Was Walker's death murder or accidental?

Marshall responded that he didn't know, although, he did report that he saw Walker at the cloning center the night after his death.

He explains that the night after the news of Walker's death, he went to sleep that night, and opened his eyes to find himself activated at the cloning center. Marshall said that he was seated in the stands of the stadium arena. Before him, in the center of the dirt pit, he saw Walker, alive again and activated in an identical clone body. Marshall says that Walker was bound and restrained while two men continually punched and stabbed him.

He says that while Walker screamed in pain, many in the stands were crying. He says it was as if all in attendance that night were being forced to watch the torture of Walker as some kind of deterrent. After some time, Marshall was deactivated and he woke up back in bed.

Marshall says that he does not know the purpose for this bloody spectacle, nor has he seen Walker there since.

Many questions remain: Was Walker planning to reveal classified information to the public and was silenced before he could, or does his death serve as a warning to the others not to even think about coming forward with the truth.

Meanwhile, Marshall vows to continue to speak out about top-secret human cloning in deep underground military bases until all cloning centers world-wide are shut down permanently.

Welcome to the Cassiopaean Website, the repository for the work of scientific mystic,

Laura Knight-Jadczyk. Laura is married to theoretical/mathematical physicist Arkadiusz Jadczyk who introduces his wife's work in the following extract:

The name "Cassiopaea" was given by a consciously "channeled source" which Laura accessed in 1994 after two years of experimental work. The source identified itself by saying "we are you in the future." Modern physics does not provide us with practical means for this type of communication, and theories on this subject are not well developed; they are, in fact, inconclusive and controversial.

When interpreting "we are you in the future" in an oversimplified way, we are faced with causal paradoxes. On the other hand, from the theoretical papers published in physics journals we can learn that, with a proper and careful interpretation, and taking into account quantum uncertainties, communication into the past cannot be dismissed as impossible. Improbable perhaps is the right word, but there are many things that are improbable and yet happen.

The more improbable is a given phenomenon, the more information is carried by its occurrence, the more we can learn by its study.

That is why we did not dismiss the "we are you in the future" as impossible and therefore ignorable. Instead we decided to continue the "communications" as a form of a controlled experiment in "superluminal thought transfer" — even if it was clear that the term should be considered as a tentative indication of only one out several possible interpretations.

The information received from this experiment is presented in the context of broad ranging historical, scientific and other metaphysical material and offers the clues that have led to the world view and inferences presented by us in our numerous publications on this website and in print. Perhaps it is only our own "subconscious mind" that presents itself as a "source," but even if it is so, does that tell us more? Do we really know what "unconscious mind" is and of what is it capable?

We sometimes ask ourselves if the Cassiopaeans are who they say they are, because we do not take anything as unquestionable truth. We take everything with a grain of salt, even if we consider that there is a good chance that it is truth. We are constantly analyzing this material as well as a great quantity of other material that comes to our attention from numerous fields of science and mysticism. We find it to be quite extraordinary that the Cassiopaean Material is so closely aligned with the teachings of the great Sufi master, Ibn Al-'Arabi, with the Fourth Way Teachings of Gurdjieff, Castaneda, with the Esoteric Christianity of Boris Mouravieff, and even ancient Altaic Shamanism. In this sense, the Cassiopaean Experiment is truly a Fourth Way work.

For millennia the knowledge of the true nature of reality has been denied to humanity. Religion has offered false hopes and beliefs about the plight of humanity and science has divorced itself from what it means to be truly human. In a world where science and spirituality have ceased to complement each other in the search for meaning, we are still left pondering the questions: What is it to be truly human? Why is the world in the state it is? Why is there evil? Is our way of life the best one possible? What is the reality of higher worlds? And most importantly, what can be done to better ourselves and humanity?

All of these issues and questions occupied Laura's mind for her entire life. The story of how she came to embark on what has come to be known as "The Cassiopaean Experiment" is beautifully told in her book "Amazing Grace" which is no longer in print but is available in its entirety with updates on this website.

The Cassiopaean Experiment proper has been in process since summer of 1994 and is still ongoing. The experimenters refer to it as "superluminal communication" to avoid the negative connotations that have come to be associated with the word "channeling." Is it reasonable to say that ALL channeling is junk and nonsense? Well, the vast majority of channeled material IS nonsense. Most of it is either incomprehensible mumbo jumbo, word salad, or more clever deception and disinformation, combined with high sounding words aimed at keeping people deluded and in their current miserable and oppressed state.

Many years of research, experience, and constructive curiosity led to Laura's experiment in Superluminal Communication that eventually, after two years of experimentation and fine tuning, which included contacts with "dead dudes" (alleged discarnate entities) and deceptive sources posing as higher sources of knowledge, resulted in the Cassiopaean Transmissions. All these years the process has gone through refinement and adjusting all "instruments" for higher accuracy and facilitation of better communication. These communications ARE different from most other channeled information. It is "critical channeling" that discourages blind devotee-ism. The Cassiopeans themselves do not demand to be worshipped or deified in any way and, in fact, admonish against such an attitude toward them. They encourage researching and networking with others to verify the information they transmit and do not demand that anything be taken at face value without questions.

So much of what the Cassiopaean source – who identify themselves as Laura in the future – have communicated HAS been verified from a wide range of sources researched, including modern, scientific sources, as well as ancient traditions and sources. There remains much that can't be verified without more data, and some seems unlikely to be verified at our current level of understanding and "Being". However, even those things that have not yet been verified are given a marginally higher probability of being true, based on the track record of the source, and no final conclusions are drawn until more data becomes available to make that possible.

When considering "channeling", we are faced with the situation to be careful not to throw out the baby with the bathwater. There have been other pretty good sources of channeled material with a relatively high level of accuracy, such as the Ra entity in the Law of One books and also the sources of Bringers of the Dawn channeled by Barbara Marciniak. They may not be on the same level of accuracy and clarity as the Cassiopaean material, but they DO contain a considerable amount of accurate and useful information that is largely in agreement with the Cassiopaean transmissions. Therefore, we can posit that most who are open minded and sincere, as well as adventurous and curious, will agree that it is not reasonable to declare ALL channeled material as being nonsense and/or fraudulent. Whenever someone claims: “All white is black”, we should immediately suspect their motives and knowledge base. Not because white being black is impossible, (we know there are paradoxes), but because they use the word “all“.

After all, the old-time religions, particularly monotheistic ones, have imposed a ban on spiritual communications as being the “work of the devil” (and it CAN be, but doesn’t HAVE to be, not to take the word “devil” too literally) even though much of their own claims, creeds, practices, and beliefs were channeled from a self proclaimed “higher source”!

What if the Monotheistic religions are right? Even if we consider it as highly improbable, what if they ARE right? Can they be right?

Approaching the question with a scientific mind, we have to consider this possibility, however improbable it may appear to be, and we conclude that such a claim cannot be truth.

Let us reason via “reductio ad absurdum” — which is often used in logic and in mathematical proofs. You assume something to be true, and then by a chain of logical deductions you come to the conclusion that your assumption cannot be true. Somewhat tricky — but useful.

Applying this method to the claims of the monotheistic religions that all Spiritual Communication outside of their approved context is 100% “of the devil”, let us suppose it is true. In order to be true it must include ALL spiritual communication at ALL times.

But if that is the case, then why would the sources of the Monotheistic religions be exempt from this rule? Does their god make rules only to break them, and then claims to be the only authority underwriting his/her/its breaking of said rules with no yardstick by which to measure or evaluate such claims? That would be a god of confusion and instability.

Putting aside philosophical issues, it is easy to see that, by logic, the Monotheistic religions are also being influenced by spiritual communications that are “of the devil” (if everybody is, then so are they).

So we see that starting from the assumption that the Monotheistic religious claims are right (Spiritual communications are 100% of the devil) we come to the conclusion that what they say is wrong (because they are simply repeating the “lies of the devil”).

So, here we have reductio ad absurdum.

But we can go even further. Can we see a reason why the Monotheistic religions would propagate such evident nonsense? Why?

Well, here we can have a hypothesis too. If, as we know by the above analysis, NOT ALL spirit communication is from “the devil”, that SOME channeling can provide us with real information from “benevolent higher beings”, from “us in the future”, or from the Cosmic Mind, call it as you will, then it is only natural that there will be forces trying to discredit TRUE channeling.

So, we have solved one problem here and exposed another. Since the Mainstream Monotheistic religions describe channeling and other spirit communication as “of the devil,” and if they are right, or even partly right, then we have reasons to suppose that these institutions are themselves agents of those forces.

These Monotheistic monopolies, imposed on humanity by coercion, force and violence, should be rejected whether they are demanded in a religious/spiritual context or a corporate business context, or any other for that matter. No inherent right to monopolize anything should be recognized. On the contrary, any such demands should be regarded with suspicion, questioned, and rejected. No one can claim a monopoly on Truth and no one can claim ownership either.

The reader might wish to begin with The Wave Series. “The Wave” is a term used to describe a Macro-cosmic Quantum Wave Collapse producing both a physical and a “metaphysical” change to the Earth’s cosmic environment theorized to be statistically probable sometime in the early 21st century. This event is variously described by other sources as the planetary shift to 4th density, shift of the ages, the harvest etc., and is most often placed around the end of 2012. The Wave Series includes a UFO abduction account, a transcript of an actual hypnotic regression session, that refers to a global cataclysmic change. Please note that we do not, however, subscribe to the notion that such events can be exactly predicted as to whether or when they might occur. Quantum physics talks about statistical probabilities, not prophetic certainties.

The Wave series of articles demonstrates the unique nature of the Cassiopaean Experiment. In her skillful collecting of the pieces of the puzzle from throughout the transcripts, in-depth research, personal experiences, then weaving them into a finished product, Laura brings added depth and dimension to the original transmissions. Laura presents what the Cassiopaeans – We are YOU in the future – have to say about the eventuality of The Wave – FROM the future – including an exploration of the limitations of man’s present estate, in cognitive, biological, historical and ontological terms.

The publishing of the Cassiopaean communications in The Wave Series and the establishing of the network of dialogues among those interested in this material – later to become the Quantum Future Group – was followed almost immediately by numerous attacks on Ark and Laura from various individuals. These events led to intensive research into psychopathology, guided by the Cassiopaean source and the findings were added to The Wave series which is also ongoing. In the later chapters you will find in depth information on COINTELPRO and Secret Government projects, details about Nobel Prize Winner John Nash and Game Theory, Ira Einhorn and the creation of the New Age Counter Intelligence Program, Andrija Puharich, Alternative Three, Mind Control Research, the Philadelphia Experiment and the suicide of Morris Jessup, cyclical cataclysms, cometary impacts and meteorite showers, and most important of all: the problem of psychopaths in our society. Laura's compilations on the topic of Psychopathy is very popular which attests to the fact that psychopathy is epidemic in our times.

The research in psychopathology led to the realization that our world is ruled by psychopaths. This, then, led to the establishing of The Signs of the Times, an ongoing News Resource Project that is updated daily. Be sure to check it out for all the latest News, Current Events, and in-depth commentary by Quantum Future Group members. If you are interested in the events surrounding 9/11, you'll want to check out our American Coup d'état page, as well as Laura's book: 9/11 The Ultimate Truth.

The events of 9/11 have reshaped the political, social and cultural scene more than any event since the Second World War. We see the effects all around the world with greater and greater impediments to travel, "preemptive wars" that give the US the "right" to strike who they will when they will, and draconian laws that are said to target "terrorists" but which are aimed at local populations to better bring them under control. But to understand what is happening today, one needs the overview of human development that history provides. Laura's book, The Secret History of the World , is the most complete source for her research and analysis of history.

Laura and Ark continue to research the mysteries of life and the universe in their quest to understand the human condition. Join them… you'll be glad you did!

Art Weblog

Over 20 gigabytes currently online of information on alchemy in all its facets. Divided into over 2700 separate topics and providing tens of thousands of pages of text, over 5000 images, over 300 complete alchemical texts, extensive bibliographical material on the printed books and manuscripts, numerous articles, introductory and general reference material on alchemy. This is essentially a reference library on the topic of alchemy.

This site is organised by Adam McLean, the well known authority on alchemical texts and symbolism, author and publisher of over 100 books on alchemical and Hermetic ideas.

Alchemy is a complex subject with many different interconnected aspects. Many people still only think of the quest of the philosophers' stone to change base metals into gold. On this web site you will be able to explore the riches of alchemical texts, some of which are wonderful works of allegorical literature, delve into its amazing, beautiful and enigmatic symbolism, and ponder its underlying hermetic philosophy, which holds a picture of the interconnection of the Macrocosm and Microcosm.

This website is so complex and extensive that it can take some time to thoroughly explore all the sections. Clicking on the links in the menubar on the left or the buttons below will allow exploration of the major sections of the alchemy web site.

Adam McLean's translations of over 100 key alchemical books are available here

SERVICE RESTRICTION

The main IAPSOP server is being overrun by unknown crawlers running on IP addresses controlled by Amazon Web Services (AWS), crawlers with IP addresses in the People's Republic of China, and other miscreants, all of which are almost certainly collecting materials to train large language models (LLMs) -- so-called "artificial intelligence." To ensure equitable access, the speed of any one connection to the IAPSOP archive is currently throttled, and the total bandwidth available is also limited. We apologize for the inconvenience. Service will be restored to normal when the pigs leave the trough... which is likely never. Free "AI" costs IAPSOP, and many other organizations, quite a bit.

The IAPSOP is a US-based private organization focused on the digital preservation of Spiritualist and occult periodicals published between the Congress of Vienna and the start of the Second World War.

Our all-volunteer staff digitizes, indexes and makes available free-of-charge these periodicals, in our archive, for use by students and researchers.

We have a standing want list and will respond promptly to inquiries and offers from sellers.

We accept contributions of material and labor to further this work.

If you want a complete local copy of IAPSOP's holdings, follow these instructions.

If you know what you're looking for, hit the archive index directly.

If you want to explore a particular area of the occult, start with the lists below, prepared by IAPSOP's directors.

The Standard Spiritualist and Occult Corpus (SSOC)
The Standard Spiritualist and Occult Corpus (SSOC) is an open source text project, focused on book-length texts, in English, covering Spiritualism, the occult, New Thought and allied parasciences (mesmerism, magnetism, phrenology, alchemy, chiromancy and so forth) published between 1790 and 1940. Currently the SSOC consists of more than 8,000 book-length texts (approximately 2.1 million pages), and includes many of the texts considered "classics" in Spiritualism and the occult. Every text in the SSOC is supplied, free of charge, in indexed PDF form, allowing it to be electronically stored, searched, printed and converted (to image, HTML or text). The outer, later bound of the corpus is limited by copyright law.

The intent behind this project is to provide, at low cost, a more or less complete document database of important primary book-length materials to all academic and non-academic researchers, aficionados, and readers interested in Spiritualism, the occult and allied parasciences.

The SSOC is a curated project, with regular releases of texts, and plans for the inclusion of non-textual material related to Spiritualism, the occult and allied parasciences.

The SSOC can be used as a library: texts can be drawn from it on an ad hoc basis. But, by design, the SSOC is a database, structured to sit underneath a full-text retrieval engine (like Windows Search, OS X Spotlight, Foxtrot, Copernic or X Search) to enable researchers, aficionados and readers to find all relevant materials on a particular topic at local search engine speeds, and draw materials from an owned local copy of the SSOC.

The SSOC is also suitable for use as the basis for text processing applications -- named-entity recognition tools, social network analysis tools, lexical analysis tools -- that can consume either PDF files or the text or HTML files that PDFs can produce. Some text processing projects -- named entity extraction and the production of high-fidelity machine-readable text versions of the SSOC documents -- are planned by the SSOC team; please coordinate your work with the team so that there's minimal duplication of effort.

Additionally, an online search engine that searches ONLY the SSOC corpus is effectively available, via Google, using the "site:iapsop.com/ssoc/" argument in a Google Search, as in the example below.

This option may be suitable for occasional users who are interested in pinpointing a selection of texts to download, but is not intended as a substitute for an owned local copy of the entire SSOC.

You can also use the Search option in the top bar of this page to access a search facility that can be made SSOC-specific.

Access to the SSOC has additional benefits, including the ability to check others' citations and re-establish the context lost through conventional citational apparatus easily, as well as the ability to fact-check and test assertions made about aspects of Spiritualist, occult and parascientific discourse between the end of the eighteenth century and the start of the Second World War.

If you have questions that are not answered by the material provided, if you find a bug in the SSOC distribution, if you have concerns or issues with the corpus, or if you have book length primary material to contribute to the SSOC, feel free to contact the SSOC maintenance team at ssoc@iapsop.com.

“The occult library isn’t about borrowing books—it’s about exploring, preserving, and sharing knowledge in all its forms.”
Welcome to The Occult Library—your volunteer-run, nonprofit hub for all things occult, from books and art, to movies, TV shows, podcasts, and more. We maintain an ever-expanding catalog of active and retired publishers, authors, artists, bookstores, artisans, and beyond. Please note we do not offer reading facilities; instead, our goal is to serve as a central resource for discovering and researching occult materials. We’re continuously growing and adding new features, so be sure to subscribe to our email list to stay informed and be among the first to explore our latest offerings.

The Occult Library is a free, volunteer-managed resource committed to sharing accurate, up-to-date information. We gather content from publisher and author websites, direct correspondence, staff research and photography, and occasional online searches. If you own any image or text included here and wish to request its removal or proper attribution, please contact us, and we’ll respond promptly.

Please note: a page’s presence in The Occult Library does not imply it is complete. Each entry is a living document that may be updated at any time. If you’re a content creator—author, artist, publisher, or channel creator—and want to correct or update your entry, please get in touch.

2,178 Occult Books Now Digitized & Put Online, Thanks to the Ritman Library and Da Vinci Code Author Dan Brown

In 2018 we brought you some exciting news. Thanks to a generous donation from Da Vinci Code author Dan Brown, Amsterdam's Ritman Library—a sizable collection of pre-1900 books on alchemy, astrology, magic, and other occult subjects—has been digitizing thousands of its rare texts under a digital education project cheekily called "Hermetically Open." We are now pleased to report that the first 2,178 books from the Ritman project have come available in their online reading room.

Visitors should be aware that these books are written in several different European languages. Latin, the scholarly language of Europe throughout the Medieval and Early Modern periods, predominates, and it's a peculiar Latin at that, laden with jargon and alchemical terminology. Other books appear in German, Dutch, and French. Readers of some or all of these languages will of course have an easier time than monolingual English speakers, but there is still much to offer those visitors as well.

In addition to the pleasure of paging through an old rare book, even virtually, English speakers can quickly find a collection of readable books by clicking on the "Place of Publication" search filter and selecting Cambridge or London, from which come such notable works as The Man-Mouse Takin in a Trap, and tortur'd to death for gnawing the Margins of Eugenius Philalethes, by Thomas Vaughan, published in 1650.

The language is archaic—full of quirky spellings and uses of the "long s"—and the content is bizarre. Those familiar with this type of writing, whether through historical study or the work of more recent interpreters like Aleister Crowley or Madame Blavatsky, will recognize the many formulas: The tracing of magical correspondences between flora, fauna, and astronomical phenomena; the careful parsing of names; astrology and lengthy linguistic etymologies; numerological discourses and philosophical poetry; early psychology and personality typing; cryptic, coded mythology and medical procedures. Although we've grown accustomed through popular media to thinking of magical books as cookbooks, full of recipes and incantations, the reality is far different.

Encountering the vast and strange treasures in the online library, one thinks of the type of the magician represented in Goethe's Faust, holed up in his study,

Where even the welcome daylight strains
But duskily through the painted panes.
Hemmed in by many a toppling heap
Of books worm-eaten, gray with dust,
Which to the vaulted ceiling creep

The library doesn't only contain occult books. Like the weary scholar Faust, alchemists of old "studied now Philosophy / And Jurisprudence, Medicine,— / And even, alas! Theology." Click on Cambridge as the place of publication and you'll find the work above by Henry More, "one of the celebrated 'Cambridge Platonists,'" the Linda Hall Library notes, "who flourished in mid-17th-century and did their best to reconcile Plato with Christianity and the mechanical philosophy that was beginning to make inroads into British natural philosophy." Those who study European intellectual history know well that More's presence in this collection is no anomaly. For a few hundred years, it was difficult, if not impossible, to separate the pursuits of theology, philosophy, medicine, and science (or "natural philosophy") from those of alchemy and astrology. (Isaac Newton is a famous example of a mathematician/scientist/alchemist/believer in strange apocalyptic predictions.) Enter the Ritman's new digital collection of occult texts here.

Uh oh… StyxHexenHammer666 just felt a great disturbance in the Force, as if thousands of occult PDFs suddenly cried out… and then were downloaded for free.

I wonder if ancient texts in Asia are preserved by digitization. There are magazine, newsletter and newspaper articles that at times have paranormal content.
